BRIDE-ELECT OF THE CROWN PRINCE TRIUMPHANTLY ENTERS BERLIN

Pageant of Medieval Magnificence Marks the Arrival in the German Capital of the Duchess Cecilia, Who Will Wed the Future Emperor Tuesday and Flower-Strewn Streets Are Crowded by Populace Taking a Holiday to Pay Homage.

BERLIN, June 3.—Just after noon today a fine-looking girl of 18 years arrived in Berlin on a special train, and was welcomed with such exuberant enthusiasm that her cheeks flushed with joy.

The first to greet her was the Kaiser. Eager in his expectancy was the Crown Prince, his eyes glistening and his face all smiles, for the girl is his promised bride, the Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

BERLIN, June 3.—The wedding of the German Crown Prince and Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin takes place next Tuesday. In accordance with old-established custom the ceremony will be conducted in the private chapel of the royal palace, and the only feature of the whole proceeding in which the public participates was the entry of the bride-elect into the city today.

For this no effort nor expense was spared to give the future Empress a hearty welcome. An appropriation of $37,500 was made by the City Council for the decorations, which were placed in the hands of well-known artists and architects.

The original plans were altered by the Kaiser, who gave the watchword of simplicity. Beyond the erection of flagstaffs and supporting columns, little was done except to show up the natural beauty of the route of the bridal procession.

The Duchess left Schwerin this morning accompanied by her mother (whose reception was awaited with some curiosity as it was notorious that she had been upsetting the Kaiser's plans in every direction), her brother and sister-in-law the reigning Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and her sister and brother-in-law, Prince and Princess Christian of Denmark.

At Wittenberge, just over the Prussian frontier, the Duchess and her mother left the train and with the court dignitaries and the household of the future Crown Princess, continued the journey to Berlin in a Prussian special train.

She was awaited at Bellevue Palace by the Emperor, Empress, Crown Prince, all the latter's brothers and his sister, Princess Victoria Louise.

At 1 o'clock there was a quiet family luncheon, after which the Duchess retired to prepare for her public entry, and the whole imperial family, with the exception of the Empress, returned to the royal palace.

The bridal procession started from Bellevue Palace at 5 p. m. At its head rode a squadron of the First Regiment of Dragoons, led by a corps of trumpeters. Three grand court carriages, each drawn by six horses, and containing the high court dignitaries in attendance, followed. The Empress and the future Crown Princess, escorted as a guard of honor by a squadron of the famous Gardes du Corps, were next in a coach.

The Grand Duchess Anastasie was excluded by request of the Empress and was, therefore, not in the procession at all.

The gorgeous bridal coach, built at Strassburg in 1789, was first used for public entry into Berlin of the Princess Louise of Mecklenburg, afterwards Queen Louise, whose memory is so much reverenced by Prussians, on the occasion of her marriage to Crown Prince, afterwards King Friederich Wilhelm III. It was drawn today by eight black horses. By the head of each walked a royal groom in full red livery and three-cornered hat and there were two outriders in blue livery.

The Duchess occupied the right-hand seat, the Empress the left, and Frau von Tieblanker, the bride's mistress of robes, sat alone with her back to the horses. On the right of the carriage rode Count von Widel, the Kaiser's master of the horse, and General Field Marshal von Hahnke, Military Governor of Hanover. On the left rode Major-General Hoyer von Rotenheim, military commander of the city and Herr von Berries, President of the Berlin police.

Royal pages of high aristocratic birth stood on the steps usually occupied by men servants. Behind the escort followed two more carriages, each drawn by six horses, with the ladies of the suite of the Empress and of the Duchess Cecilia. The procession closed with a squadron of the Second Uhlan Guards.

The route was down Bellevue allee, through the old Thiergarten, on either side of which, for most of the way, magnificent trees meet overhead, backed by the thickly wooded park, with its well-kept lawn.

At the Kleine Stern the route turned into Charlottenburger chaussee, an exceedingly fine asphalted road leading in almost a straight line from Berlin to Charlottenburg, which the Kaiser intends one day shall be continued to Doberitz, where the Berlin garrison has its maneuvering ground.

Here the procession was joined by 40 mail-cart drivers, modern representatives of the postillions who fulfilled such important duty in the days when mail coaches were the only means of travel. They paraded all that remains of their former glory—round, shiny, black bowler hats, with a fierce bunch of cockstail feathers, and old-fashioned brass post horns slung over their shoulders; otherwise they wore ordinary postmen's uniforms.

They took the head of the procession and announced its approach with fanfares on their horns. Members of the Berlin Butchers' Guild joined here by virtue of a privilege granted in the Middle Ages for services rendered to the reigning house in rescuing a princess who was captured by marauders.

About 120 master butchers and some dozen apprentices had been diligently taking riding lessons for weeks.

Their riding costume was evening dress and top hats, and they rode very quiet horses.

Butchers as Escort.

Preceded by their banner, the butchers took their place on either side of the Duchess' state carriage and accompanied her as far as the royal palace.

The first part of the route was lined only by school children, 6000 of whom were drawn up under the care of teachers. The remainder of the route was lined by many thousands of persons belonging to various associations and the general public.

As she reached the Brandenburger thor, which marks the boundary of the city proper, the Duchess was greeted by a salute of 24 cannon and on passing through she was received by representatives of the city.

She was approached first by 100 maids of honor, all dressed alike in white, with chaplets of red roses in their hair, who handed her a bouquet. The Chief Burgomaster of the city, Dr. Kirschner, then delivered an official address of welcome, which at the Kaiser's special request was very brief. This was the last halt, and the procession passed on to the palace.

Inhabitants of houses in Unter den Linden reaped a grand harvest, $15 or $20 being paid willingly for a place at a window, while large sums were also paid for the privilege of standing on the roofs. The prevailing decorations are red roses, and the Municipal Decoration Committee alone ordered 80,000 artificial ones. Each side of the entire route is festooned and hung with flags and streamers in the German, Prussian and Mecklenburg colors.

On arrival at the royal palace at 5:45 the Duchess was received by the Kaiser, the Crown Prince, the Princes of her immediate family, her relatives, the wedding guests, the chiefs of the army and navy, the Imperial Chancellor, all the knights of the Order of the Black Eagle, the ministers of state and the Presidents of the Reichstag and Prussian Diet.

The marriage contracts and settlements were then signed and sealed. A family dinner in the Elizabeth Hall at 6:45 ended the day's proceedings, the Duchess returning with her mother to Bellevue Palace.

At 9 a. m. tomorrow the Crown Prince and Duchess Cecilia will attend services in the new Protestant Cathedral, accompanied by all the members of the two families, the chief wedding guests and brilliant suites. This custom in Prussia, from time immemorial, has been observed on the Sunday morning after the wedding, but, as the Crown Prince insists on departing for the honeymoon immediately after the marriage ceremonies, the Kaiser ordered that, in this case, it shall take place on the last Sunday before the wedding.

At 8 p. m. tomorrow there will be a grand banquet in the famous white hall of the royal palace, when the Kaiser will entertain the wedding guests and their suites. At 9:30 o'clock there will be a torchlight procession organized by the students of the Berlin University. On Monday, the betrothed couple will receive deputations with congratulations from the provinces. At 6:30 there will be another family dinner, and at 8 a gala performance at the royal opera. The Crown Prince has chosen the piece, but the public has not been informed what it is. This event will be most brilliant; the guests will have to appear in full dress, wearing all their decorations. The Kaiser will sit in an arm chair slightly in front of anybody else, with the future Crown Princess in a similar arm chair on his right.

At 4:30 p. m., Tuesday, the civil marriage will take place in the hall of the electors, in the royal palace, in the presence only of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties, and at 5 o'clock the religious ceremony will be performed in the palace chapel by the chief court preacher, Dr. Dryander, witnessed by distinguished wedding guests, many important officials and other state dignitaries. After the marriage ceremony the newly-wedded couple will hold a reception in the white hall. A stand-up supper and torch dance in the white hall will follow, all festivities being ended by 9 o'clock.

The foreign guests have brought such numerous suites, with innumerable servants, and so many visitors have engaged rooms that there is not a bed to be obtained in the Berlin hotels. Even princely personages have been turned away, a circumstance that never occurred in Berlin before.

By the curious irony of fate, the representatives of the Mikado, Prince and Princess Arisugawa, and the representative of the Czar, Grand Duke Nicholas Michaelovitch, are lodged under the same roof in the Hotel Bristol.

The marvelous embroidered train to be worn by the Duchess Cecilia for the court before marriage is of rose pink velvet, with heavily embossed raised design in silver thread of admirable workmanship. It will be worn over a white gauze dress, lightly embroidered also with silver thread, with the waist defined by similar embroidery on pink satin.

The Kaiserin will wear a silver cloth train over a pale lilac gauze gown.

Bridemaids' Costumes.

For the marriage ceremony, the bridemaids will wear pale blue satin trains, embroidered with marguerites, encrusted lace motifs and velvet ribbon of Louis XVI style. Their undergowns will be pale blue mousseline, with lace entredeux style, very simple and girlish.

For royal entry into Berlin the bride's gown was rose-colored mousseline, with lovely embroidery of roses, ribbons in garlands upon encrustation point, d'angleterre, train and corsage in rose liberty satin, with very full ruche gauze of the same tone. A short mantelet was worn with this gown.

For the gala performance, her hortensia colored gauze skirt is very full, trimmed with three wide rows of velvet, over which falls a deep fringe of silver paillettes intersected by deep sprays of roses, embroidered in relief. The corsage is of gauze with velvet ribbon of embroidered roses.

For the religious ceremony the Duchess will wear pale blue gauze, very ample, with a deep border of Greek pattern of old lace, a long train of pale blue liberty satin, intersected with long lines of gauze draperies. Her ball gown is of white tulle, embroidered richly in Louis XVI design, with velvet bows and wreaths of roses. The skirt is hemmed with a deep band of white velvet paillete. The draped corsage and long train are of liberty satin paillette, with a deep hem of velvet.

Among the 30 and more dresses manufactured in Paris as a part of the trousseau the most magnificent are the following:

A magnificent lace costume, ornamented with embroidered flowers applied all over the lace.

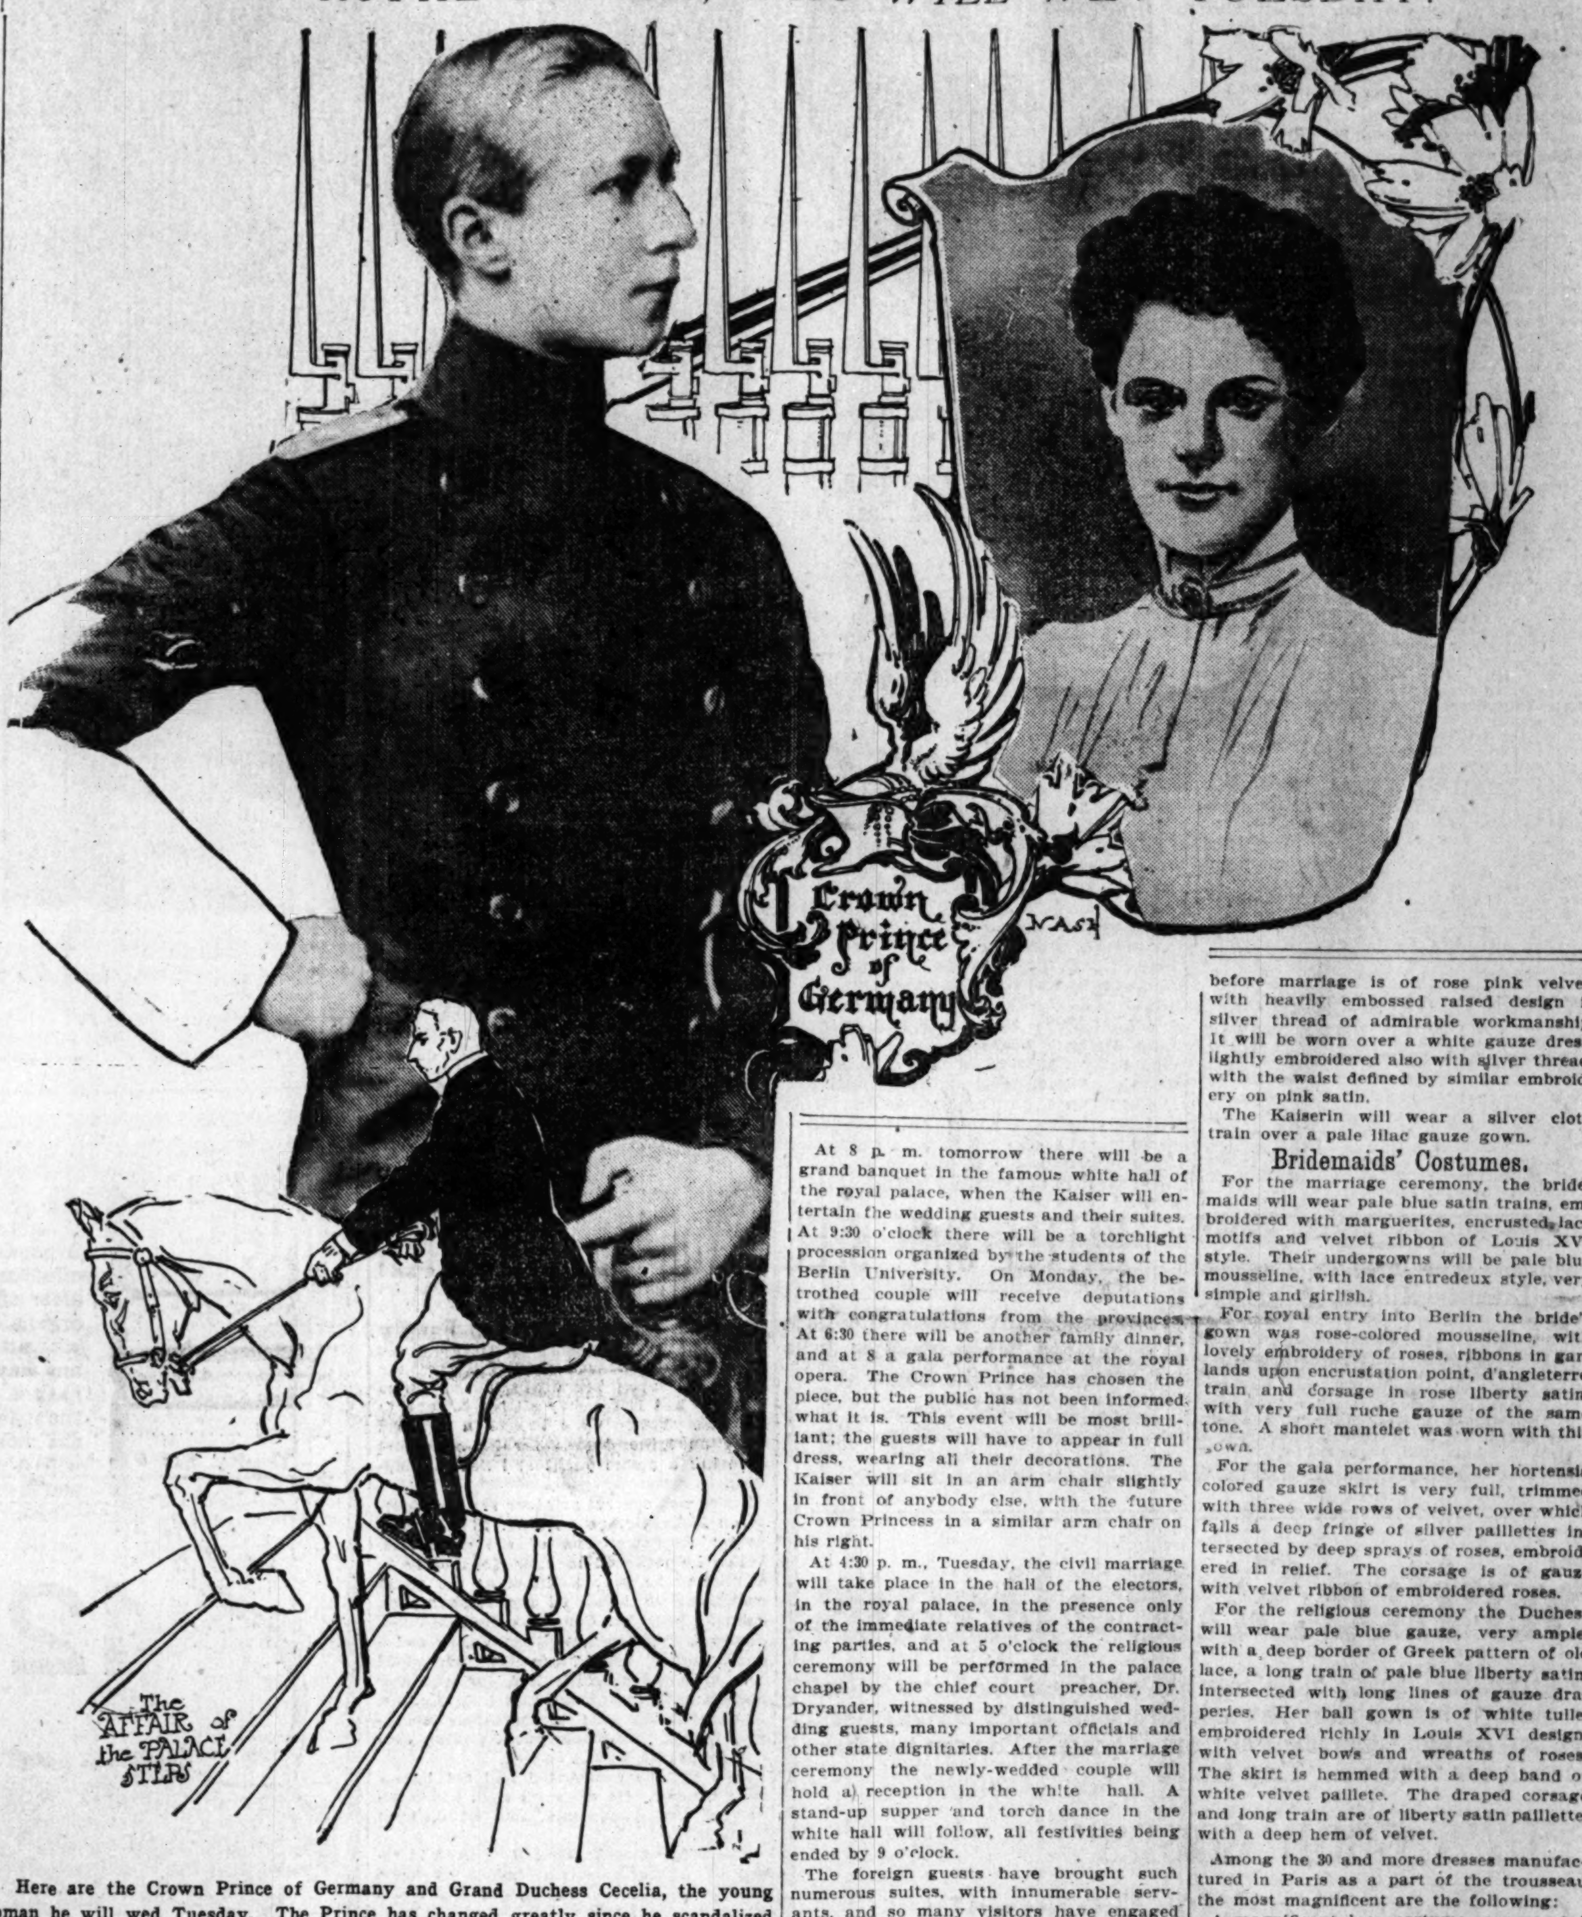
A white linen costume with lace corsage, ornamented with embroidered fleurs-de-lis.

A black lace costume applied to white silk lining and ornamented with white valenciennes lace and amber taffeta ornaments.

A check suit, ornamented with red ribbons and white lace.

A blue suit of mousseline de soie, ornamented with velvet and alencon laces.

THE ROYAL LOVERS, WHO WILL WED TUESDAY.



Crown Prince of Germany
NASH
The AFFAIR of the PALACE STEPS

Here are the Crown Prince of Germany and Grand Duchess Cecelia, the young woman he will wed Tuesday. The Prince has changed greatly since he scandalized his dignified father a short time ago by riding a horse up the steps of the palace at Potsdam. He has become very sedate and is now said to be all that a good husband should be.

Duchess Anastasia, Who Has Snubbed the Kaiser Frequently During the Royal Courtship, Prevented From Riding in Parade by Empress' Orders.

A white silk dress, ornamented with white lace, which is intended as the last girlish dress of the Duchess and will be worn just immediately before the wedding day.

All the dresses were fitted on the young Princess at Cannes, and it is said that so much was the care taken by the makers that they did not need any readjustment and thus saved the Princess much unnecessary fatigue.

Besides, the young Princess has been furnished with a complete trousseau in Schwerin and numerous gifts in the shape of dresses and furs.

After the presents from the families of the bride and bridegroom, particulars of which have not been made public, one of the most important is that subscribed by 300 Prussian towns. This consists of a fine silver table service, and includes a centerpiece, dessert stands, candelabra and other table decorations, all of solid silver, designed by eminent artists. Only plaster casts are on view, for it is calculated that the articles will take years to complete. They cost over $100,000.

The present of the free city of Hamburg takes the form of a miniature barge, such as carry fruit and vegetables in the Elbe. It is made of massive silver, 4 feet 7 inches long by 2 feet 3 inches wide. On the deck on either side of the mast are arranged 62 fruit baskets, exact copies of the willow baskets used by the country people to carry their supplies. They are so made that they can be taken out and handed around. On the bow stands a model of a Vierland peasant, bareheaded, wearing the picturesque costume of his people, in the attitude of urging his barge forward with a long "staken." Behind the baskets sits a Vierland peasant woman weaving a wreath of flowers, and steering is a young peasant girl.

Another beautiful present was given by the Province of Saxony, a massive candelabra three feet high, containing over 100 weight of silver, in the form of a female figure, with drapery, richly inlaid with gold.

Cardinal Kopp, Bishop of Breslau, has been delegated to represent the Pope at the marriage. He will present to the bridegroom an autograph Latin letter from Pius X conveying his blessings and best wishes and a special gift sent from the Vatican. It is said to be a magnificent specimen of mosaic work from the Vatican manufactory, representing th transfiguration.

The princely couple will spend their honeymoon in Italy, sojourning for a week at Naples, and, after that, at Taormina, in Sicily, where the furniture sent from Germany for the recent imperial visit has been left on purpose. It is possible that before their return to Germany they will pay a visit to Rome and the Vatican, on which occasion they will certainly be received by the Pope.

On her marriage the Duchess comes under the disciplinary power of the Kaiser, as head of the family. Among other powers, he has the right to compel her to live always within the bounds of his dominions, and even to restrict her to definite localities. He has also the right to supervise the education of her children.

The Crown Princess has a definite income assured her by the marriage settlement and over this her husband has no control whatever; in case she becomes a widow, she is promised by the marriage contract "a dwelling in Berlin, corresponding with her rank and position, and fully furnished."

She would also be provided in such circumstances with necessary silver, copper and tin cooking and household vessels, linen, bedding, a suitable carriage and six horses with proper harness, all to be taken from the property left by her husband.

Should the Crown Princess die before her husband and without leaving any children, her marriage portion goes to her father's family; should she leave children, everything she possesses goes to them. The Crown Princess is permitted by the marriage contract to make a will. She can dispose of any private property, except her marriage portion, with asking the sanction of her royal father-in-law.

"GREAT NAVY A PAYING INVESTMENT," SAYS CHAS. J. BONAPART, THE NEW SECRETARY

Grand-Nephew of the Great Napoleon, Who, in a Few Days, Will Enter the Cabinet, Declares He Sympathizes Heartily With the President's Views—He Knows Nothing About Naval Affairs and Has Never Crossed the Ocean Even to View the Scenes Amid Which His Family Rose to World Power.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Charles Jerome Bonaparte of Baltimore, the grandson of a king and the grand-nephew of the greatest of French Emperors—who is in a few days to enter President Roosevelt's Cabinet as Secretary of the Navy—sat in his splendid country house overlooking one of Maryland's greenest valleys, and uttered his thoughts about the sea power of America.

He did not speak. He is too careful of his words for that. But he wrote, stopping occasionally to rub out and rewrite his words; for there is no trace in this son of the Bonaparte family of the fire and dash that carried the steel of conquering France across to Moscow.

Not that Mr. Bonaparte was unwilling to deliver himself through a newspaper—that agent of democratic civilization so heartily cursed by his ancestors—but, being a lawyer and a man of extremely cautious temperament, he would not trust himself to discuss a great American navy viva voce. Here is what the new Secretary of the Navy wrote for the Post-Dispatch:

"I sympathize heartily with the President's policy of building up and maintaining a very strong and very efficient navy; if I did not, I could not accept the position he has tendered me.

"I mean by a very strong navy, one able to hold its own in any combination of circumstances which can be reasonably anticipated; and by a very efficient navy, one ready at any moment to do whatever work the country may demand of it, and to do this work as well as it can be done.

"Economy is eminently desirable in every department of the government in the sense that it is a breach of trust on the part of public officers to let public money be wasted; but, if we wish a good thing, we must be ready to pay for it, and the cost of a navy which will thoroughly protect the country's interests and insure the country's safety, whatever may betide us, will be, in my humble judgment, a very paying investment."

"Do you see any danger of promoting militarism among the American people through an increase of the navy?"

"I am not affected by any such fears."

"President Roosevelt has declared that there is a plain lesson to be read in the results of the recent naval battle in Asia. What lesson do you see?"

"I am not prepared to discuss questions which are within the province of experts; but it is certainly clear, so clear as to admit of no doubt or dispute among reasonable men, that very careful preparation for war in time of peace is now indispensable.

"An efficient navy cannot be improvised nowadays; it is the fruit of years of foresight and vigilance; and the nation unwilling to pay this price for it must not complain if its improvidence and levity lead to a great catastrophe attended by enormous loss and appalling slaughter."

There is little of the great Napoleon to be seen in the face or frame of his American grand-nephew. The conqueror of continental Europe was short. Mr. Bonaparte is tall. The Emperor had a pale oval face, a thin nose and a delicately curved jaw. Mr. Bonaparte's countenance is square, rosy, heavy-jawed, broad-chinned. There is something Napoleonic in the suggestion of the full brow and the cavity about the eyes. The nose, too, has the Napoleonic curve. But altogether, Mr. Bonaparte of Baltimore is unlike the Bonapartes of France.

Mr. Bonaparte speaks slowly and in a deep voice. He hesitates at words and sometimes finishes a sentence with the wave of a plump hand and involuntary chuckle.

"It is something of an omen that the grandson of a king should go into the Cabinet of President Roosevelt," said a visitor.

"Well—ha, ha—there may be persons—ha, ha—who attach importance to that sort of thing, but—ha, ha—I don't pay much attention to—ha, ha, ha"— and a gesture of the [illegible]

GRAND-NEPHEW OF NAPOLEON I.

Charles Joseph Bonaparte is a distinguished lawyer of the Baltimore bar.

He was born in Baltimore June 9, 1851, and was graduated at Harvard Law School in 1874.

He is a grandson of Jerome Bonaparte, youngest brother of Napoleon, Emperor of France.

In 1803, Jerome Bonaparte, during a visit to the United States, married Elizabeth Patterson, daughter of a wealthy merchant of Baltimore. Of this union one son was born, Jerome Napoleon, in 1805. The Emperor declared this marriage void, but Pius VII refused to dissolve it. In 1807, Jerome was created King of Westphalia and married Catherine Frederica, Princess of Wurtemburg.

When Napoleon III mounted the throne, the Imperial Council decreed that a son of "Mme. Elizabeth Patterson" was entitled to the name of Bonaparte, and that he was a legitimate child of France. This son, Jerome Napoleon, was noted for his remarkable likeness to the Emperor. He was on terms of intimacy with his father, the King, and the French court.

His inherited fortune made him one of the richest residents of Baltimore. He married Miss Williams of Roxbury, Mass., despite his mother's wish that he wed a daughter of Joseph Bonaparte. Two sons were born to them—Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte Jr. and Charles Joseph Bonaparte. Jerome Bonaparte Jr. served with distinction in the French Army in the Crimea, Algeria and Italy. He died in Baltimore in 1893.

Charles J. Bonaparte has never visited Europe and has been content to remain a plain American citizen.

The truth is that Mr. Bonaparte does not ordinarily care to discuss his blood descent from royalty.

"I am a native American," he said the other day, "and my blood is thoroughly Americanized."

It is a singular thing that Mr. Bonaparte, although he is 54 years old and a man of great wealth and culture, has never seen Corsica, where his family was founded, nor has he ever visited France, where the great Napoleon lies under the gilded dome of the Invalides. He has never been in any part of Europe. His elder brother went back to France and served in the French army, but the new Secretary of the Navy has never shown the slightest desire to look on the scenes where his family rose to world-power and renown.

As Mr. Bonaparte sat at his desk writing his opinion of the nation's naval policy, spectacled, black-coated and white-vested, he betrayed the old-fashioned, prim and set character by which he is known in Baltimore. He kept the candle on the right side of him, although it cast shadows over his written work. He rubbed out words laboriously, although he might have crossed them with a stroke of his pencil.

He knows practically nothing about the navy or naval affairs, although he has had some practice in admiralty laws. But many other secretaries of the navy have been lawyers innocent of nautical knowledge. It is said in Baltimore that President Roosevelt will eventually make Mr. Bonaparte Attorney-General. The President has made no secret of his admiration for the qualities shown by Mr. Bonaparte in tracing out the postal frauds.

Mr. Bonaparte's grandfather, Jerome Bonaparte, the younger brother of Napoleon I, was an officer in the French navy. In 1803, he visited Baltimore and fell in love with Miss Elizabeth Patterson, the daughter of an Irish shipowner. Mr. Patterson was the richest man in Baltimore. Jerome was 19 years old and she but 18. They fell in love. Jerome proposed marriage, but Mr. Patterson was unwilling and sent his daughter away from Maryland. Jerome persisted and finally married the young heiress.

Napoleon was furious, and ordered his brother to leave his bride and come home. He declared that she would never be allowed to enter France. Jerome refused to obtain the Emperor's pardon by deserting his wife, and, for two years, the couple lived happily together in America. But in March, 1805, they sailed for Lisbon on one of Mr. Patterson's ships. A French ship prevented Mrs. Bonaparte from landing. Jerome at once went to Paris and appealed to Napoleon. Mme. Bonaparte went to Holland by ship, but was prevented from landing in Amsterdam by men-of-war. She went to England, was received by a great crowd, a regiment of soldiers being present to preserve order.

His Grandfather's Divorce.

In England, Mme. Bonaparte gave birth to Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, the father of the Secretary of the Navy.

Napoleon failed to induce the Pope to dissolve his brother's marriage. He thereupon compelled the Imperial Council of State to issue a decree of divorce. Then Jerome married the Princess Catherine Frederica, daughter of the King of Wurtemburg. In that same year, 1807, he ascended the throne of Westphalia and wore the crown until 1813.

Mme. Bonaparte returned with her son to America. Again and again she tried to secure some action recognizing her son in France. She was a remarkable woman, of great determination, courage and energy. When she died in Baltimore, at an advanced age, she was said to be the best business woman in America. Finally, under Napoleon III, the French Government recognized the child, in spite of Jerome's efforts to prevent it.

Charles Jerome Bonaparte is the younger of two sons born to this child. He first saw the light in Baltimore on June 9, 1851. He was carefully educated, and graduated from Harvard University in 1871. About the time when his final examinations were in sight, Mr. Bonaparte planned a trip around the world. Just then his father died and he was called upon to assume charge of the family estate. His brother was in France; that country was in the confusion caused by the Franco-Prussian War, and so Mr. Bonaparte abandoned his plan of travel. He has never crossed the ocean. In 1874, Mr. Bonaparte graduated from the Harvard Law School and took up the practice of law in Baltimore. He married Miss Ellen Channing Day of Newport, R. I. He has no children.

CHURCH BAR ON BANNS COST HER A BIG FORTUNE

Episcopal Chaplain Refused to Marry James F. Thomsen and Edna Little Because the Man Had Been Divorced.

WEALTHY NEW YORKER'S DEATHBED PETITION.

Wished to Be Joined to the Woman for Whose Musical Education He Had Paid That She Might Be His Heir.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The rules of the Episcopal Church, forbidding the marriage of divorced persons, cost Miss Edna Allys Little $1,000,000.

She was the fiance of James Fitch Thomsen, who died of typhoid at Bellevue Hospital.

Upon his deathbed the man whose fortune had just been made asked to be married to the beautiful young woman, but the Rev. Mr. Dyer, the Episcopal chaplain, refused to perform the ceremony because Thomsen had been divorced.

The man died single and the woman he loved will have no share in his estate.

Miss Little was one of the mourners when funeral services over the remains of Thomsen were held at St. George's Episcopal Church.

She sat by the side of Miss Lizzie Thomsen, sister of the deceased, who came here to take charge of the body, and accompanied it to Toronto last night.

Just before his last illness Mr. Thomsen, who had made and lost several fortunes, successfully organized the American Dry Yeast Co., with a capital of $10,000,000. His profits from this venture approximated $1,000,000, but he died without receivnig it. This money now goes to his estate.

Following the funeral services Miss Little returned to her home.

"Mr. Thomsen and I were to have been married in June," she said. "Then when he believed his illness to be fatal, he requested that we be married at once.

"The report that Mr. Thomsen was delirious when Chaplain Dyer was requested to marry us is not true.

"It was Mr. Thomsen, and not I, who made the request.

"I met Mr. Thomsen eight years ago in Philadelphia. I accompanied him in one of his songs and he became struck with my performance on the piano.

" 'You have great talent,' he told me.

"Following that, he helped me through my musical education and aided me to begin my work as a teacher, a concert pianist and accompanist.

"From the start we had a deep regard for each other, but he was married and had two children of whom he was very fond.

"Last March his wife secured a divorce and the custody of the children, and on the same day became the wife of Harry Nealy, a Philadelphia newspaper man.

"When Mr. Thomsen was taken to Bellevue he was first put in the alcoholic ward. When it was found he had not been drinking, he was moved to the erysipelas ward, and finally the physician diagnosed his case as typhoid fever.

"Up to the very last he had moments of consciousness, and, although it was his last request to marry me, the chaplain denied him the privilege to call me wife.

"The record of Mr. Thomsen's life is the record of continuous struggle, of hard knocks bravely borne, and of quick recovery from disaster of every kind.

"From the time I knew him he was never a well man, but his ill health was no check to his energy. He was born in a little Canadian town 50 years ago, going to Toronto as a boy, where he made much money in real estate.

"He was an able musician and was at one time urged to go into grand opera. He promoted several musical enterprises.

"Dr. Leopold Damrosch went to Canada under his management and so did Christine Nilsson. He lost money in these ventures. He was always making fortunes and losing them.

"It is true that his incessant labor finally accumulated for him a vast fortune, but there is the one sad feature that he did not live to enjoy the reward."

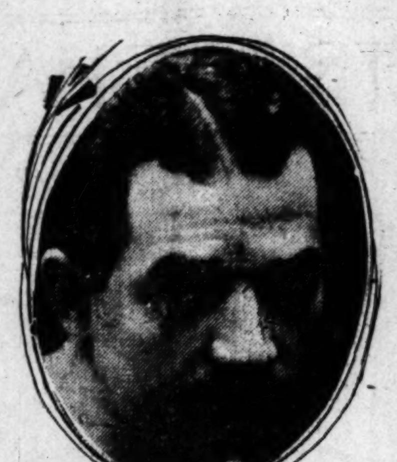
WOMEN IN CRINOLINES STARTLE EVEN PARIS.

PARIS, June 3.—The dreaded crinoline has already made a timid appearance, several women of certain elegance venturing to confront the mocking world at Chantilly in bell-like lower garments. The jeers of small boys and the supercilious gaze of friends led one to beat an early retreat, but the others brazened it out, and soon ceased to attract attention.

Pugilist "Kid McCoy" Will Wed a Beautiful Widow Who Has $5,000,000 in Her Own Right



NORMAN SELBY. (KID McCOY)

Mrs. Edward Ellis.

Mrs. Lillian Earle Ellis, Who Will Be the Fighter's Third Wife, Declares She Is Very Happy—Rich Husband Died Last August.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Pugilist "Kid McCoy" is going to marry Lillian Earle Ellis, widow of Edward C. Ellis and possessor of a fortune estimated at between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000.

"The date has not yet been set for our wedding," said Mrs. Ellis today to a Post-Dispatch reporter in the presence of "Kid McCoy" in her apartment in the Hotel Dunlop, 149 West Forty-fourth street. "We are very happy, but our plans have not been settled."

This marriage will furnish the climax of a series of romances, a climax such as no novelist would dare to write, because every one would scoff at it as impossible. Many critics have laughed at Bernard Shaw because he dared to marry his pugilist-hero, Cashel Byron, to the beautiful Lydia Carew, who had $200,000 a year.

Lillian Estelle Earle was the intimate friend of Julia Selby, the first wife of "Kid McCoy," whose real name is Norman Selby. Miss Earle in the summer of 1902 visited Mrs. Selby at Cedar Bluff, Kid McCoy's farm on Saratoga Lake. Also staying at the farm, which McCoy was running as a sort of athletic sanitarium for overworked and overplayed men, was Edward C. Ellis of Schenectady, son of Edward Ellis and grandson of the late John Ellis, who founded the locomotive works at Schenectady, N. Y., and established the family fortune. Young Ellis was coxswain of his class crew (1896) at Yale and a substitute quarter-back on the football team.

Wearied by too much strenuous life young Ellis tried to rebuild his health at McCoy's farm. He exercised too much and came down with typhoid fever. Miss Earle became his nurse. Thanks to her incessant care, the young millionaire recovered his health. Ellis and Miss Earle were married on Aug. 5, 1902, by the Rev. Herbert M. Gesner of Saratoga.

From that moment young Ellis ceased his strenuous gayety. He was a model husband, devoted to his blue-eyed, fair-haired wife. He did not inform his mother of the marriage for some months, but the elder Mrs. Ellis was reconciled to the union, and upon her death it was found that she had left nearly all her fortune to her son. Young Ellis bought a splendid home on Lake George for his wife and gave her a steam yacht and fine automobiles.

There was a great amateur rowing regatta on Lake George on Aug. 28 last, and young Ellis was one of the promoters. When he returned to New York early in September he gave a dinner at the Hotel Belleclaire in honor of the rowing men. John J. Mulcahy, Constance Sutton Titus, James J. Pilkington, William Varley and a dozen other noted athletes assembled around a table which had for a center piece a little reproduction of Lake George, topographically and picturesquely accurate, with a tiny steam yacht puffing over the miniature waves.

Ellis became overheated and sat by an open window. He caught a cold, which developed into pneumonia, and he died on Sept. 13.

For a few months Mrs. Ellis lived in seclusion in her beautiful home, 422 West End avenue. Her friends said she would never marry again.

Meantime "Kid McCoy" had had much marital tribulation. His wife, Julia Selby, eloped to Japan with his friend, Ralph Thompson, at the very time of the Ellis-Earle romance. McCoy got a divorce from Julia. He married, late in 1903, Miss Indiola Arnold, a pretty girl, now on the road with the Lew Fields Company. This marriage was annulled by the Rhode Island courts last winter upon Mrs. Selby's application.

The pugilist began a new life when his latest marriage was annulled. He has not touched a drop of alcoholic liquor since last December. When he returned to New York from California two months ago he began to court Mrs. Ellis. She soon capitulated. The marriage probably will be celebrated in September.

WIFE WILL BARE FAMILY SKELETON

Millionaire Ironmaster Will Be Sued for Support of Girl Bride's Child.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—T. M. Nagle, one of the richest residents of Erie, Pa., whose wealth is estimated at $40,000,000, will be forced to appear in Quarter Session Court here within a few weeks and show cause why he will not recognize 8-year-old Theodora Marguerita Nagle as his daughter and provide for her support, as demanded by the mother, Mrs. Agnes D. Nagle.

Mrs. Nagle declares that for years she has been blocked by the power of the Nagle millions. All proceedings in the case, she says, have heretofore been suppressed, but, backed by four of the leading lawyers of Philadelphia, she will at least make public the family skeleton.

In addition to the suit for the recognition and support of the child, Mrs. Nagle charges that the millionaire secured a divorce from her while she was seriously ill at Atlantic City without papers ever having been served upon her. She charges, and her counsel support the story, that all records of Mr. Nagle's divorce have disappeared, so that she cannot learn upon what grounds it was secured.

Since securing this divorce Mr. Nagle has refused to recognize Mrs. Nagle's child and he has married again. He recently was arrested by a constable, who traveled from this city in company with one of Mrs. Nagle's counsel, and is now under bail to appear in court here the first week in June.

Mrs. Nagle's charges cover a variety of incidents, by means of which she declares that her struggles to secure her little girl's rights have been defeated by the power of her former husband's millions.

She asserts that from the time she was 15 years old she was picked out by the millionaire for his wife, and that her education was arranged by him at a convent. Despite this, she charges that almost immediately after marriage he became cruel to her and left her in a strange city one year later.

Mrs. Nagle has lived in Philadelphia for nearly three years, and has constantly maintained a well appointed stable and has found her chief recreation in driving.

The little girl, for sake of whom the mother has decided to lift the veil that has so long hidden the Nagle family skeleton, for a time was placed in Notre Dame Convent, in Rittenhouse square, but is now in charge of a governess. She is a beautiful child, and should the present suit prove her right to share in the Nagle fortune she will be one of the richest children in this city.

It's Cool Now,

But later on look out. Wabash service to Eastern resorts is unexcelled.

UNIVERSITY PUTS BAN ON DANCING

Faculty of Southern California Institution Prohibits Use of College Name in Functions.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 3.—The students of the University of Southern California will not be permitted to give any more dances. The announcement of this order came from President George F. Bovard at chapel exercises Monday morning, and created genuine consternation in the ranks of those students inclined to trip the fantastic during the university season.

It is understood that the students are not to be interfered with in their own homes or away from the university, and that they may attend all the dances they desire, but no dances in the name of the university will be permitted.

CURED OF ASTHMA—ENGINEER THANKS GOD

Out of Work Four Years—Now Running an Engine—Cinarsium Did It. Read What He Says!

ASTHMA SUFFERERS EVERYWHERE CAN TRY CINARSIUM FREE.

Every victim of Asthma will rejoice that a cure has been found for this terrible disease. Engineer J. B. Webster of Chili Station, N. Y., heard about the wonderful cures of Asthma that the great discovery, Cinarsium, was effecting and could hardly believe it was true, but he sent for the free sample and gave it a trial. Today he is well and back at work. Happy? Why, he is the happiest man in the state of New York! Just read his letter. He says: "I am now a well man, thanks to Cinarsium. I commenced running an engine the first day of May—THE FIRST WORK I HAVE DONE IN FOUR YEARS. I am gaining strength all the while. May the Good Lord bless you for what you have done for me. I feel that I can never do enough for you. You may use my name as much as you please, as everyone around here knows what Cinarsium has done for me and several have sent for the medicine."

That is the kind of letters we receive every day from cured ones. We want every sufferer to know about this marvelous medicine and that any man, woman or child can have a bottle of Cinarsium free to try.

Not a penny to pay for the trial. We send the bottle free and even pay the postage on it. We make this liberal offer because WE KNOW what Cinarsium will do. Not only will it instantly relieve and permanently cure Asthma, but it will do the same for hay fever or catarrh.

No matter how severe or of how long standing your trouble may be, Cinarsium will cure you. It is not an inhalation treatment, but a wonderful nerve food and nerve tonic and it cures by REMOVING THE CAUSE. Our free book explains fully the real nature of Asthma, Hay Fever and Catarrh and shows WHY Cinarsium cures when all other remedies fail.

Send for the free bottle at once. You have suffered long enough—try Cinarsium, and get rid of the disease forever.

EUCHRE CONTEST FOR PIANO

$1000 in Prizes Offered at Unique Entertainment of St. Patrick's Free Catholic School.

A mammoth euchre party, contesting for prizes that have an aggregate value of $1000, is the unusual entertainment to be given by St. Patrick's Free Catholic School, Sixth and Biddle streets, at the Coliseum Monday night.

The school for whose benefit the euchre party is given is the first free Catholic school established in St. Louis. The funds realized are to go toward defraying the expenses of the institution. The first prize is a $350 piano, now on exhibition at Balmer & Weber's music store, 1109 Olive street. Other prizes will range downward in value.

The Rev. Father T. Dempsey, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, and a company of Knights of Father Mathew will be in charge. Orchestra music will be provided for dancing.

Tuesday and Wednesday evenings the annual fair and festival of the school will be held in the school hall, 1211 North Sixth street. Dancing will be enjoyed.

The euchre party and the festival are expected to be very cosmopolitan affairs, the school roll containing the names of pupils of 10 nationalities.

CELEBRATE BASTILE'S FALL.

The Franco-American Society of St. Louis, Emile Karst, president, will celebrate the fall of the Bastile with a fete on the evening of Thursday, July 20, at the Alps. The real anniversary of the event is July 14, and the Franco-American Society this year defers it a few days to be able to avail itself of the services of William Jennings Bryan, who has consented to deliver an oration, and whose itinerary forbids an earlier visit to St. Louis. The music will be furnished by the new Alps Orchestra under the direction of John Lund. Mme. Acton-Harker is to sing La Marseillaise in costume and also the famous "Shadow Dance" from Giacomo Meyerbeer's opera, "Dinorah." Emile Karst will deliver a short address in French.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Is the name sometimes given to what is generally known as the BAD DISEASE. It is not confined to dens of vice or the lower classes. The purest and best people are sometimes infected with this awful malady through handling the clothing, drinking from the same vessel, using the same toilet articles, or otherwise coming in contact with persons who have contracted it.

BLOOD POISON

It begins usually with a little blister or sore, then swelling in the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores and ulcers appear in the mouth, the throat becomes ulcerated, the hair, eye brows and lashes fall out and, as the blood becomes more contaminated, copper-colored splotches and pustular eruptions and sores appear upon different parts of the body, and the poison even destroys the bones.

Our MAGIC CURE is a Specific for this loathsome disease, and cures it even in the worst forms. It is a perfect antidote for the powerful virus that pollutes the blood and penetrates to all parts of the system. Unless you get this poison out of you blood it will ruin you, and bring disgrace and disease upon your children for it can be transmitted from parent to child.

Write for our free home treatment book and learn all about contagious blood poison. If you want medical advice give us a history of your case, and our physicians will furnish all the information you wish without any charge whatever.

We have a REMEDY unknown to the profession. We give guaranty to refund money if we do not cure. You can be treated at home for the same price and with the same guaranty. With those who prefer to come here we will contract to cure them or pay expense of coming, railroad and hotel bills, and make no charge, if we fail to cure. If you have exhausted the old methods of treatment and still have aches and pains, mucous patches in mouth, sore throat, pimples, copper-colored spots, ulcers on any parts of the body, hair or eyebrows falling out, it is this secondary blood poison we guarantee to cure. We solicit the most obstinate cases. This disease has always baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians. For many years we have made a specialty of treating this disease with our MAGIC CURE, and we have $500,000 capital behind our unconditional guaranty.

WE CURE QUICKLY AND PERMANENTLY.

Our patients cured years ago by our Great Discovery, unknown to the profession, are today sound and well, and have healthy children since we cured them.

DON'T WASTE YOUR TIME AND MONEY experimenting. Absolute unchangeable proofs sent sealed on application. 100-page book free. NO BRANCH OFFICES. Address fully as follows:

VIRGINIA'S SPONSOR AT CONFEDERATE REUNION OF HISTORIC LINEAGE

Miss

One of Miss Cary's Kinswomen Had the Distinction of Refusing to Marry George Washington Before He Became the Father of His Country.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RICHMOND, Va., June 3.—Miss Lilias Blair Cary, daughter of Wilson Miles Cary of Richmond, who has been appointed sponsor for Virginia at the Confederate reunion in Louisville in June, represents the State's best aristocracy.

Her ancestors, through both parents, were members of the House of Burgesses, and the names of her paternal and maternal great-great-grandparents — Wilson Miles Cary and Paul Carrington, who were signers of the Nonimportation Association—are inscribed upon the stone recently erected in Williamsburg on the site of the Colonial Capitol.

Miss Cary is a first cousin, once removed, of Mrs. Burton Harrison, a novelist, and of Wilson Miles Cary, of Baltimore, and Miss Jennie Cary, principal of the well-known girl's school of that city. It was one of her kinswomen, the beautiful Mary Cary, who rejected George Washington. She comes, indeed, of two families of handsome women, her mother, Miss Lily McPhail, being one of several sisters distinguished for personal loveliness.

Although a native of Richmond, Miss Cary was reared at historic "Roanoke," owned by her father, the seat, in Charlotte County, of John Randolph, where she was educated by tutors. She is a sparkling brunette, with an animation and play of expression beyond the scope of the camera.

Miss Cary's cousin, Miss Jennie McPhail Talcott, of Richmond, will be her maid of honor.

LACE HOSE AND FRENCH HEELS WHEN HE EXPECTED MOCCASINS

Being a Story of the Surprise of an Easterner Who Visited Indian Territory and Found That His Scalp Was Safe.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., June 3.—From Shawnee the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf Railroad reaches away to the south and hides itself in the timber of the Seminoles. The vast woods sweeping from the tracks over a sloping country have yielded little to the settler, for there are few houses and many miles separate the railroad stations.

Crooked, ugly streams which an almost tropical rainfall keeps swollen and yellow at this time of the year are the only openings through the dense growth of trees and vines. It is a wild country which the advance of civilization had spared for a little while that the Indian might know the seclusion of the forests, and in their depths preserve the hallowed traditions of his race.

So thought a man from the East in the smoking car as through the shadows the train raced against the falling eventide. He had never been in Indian Territory before, but had an idea of what it was like, based upon stories heard in the East. He knew that it had been penetrated in places by white men, hardy persons accustomed to taking long chances, who had succeeded in flim-flamming those Indians friendly enough to do business, and that there were in the territory five tribes, some of whose members were civilized. He was in the Indian country now—the brakeman had said so—and might be among the Indians soon, providing those along the Choctaw road knew enough to go to the station at train time.

The brakeman went through the car calling a station. It was Wewoka. The name rang true and the man from the East went out on the platform as the train slowed up and looked first about the station, then towards the woods. Not a brave was near; not a red blanket showed itself; not even a squaw was in sight. The man from the East went back to his seat.

At Wewoka the train picked up four passengers, a girl, two boys and a woman, the mother of the three. The girl, who was probably 18, was stylishly dressed in blue and wore openwork stockings and shoes with high heels. The boys wore uniforms of white with black braid and brass buttons. They played in the band at the Wewoka School. One of them carried a cornet and the other dragged aboard the train an ice cream freezer. The boy with the cornet found a seat beside the man from the East and wanted to know what made the train so late.

"Where are the Indians?" asked the man from the East.

"All around here," replied the boy.

"There were none at the station."

The boy looked out of the window and then at the man from the East.

"I am a Seminole," he said.

"I mean the other kind of Indians, who wear blankets."

"The Indians here wear clothes like those of other people."

"But at times don't some of them put on war paint, hold a dance and—"

A man sitting in the rear who had been listening took the man from the East in charge and told him about Indian Territory, many interesting and instructive things he had never heard before. There had not been a wigwam in Indian Territory for many, many years, he said, and the stately forests the man from the East had sized up as the hunting grounds of the braves, soon would fall, it was hoped, to the music of many saw mills. The man from the East was grateful, but disappointed.

"No braves, no war paint, no trail," he mused and his informant left the trains "but cornets, ice cream freezers and openwork stockings—and in Indian Territory."

MANY HAVE STOMACH CATARRH AND CALL IT DYSPEPSIA

Two Beautiful Women Cured of Stomach Catarrh By Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. G. W. Davis, 1418 11th street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:
"After suffering some time with indigestion and dyspepsia, and having tried so many remedies without relief, I was persuaded by some friends to take Peruna.
"After using several bottles, I found such good results that I can cheerfully thank you and praise your wonderful medicine, Peruna, to my friends in general."

MRS. G.W.DAVIS
WASHINGTON, D.C.

Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Flatulence, Palpitation Of the Heart, Are All Symptoms of Stomach Catarrh.

MISS L. WALL.
ST. PAUL, MINN.

Run Down in Strength, a Result of Stomach Catarrh.

Miss L. Wall, 350 N. Dale street, St. Paul, Minn., writes:
"Last spring I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I was very much run down in strength and lost my appetite.
"I took three bottles of Peruna and found myself gaining very quickly in every way.
"I also had catarrh in my head, which has been entirely cured. I thank Peruna for the health I am enjoying."

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

DYSPEPSIA is a term that has long been in use. It is intended to include all disturbances of the digestive organs.

If the stomach is inflamed and digestion ceases, it is called dyspepsia.

If the saliva fails to perform its function, it is called dyspepsia.

If the glands of the stomach dry up, and no longer secrete the peptic juices, it is called dyspepsia.

Catarrh of the stomach is called dyspepsia. It is really a form of dyspepsia.

How Catarrh Affects Digestion.

When catarrh attacks the mucous membranes of the stomach, the glands that secrete the gastric juices are deranged, the gastric juice is rendered inert and perverted in its action.

No one can have a healthy stomach or anything like a healthy digestion so long as they have catarrh of the stomach.

It is useless to try to remedy dyspepsia caused by catarrh of the stomach by taking pepsin powders or other dyspepsia remedies.

A Rational Treatment.

The first thing that must be done is to remove the catarrh, when the dyspepsia symptoms will disappear.

The stomach that is free from catarrhal congestion will do its work properly.

Pe-ru-na, the Correct Remedy.

Peruna has become famous as a dyspepsia medicine only because it cures catarrh of the stomach.

So many cases of dyspepsia depend upon catarrh of the stomach, that the two diseases are becoming confused in the minds of many people.

Not a Dyspepsia Remedy.

In the ordinary sense, Peruna is not a dyspepsia remedy. It cures thousands of cases of dyspepsia by curing catarrh of the stomach, catarrh of the liver and catarrh of all the digestive organs.

Whenever any one is troubled with dyspepsia any length of time, catarrh of the digestive organs may be suspected.

Do Not Waste Valuable Time.

There is no use in wasting time with other remedies. Peruna reaches the spot at once and removes the cause. Its cures are permanent, as it removes the cause.

Not a Cure-All.

Peruna is not a cure-all. It cures one disease—that disease is catarrh.

However, catarrh makes itself known by such varied symptoms, that its various forms appear to the unprofessional as so many different diseases. Catarrh is catarrh, no matter in which part of the body it locates itself. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Danderine
GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT

The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor.

That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

The following is a reproduction of Miss Lewis' last letter:

January 3, 1905.

Dear Doctor Knowlton:—

You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach much below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid.

I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it.

Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. per bottle

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

HOME SITES AND RESIDENCES ARE EAGERLY SOUGHT

Bulk of Realty Business of the Week Is in Small Transactions—Three Downtown Deals of Note.

FOUR MORE STORIES FOR THE LACLEDE BUILDING

Mercantile Trust Purchase of Koken Building on Locust Street Indicates Extension of Bank Property for Working Purposes.

BY BERRY MOORE.

The week in realty was marked by a brisk demand for dwellings, residence sites and investment properties. Sales concluded in these lists sum up a substantial total.

The feature of the week was the sale of the Laclede Building at the southwest corner of Fourth and Olive streets to the Merchants' Laclede National Bank for $375,000, and the ground on which it stands to the East End Realty Co., for $402,710.

The sale of the American Exchange Bank Building at 207 North Broadway to the Altheimer & Rawlings Investment Co. for $150,000, that of the Koken Building at 717 Locust street to the Mercantile Trust Co. for $130,000, and 24 feet frontage at 1007 Locust street to the Ashland Realty Co. for $123,000, were also transactions of prominence in the business district.

The East End Realty Co., it is believed in realty circles, is only a medium through which the fee in the Laclede Building property is to pass to the Merchants' Laclede National Bank, and that within a few days it will hold the title to the entire property. The East End Realty Co. is composed of John L. McDowald, Howard Gambrill and W. J. Haley, and was formed, it is said, simply to take title to the property. William H. Lee, president of the Merchants' Laclede National Bank, when seen yesterday, would neither affirm nor deny the report.

Plans for Laclede Building.

The first floor of the building, with the exception of a small space in the rear, which will be used as the business office of the Postal Cable Telegraph Co., will be occupied by the bank and altered to meet its requirements. The Fourth street entrance will be shifted to the extreme south end of the building. The operating rooms of the Postal Company, which now occupy the south wing of the ground floor, will be reinstalled in southeastern wing of the seventh floor. The new operating rooms will be the most modern and complete that money can provide. They will embody several innovations, including library and lounging room.

It is understood the owners intend to raise the building to 12 stories. It is now an eight-story office structure and covers a lot of 116 feet 6 inches on Fourth street by 127 feet 6 inches on Olive street. It is built on a perpetual leasehold, renewable every 99 years, at an annual rental of 4 per cent on a valuation of $400,000.

It carries $250,000 of bonds and $350,000 of stock. The fee is owned by Paul Brown, who acquired it several years ago from the Drummonds for $400,000.

The amounts named in the conveyance filed for record are nominal. The transaction will net substantial profits for the Laclede Building Co. and Mr. Brown. The total consideration is not less than $1,250,000.

American Bank Building Sale.

The American Exchange Bank property has a frontage of 30 feet on Broadway by a depth of 127 feet 6 inches through to an alley, the price being at the rate of $5000 a front foot. This is $15,000 a front foot less than Thomas Wright, the millionaire bank director, paid for the Broadway frontage of the southwest corner of Broadway and Olive street. Mr. Wright's purchase has, however, an extensive frontage on both Broadway and Olive street, and is considered to be the strongest corner in the business center, while the bank property is of restricted area and is sandwiched in between two big independent corners, and this, operators say, explains the discrepancy in the prices realized for the respective properties. Mr. Wright in discussing the sale stated that the bank property brought all that he had thought it would bring and that the price realized was no disappointment to him.

"I bought Olive street frontage, remember," said Mr. Wright. In fact, not a real estate man present at the sale believed that the property would bring over $5000 a foot.

The sale was well attended, some of the shrewdest operators in the city being among the bidders. The bidding was lively until $145,500 was reached. Then it stopped. The attorney for the bank thereupon announced that unless the property brought $150,000, Cornet & Zeibig, the bank agents, having been offered that much before the auction, it would be withdrawn.

Mercantile Trust Expanding.

The Koken Building is a nine-story office building, occupying a lot 24 by 100 feet, and was owned by the Locust Street Building Co., having been purchased several months ago for $70,000. The sale to the Mercantile was at a profit of $60,000. The Mercantile recently purchased the property adjoining on the west, which, with its building at the northeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, now controls a frontage of over 100 feet on Locust street by a depth on Eighth street to an alley.

The business of the Mercantile, evidenced by its dividends, is growing apace and the additional area, it is expected, will be used in the early future for an addition to its present structure.

The sale at 1007 Locust street was for the account of George W. Tower, who recently purchased the property, the resale netting him a handsome profit.

The sale of the northeast corner of Seventh and Pine street to the Davis estate for $345,000, which was announced in these columns last Sunday, has been confirmed by Richard Boyle, the agent in the transaction. The deal involves an exchange of properties, which accounts for the high figure, will probably aggregate $500,000. The Davis estate declined to state for what purpose the property had been acquired, but it is the opinion in realty circles that the present improvements of an antiquated type will be immediately superseded by a new big structure.

The property has 56 feet on Pine street by 58 feet on Seventh street, the price being at the rate of over $4000 a foot for the Pine street frontage. This is the second important purchase of Pine street property within the last ten days. A. C. Stewart of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., the previous week purchasing 45x58 feet at 614-16 Pine street for $90,000. Many other deals are pending for properties on Pine street east of Twelfth street, giving promise of continued activity on this heretofore overlooked thoroughfare.

"Values are relatively cheaper on Pine street and involve greater speculative advantages than on any other thoroughfare in the city," said a prominent dealer yesterday. Shrewd operators are beginning to appreciate this fact and are casting about in this section for advantageous purchases.

Home Sites in Demand.

The call for unimproved property is unprecedented. Almost every purchase of vacant property is for home improvement. The indications are that more homes will be erected in the succeeding than in the last six months, which was a record-six breaker. Very little vacant ground is being bought for speculative or investment purposes.

Speculators and investors are putting money in flats and apartment houses, which in addition to profits from an enhancement in value, give them in rental a fair percentage on the investment. Apartment houses and flats in the central West End are strong magnets and are enjoying a ready sale at good prices. Persons who bought this class of property earlier in the season, when prices were at a low ebb, are now reselling, in many instances, at substantial profits.

The dwelling demand is unprecedented. The majority of dwellings are being bought for homes. Resales of dwellings for that reason are being made only at large advances. Rather than pay advanced prices, the homeseeker builds and the demand for building sites is well maintained.

The low rates of interest which prevail are a factor in the building movement. Building loans on clear vacant ground can now be secured at 5 per cent, where formerly 6 per cent and 7 per cent were charged. These loans may be paid off on the installment plan, the interest decreasing with the principal, and with rents yielding from 10 per cent to 15 per cent, it is plainly obvious to tenants that they can build on a cheaper basis than they can rent.

Subdivision Demand Brisk.

There is no cessation in subdivision activity. At Euclid Heights, Newport Heights, Forest Park Place, Richmond Heigths and Oxford place, sales continue unabated. Oly 75 lots are left at Richmond Heights and the indications are that by fall this tract will be entirely out of the market. From 50 to 75 houses are in course of construction in Richmond Heights. The tract is being handled by the Rutledge & Kilpatrick Real Estate Co. At Forest Park Place the demand is exceeding the expectations of F. E. Niesen, the agent for the property. Buyers in Forest Park Home place are a thrifty class, Mr. Niesen says, and will improve with homes that will add to the value of the property. Euclid Heights has only been on the market since May 1, and out of 90 lots only 30 remain unsold. Nine houses are in course of construction here and many others are in contemplation. Euclid Heights is being managed by the McNair & Harris Real Estate Co.

Washington Avenue Sale.

Nos. 1510 and 1516 Washington avenue, consisting of two residences, were sold by the McNair & Harris Real Estate Co. for Catherine Bercaw and others to the Lawrence Investment Co. for $1225 a front foot, or $73,500 for the holding. The property has 60 feet on Washington avenue by a depth of 150 feet through to St. Charles street.

HUSTLER LEAHY WILL GIVE CLOCKS WITH LOTS

DAVID P. LEAHY

David P. Leahy, who last Saturday made himself famous by selling 124 lots in Wellston Grove in four hours, has been appointed agent to sell at special sale Washington University Park, a tract of 1000 lots. It adjoins the Woman's Magazine Building on the north and is just west of Delmar Garden. It will be sold in lots to suit, on terms of $10 cash, the balance in installments of $1 per week. Mr. Leahy will employ 100 salesmen for this sale, the date of which will be announced later in the Post-Dispatch. Two hundred fancy souvenir clocks will be given away the day of the sale. The prices will range from $5 to $10 per front foot.

HOLBROOK - BLACKWELDER REAL ESTATE TRUST CO.

Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. sold, during the past week, for the Tacoma Realty Co. to George F. Tower Jr. the 99-year leasehold which that company owned covering property 600 to 606 Olive street, fronting 87½ feet on the south line of Olive street by 57 feet 6 inches on the west line of Sixth street. The price paid was $310,000, including the leasehold and about $55,000 worth of railroad bonds deposited to secure the lease. The Tacoma Realty Co. took a 99-year lease on above property in May, 1902 and put up the $55,000 railroad bonds to secure same. This sale, therefore, represents a net profit to them of $255,000 in two and one-half years on a $55,000 investment. The Hess Realty and Financial Co. assisted in this deal.

Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. also sold for Thomas J. Wade to John J. McGrath the property at 2715 and 2717 Slattery street, with lot 32x120, at price of $3900.

MERCANTILE TRUST CO.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports that never in the history of the organization has there been a busier week in the real estate department than the week just closed. Numerous sales were effected. It conducted one most successful auction and negotiated a lage downtown lease and has a most gratifying number of transactions pending.

The sales of this company for the week include the corner of Union boulevard and Kingsbury place, lot 210x200 feet, from the Bell Place Realty Co. to Charles W. Nugent for $31,500, as reported elsewhere.

Also sale of a Westmoreland place lot for account of A. C. Stewart to a client for $12,250, as reported in detail in another column.

Also No. 3937 Sullivan avenue, a two-story, eight-room brick residence, with all conveniences, occupying lot 30x135 feet, being located in beautiful Lindell place. The property was sold for the account of C. B. Brown for $4700, the purchaser being D. L. Settle, who bought with the intention of occupying same as his home.

Also lot on Russell avenue, between California and Oregon avenues, lot fronting 25 feet on the south side of Russell, by a depth of 105 feet. Sold for the account of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York for $750, the purchaser being Chris Schawacker, who bought for the purpose of erecting a handsome dwelling house on same.

The trust company also reports that the demand for good real estate loans continues unabated, and also reports to have enjoyed an excellent week's business in its renting and leasing departments.

BUYS MORE GROUND.

The Mercantile Trust Co. report the sale of a beautiful lot in Kingsbury place, fronting 100 feet on the north side by a depth of 200 feet, and beginning 110 feet west of Union boulevard. This lot was sold to Charles W. Nugent, Vice-President of B. Nugent & Bros. Dry Goods Co. It will be remembered that sale was reported to Mr. Nugent last week of the corner lot at Union avenue and Kingsbury place. Mr. Nugent has decided to erect a very handsome residence on this corner, and felt that one lot would not be a suitable setting for the style of structure he will erect. The two lots were sold for $31,500, and together form one of the most prominent and desirable residence sites in St. Louis; in fact, it is said that there is not handsomer residence site in any city in America. Fisher & Co. assisted in this transaction.

VERNON PLACE SALE.

Beginning today and continuing during the ensuing week, Vernon place, the new subdivision being placed on the market by Loewenstein Bros., will be opened for inspection.

While the sale will not begin until Saturday, June 10, homeseekers, investors, speculators and builders are given ample time and opportunity to examine the property and make their best selections.

Vernon place consists of 164 lots having an aggregate frontage of 5500 feet on the Olive street road, Vernon avenue, Kingsland boulevard and Ferguson avenue. Each lot has a frontage of not less than 30 feet. The lots are among the most desirable yet placed on the market, and the Olive street road lots in particular are on a thoroughfare where values have been and are rapidly enhancing. Large, beautiful shade trees are scattered over Vernon place and add additional value as well as charm to the property.

Vernon place begins about 250 feet east of Kingsland boulevard and runs west along the south line of the Olive street road a distance of 2000 feet. The southeast portion of Vernon place adjoins the Delmar Gardens.

The property is convenient to the Suburban street cars, while the Creve Coeur line of the Transit company runs through the property along Vernon avenue.

In addition to the sale of the lots Loewenstein Bros. will erect homes in Vernon place and allow purchasers to pay for same in payments equal to rent money. In fact, Vernon place will be offered on liberal terms to desirable homeseekers who wish to reside in a choice neighborhood.

WM. S. DROZDA,

TALK OF SHUTTING SALOONS IN ST. JOE

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 13.—It is rumored that from 15 to 20 saloons will not renew their licenses when they expire within the next few months.

A number of the saloon men, especially in the suburbs, are said to be losing money on account of the enforcement of the Sunday closing law. Sunday is the biggest day for these dramshops and the proprietors keenly feel the curtailment of business.

"I have heard that from 20 to 25 saloons will be closed by the time winter comes if the present restrictions are continued," said W. L. Goetz, president of the M. K. Goetz Brewing Co. last evening. "A number will probably close at once, but I doubt if it will be more than six or eight. While a number of saloon men are talking about closing most of them will probably be tided over by the summer business until the cold weather sets in. I expect more to close then. I was speaking to a Kansas City dealer yesterday and he said that 100 saloon men will probably quit business there July 1. There are now 600 saloons in Kansas City."

City Auditor Lucas, who has charge of the licensing of saloons, said that he had heard nothing of the rumor that a number will not renew their licenses on July 1.

"It may be that a number will drop out, but so far nothing has been said to me about it," said Mr. Lucas. "There are now 180 licensed saloons in St. Joseph and I believe that between 40 and 50 licenses will become due the first of the month."

Mayor Spratt, who is chairman of the Excise Board, said that he had heard nothing of the report that a number of the saloons will probably close.

"As my work on the board consists merely of passing on the petitions which are presented, this matter would probably not come to my knowledge at once, even if it is true," said the Mayor.

The closing of 20 or 25 saloons would mean an appreciable decrease in the revenue of the city and county. The saloon licenses are $1000 for each place a year, the amount being paid quarterly. If 20 places would close it would mean the loss of $20,000 in recenue. Of the dramshop license about 53 per cent goes to the county and State, the remainder going into the city coffers. The entire amount, however, is collected through the city treasurer's office.

Departs for Europe.

Mr. F. F. Saboda, ladies' tailor, 4719 Olive street, departs for Europe on Kronprinz Wilhelm Tuesday, June 17, to visit London, Paris, Switzerland and Germany. Purchase silks, woolens, etc., for fall season. Will remain abroad until Sept. 1. Any commissions or special orders will be given personal attention.

NEW OLIVE STREET BUILDING

Balmer & Weber Music House Company Will Erect Six-Story Structure.

Papin & Tontrup have just completed a deal, the papers for which went on record yesterday, which means the erection of another handsome improvement on Olive street, and the establishment of one of the most complete and up-to-date music houses in the West.

The property to be improved is 1004 Olive street, at present occupied by an old building, which will be removed at once and replaced by a handsome six-story building, embodying the latest and most approved arrangements for the occupany intended.

The lot has a front of 25 feet and a depth of 109 feet. The property was held under a 99-year lease by the Erker Realty Co., who leased it in 1895 from C. F. Pommer, at a yearly rental of $2500 and taxes. The Erker Realty Co. has now made a lease to the Balmer & Weber Music House Co., for the remainder of said term, at an annual rental of [illegible] and taxes. The building now in contemplation is estimated to cost when completed about $45,000. Contracts have been let for the immediate beginning of the work.

The lease was made on a ground valuation of $3500 per foot. In nine years the Erker Realty Co. realizes, from now on, an annual clear gain of $1875 for the term. The Balmer & Weber Music House Co. is one of the best-known music houses in the West, having been established here in St. Louis about sixty years ago. The plans for the building were prepared by William H. Kirchner, the architect.

AUCTION OF 500 LOTS.

Mercantile Trust to Sell Tower Grove Heights Property.

The announcement made by the Mercantile Trust Co. of an auction of over 500 lots in Tower Grove Heights has caused widespread interest among those interested in real estate, and the agents report that the number of people who have been on the ground looking at the property during the past week has been large.

Over five years have been spent in improving this tract of land, and the owners decided that this season was the proper time to dispose of the property.

In order to establish the subdivision, the owners two months ago authorized the agents to sell a number of the lots at private sale, and very reasonable prices were made on the lots. As proof that the public regarded the property as desirable and the prices as low, over 400 lots were sold at private sale and as a result nearly 200 residences and flats are now in course of construction.

The subdivision is permanently established as a delightful residence district, and the buyers at auction can see what the prospects are. The lots are all to be closed out at auction on Saturday, June 17, and as there is such a large number, it is natural to presume that some will go at bargain prices.

OLIVE HEIGHTS SUBDIVISION.

Special Sale of Lots to Be Held June 24.

The owners of the large tract of land known as the Beck & Corbitt tract, fronting on Ferguson avenue, several blocks west of the city limits, are having the surveyors prepare and subdivide this attractive property into about two hundred large size city lots and have appointed Oreon E. Scott & Co. agents for their sale. This property has been considered the most attractive undivided ground in what is now regarded as the fast-growing portion of the county adjoining the city on the west.

It is situated in the highest part of very high property and overlooks several miles of the handsomest portion of the city.

A special sale of the property will be held on June 24.

"BUM" LIFE PRESERVERS

TOLEDO, O., June 3.—It's a "bum lot" of life preservers with which the yachts and launches in Toledo harbor are equipped, according to the steamboat inspectors here, who have made a rigid inspection of these equipments for the preservation of life.

Fifty per cent of the life preservers found on the smaller craft have been condemned. Last year the government permitted the use of a certain life preserver, which afterward proved to be no good. These are being condemned this year and ordered thrown out.

The bells on these boats are also being inspected, and many of them are found to be smaller than the size required by the government.

IT CURES LIQUOR HABIT

Orrine is the only perfectly successful cure for the liquor habit the world has ever known. It is better than institutes or sanitariums, because it is used at home and does not interfere with the daily work; better than willpower, because it never fails. It strengthens the nerves and gives good appetite, regulates digestion and makes you sleep like a child.

Orrine No. 1 will cure the hardest drinker and destroy his craving for drink without his knowledge, as it can be given secretly in tea, coffee or food. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, is for those who wish to be cured. The cost of either is $1 per box. Orrine has the endorsement of ministers and physicians. It is the one remedy for the liquor habit that can be relied upon to cure at little expense and restore the drunkard to perfect vigor of manhood. Write to the Orrine Company, Inc., Washington, D. C., for book on "Drunkenness," sent free in plain envelope. Call on Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Sixth street and Washington avenue, St. Louis.

W. U. STUDENTS IN PLAY.

The Dramatic Club of the Washington University, after having successfully presented a number of very delightful farces through the year, will complete its year's work with the presentation of "Two Gentlemen of Verona." The club will present the play at Alton on Monday evening, June 12, and the second performance will be given at the Century Theater Wednesday evening, June 14. The costuming and the cast will be the same for the two performances, but the one at Alton will be given in the Elizabethan manner, while the one at the Century will be given in the conventional style, with stage setting. The cast of characters is as follows: Duke of Milan, Mr. Brill; Valentine, Mr. Eliot; Proteus, Mr. Gilster; Antonio, Mr. Gilbert; Shurio, Mr. Schmale; Eglamour, Mr. Gilbert; Speed, Mr. Burke; Launce, Mr. Logan; Panthino, Mr. Rosenheim; Julia, Miss Knoll; Silvia, Miss Colby; Lucetta, Miss Rudolph; Hast, Mr. Glauber.

The members of the Dramatic Club have been working conscientiously over the play for several months and it bids fair to be a very successful innovation in the commencement exercises of the university.

LAKE BUILDERS MAKE THE PACE

Turn Out Ships in Ninety Days, Ocean Contractors Require Eighteen Months.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DULUTH, Minn., June 3.—Including a contract that has not yet been definitely arranged as to all details there are now 14 steel ships of the largest class contracted for completion by the opening of navigation next year.

These ships vary from 6500 tons capacity to upwards of 10,500 tons, and probably average in cost $350,000. They will add about 2,400,000 gross tons to the seasonal capacity of the lakes. It is a very unusual and remarkable thing that so much capacity should be added to the lake fleet so far ahead of the time it is to be put into commission. Nearly a year must elapse before these vessels can go to service, and in this time there is room for a great many occurrences. And it does not seem that the contracting for ships for 1906 is yet over.

More shipping is built annually for the American lakes than for its two oceans and its rivers. Into a single lake of the Western chain, Superior, there last year passed more than two hundred steel ships of capacity greater than 5000 gross tons. Vessels already under contract for next May delivery are valued at more than $4,000,000.

The business of making ships along the lakes has been so specialized, is so much of a science that ships of 9000 to 10,000 tons can be turned out complete in from ninety to one hundred and twenty days, and are so turned out in fact. Contrast this with the statement that American shipbuilders cannot promise delivery of vessels for Panama service in less than eighteen months.

AT SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS.

Closing Exercises Will Be Held Monday With Exhibition.

The board of control and the instructors of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts have extended invitations to the closing exercises of the thirty-first year of their school, Monday evening, June 12, in Memorial Hall, Nineteenth and Locust streets.

The program will consist of invocation by Rev. Robert A. Holland of St. George's Church; address, "Art and Culture," Dr. Leon Harrison; announcement of honor students for the year 1904-05 by the director; music; benediction, Dr. Holland.

The annual exhibition of the work of the students will be opened to the public in the galleries of the museum at the close of the exercises and will remain on view Tuesday and Wednesday, June 13 and 14, from 9:30 in the morning until 6 in the evening.

The students will give a reception in the galleries of the museum Wednesday afternoon from 3 until 5 oclock.

Wife Wins Divorce Suit by Charging Him With Planning Flirtation He Complained Of

MR. AND MRS. E.V. SKILLMAN

Tells Court She Is Convinced Husband Arranged for Her to Sit by Talkative Young Man and Indignantly Denies That Wine Supper Followed Conversation.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 3.—With the dinner intermission between the first and second acts of "Parsifal" as its motif, the last act of the divorce proceedings instituted by Paul Skillman, an expert electrician, aganst his pretty wife, Edith, has been heard by Special Judge W. T. Brown of the Circuit Court.

As indignantly as she could deny her husband's accusation in connection with a chance acqaintance in a darkened theater and a wine supper at her home afterward, Mrs. Skillman cast the refutation back and followed it wth a charge that he had arranged the whole affair simply to collect evidence to be used against her in court.

"Just explain to the court all about the 'Parsifal' incident," suggested her attorney as Mrs. Skillman swept to the witness stand.

"It was this way, your honor," declared the witness, speaking so that no syllable was lost to the crowd which thronged the court room, "I had wished very much to witness a performance of 'Parsifal' while it was in Indianapolis and had spoken to my husband about it, expecting him to procure two seats.

"At the last moment, when I went downtown to meet him, I found out that he had bought but one. He accompanied me to the theater, where I tried to persuade him to use the ticket, for I did not wish to be selfish. We argued the matter in the foyer until we were attracting attention and finally I gave up to him and he escorted me to the door.

"My seat was in the balcony, and, when I arrived there, the theater had been darkened for the first act. The usher indicated my seat, which was the second one from the aisle. As I approached it, a man who had been occupying the aisle seat, arose, and, murmuring that he had feared I was not coming, insisted upon my taking his seat. He moved to the seat which I should have taken. I did not understand the circumstance, but, rather than cause a disturbance, I accepted his seat."

"But you held a conversation with him afterward," interrupted her husband's attorney.

"Yes," she returned, in no way disturbed. "You see, your honor, I was very much interested in the show and the young man at my side seemed also to be deeply impressed. At one time and another he made remarks and I suppose that I answerd him. I did not wish to seem discourteous."

"And he told you his name?" asked the attorney.

"Yes, he told me his name was Lewis."

"And at the end of the first act, when everyone went out to dinner, you accompanied him to a restaurant on Illinois street, when your husband had provided you with money and you had intended to get a lunch on Washington street?"

"Yes, he asked me if I had arranged to go to dinner, and when I responded that I had, he said that he would go with me. We went together and returned to the theater together.

"Then, when the performance had concluded, he insisted on seeing me to the street car. At that point, he declared that he would ride out to the street where I lived and where I expected to be met by my husband. I could not prevent him from doing this, and, when we arrived at the street I had indicated, my husband was not there. Then I began to suspect something. Mr. Lewis accompanied me to my door and left me."

Lewis called at the Skillman home, notwithstanding the fact that he knew Mrs. Skillman to be a married woman, and this, she says, further aroused her suspicions that it was all a plot by her husband to compromise her.

Lewis' second call resulted in a domestic tragedy, which forever shattered the Skillman hearth.

"He came just as I was entering the house," said Mrs. Skillman, "and followed me into the parlor. I sat there talking with him, not drinking wine, as my husband alleges, when Mr. Skillman suddenly burst into the room. He took Lewis by the shoulder and the two went outside. They remained a few minutes and I noticed that Mr. Skillman did not handle Lewis very roughly. I forget just what happened next, but my husband came back into the room and accused me of various things."

Immediately following the interview, two moving wagons were backed up to the front door and the household goods were carted away to a storage house where they now repose in Skillman's name. Taking his little 3-year-old daughter, he disappeared.

Mrs. Skillman contended that her husband and his attorney had procured the services of Lewis and that she was the victim of their wiles.

"I think I shall grant Mrs. Skillman the divorce," said Judge Brown after considering briefly, "and I shall give her custody of the child with an allowance."

"Thank you, thank you, judge," sobbed Mrs. Skillman, burying her face in her hands.

CHINAMAN IN LONDON TALKS ON WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—For the first time in the history of the Celestial Empire, Chinese ladies of rank have come to this country to study England and the English.

"There have been Chinese women of a lower class doing this before, but not women of rank," said Mr. Sohtsu G. Kin, a relative of two Chinese ladies who are now in London. Mr. Kin was severe upon some of the English ways, when interviewed, but was reluctant to chastise the English too heavily.

One of the ladies is Mme. Yuan, daughter-in-law of the Tao-Tai of Shanghai, and the other is her friend, Miss Kin.

"We have seen a great many things that we have wondered at," said Mr. Kin, "but nothing much more amusing than the spectacle I saw in your House of Commons of a large body of members of Parliament gravely debating whether women should be enfranchised.

"Why should women trouble about politics? Why should women do this work? It is so unnecessary. We men can do all that, and there are plenty of other things for a woman to do. In China we do not trouble our women with anything of that sort. Why should we? Women's place is in the home."

Training School Musical.

The Woman's Training School will give a benefit musical in Recital Hall, the Odeon, Friday night. The following will take part in the entertainment: Miss Elsa Moxter, late of the Garrick Theater, London; Miss Mary Quivey, sister of Grace Van Studdiford; Paul C. Baltz, J. J. Eichneburger, W. A. Goldberg, J. L. Hall, Miss Clara Wuellner, Miss Josephine Carradine, Miss Julia Bruer and Mrs. Fred Fodde.

All Pennsylvania Lines trains between St. Louis, Philadelphia, New York and other Eastern cities run via Merchants' Bridge, avoiding the tunnel. Ticket offices, 7th and Olive and Union Station.

You must come to us sooner or later; why not now! Refuse to suffer longer on promises of others.

Blood Poison.

On account of its frightful hideousness, specific or contagious poison in the blood is the worst of all venereal diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it, the disease may manifest itself in the form of scrofula, eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, eruptions or copper-colored spots on face or body—little ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, swollen tonsils, falling out of the hair or eyebrows, and finally a leprous like decay of the flesh and bone. Our specific treatment for this trouble, varied and modified to suit each individual case, is an unfailing cure to which a vast army of restored men today owe their sturdy health.

We Cover the entire field of private and chronic, deep-seated, complicated, difficult Diseases.

We want every man who is suffering from any special disease or condition to come and have a talk with us. No man whose weakened system is crying out for help through contracted disease, or who has been guilty of early indiscretions or later excesses, is safe in life until such time as his errors have been corrected.

NOT A DOLLAR NEED BE PAID UNTIL CURED.

You do not pay us until you are satisfied and you are restored to health. Can we say more? You may consult us free of charge and get our opinion without any cost to you. Call and let us explain our methods of treatment. We cure VARICOCELE, RUPTURE, GLEET, STRICTURE, PROSTATIC AILMENTS and All DISEASES OF MEN.

PRIVATE DISEASES. Newly contracted and chronic cases cured. All burning and itching, inflammation and discharges stopped in twenty-four hours; cures effected in seven days.

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND PROSTATIC DISEASES. We cure all irritation, frequent desire or stoppage, pain in back and catarrhal conditions.

The Week in Society Circles

The young girls "standing with reluctant feet, where the brook and river meet," are to be the principal figures this week. The commencement exercises of Hosmer Hall will be given Thursday evening at First Congregational Church at Grand avenue and Delmar boulevard, and Friday morning Mary Institute will have its exercises at 10 in the Odeon.

Miss Elizabeth Waite is president of the Hosmer seniors, Miss Elise Biddle Ver Steeg and Miss Bee Seymore Hoiles graduate with highest honors. Miss Ver Steeg is valedictorian and Miss Laura Dustin Decker salutatorian.

Miss Anna Lou Caldwell wrote the class song and Miss Aimee Lois Hanford and Miss Waite composed songs for the alumnae.

Miss Caldwell will spend the summer traveling abroad and will make her debut in the fall. Miss Ver Steeg will travel all summer and in all probability enter one of the Eastern colleges in the autumn.

Miss Olive Lucille Rae will spend the summer in the East and enter the ranks of debutantes this coming winter. The other members of the 1905 class are: Misses Josephine Newell Thomas, Maude Minnette See, Lillian Ely, Margaretta Louisa Newell, Nancy Charlotte Reed, Josephine Barfield, Hazel A. Johnston, Ada Virginia Flitcraft, Bessie Bradley and Lorie Auguste Knight.

Miss Olive Rae entertained the seniors of Hosmer Hall and Mary Institute at her Cabanne home Friday afternoon. The house was prettily decorated with the class colors of Hosmer Hall of whose senior class the young hostess is a member, and Mary Institute. Miss Rae received with her mother, Mrs. Edward Day Rae, and Miss Hasgall.

Miss Olive Rogers, Miss Ethel Bacon, Miss Hope Miller and Miss Mildred Bevis served at the table.

Miss Florence Kramer and Miss Margaret Christian presided at the punchbowl in the hall and Miss Margaret Lewis, Miss Anna Lou Caldwell and Miss Hazel A. Johnston dispensed tea and chocolate. The receiving hours were from 3 to 5.

MRS EVERETT W. E. BROOKS

Mary Institute Graduation.

The Mary Institute 1905 class is the largest in the history of the institution, numbering 54. Miss Susan Meriwether, the class president, is the daughter of Mrs. H. B. Wallace and a grandaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Minor Meriwether.

Miss Meriwether is an unusually handsome girl, tall and athletic. She will spend the summer in the East with Mr. and Mrs. Wallace.

Miss Frances Carrol, a member of the class, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carroll. Miss Carroll will depart directly after commencement with her mother and brother, John Carroll, Jr., for a European journey. They will tour Switzerland, Italy, Germany and France, returning in the autumn.

Miss Clara Simon will travel in the East all summer and enter Vassar in September.

Miss Louise Condrey, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Condrey of Vandeventer place, will go to Smith after spending the summer with her parents at their Eastern summer home.

Miss Sallie Vest Jackson is editor-in-chief of the classbook and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Jackson of Thornby place and a granddaughter of Mrs. Vest and the late Senator George Vest. Miss Jackson will spend part of next winter in Washington.

Miss Natalie Arnstein is one of the most brilliant musicians in the class. Miss Arnstein will pursue her musical studies in the fall.

Miss Leonora Taussig will spend the summer in Germany and in the early fall tour France and Spain. Miss Adele Bonsack will enter college and so will Miss Frances Jones.

Miss Georgie Eliot will sail early in July for Europe, where she will travel all summer, with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Eliot of Kingsbury place.

Miss Clara Nipher will enter Washington University.

Miss Sadie Cox will continue her studies in the fall, when she will enter Miss Summer's school near Washington, D. C.

Miss Frances York, who entertained the seniors Saturday afternoon with a tea, will spend the winter at one of the fashionable Eastern schools.

Miss Blanch Turner will go abroad for a year.

Miss Elizabeth Hays will go to Vassar and Miss Mary Scudder will continue her studies at Smith.

The class beauty has not and cannot to everybody's satisfaction be decided on. The honors in that direction rest between Miss Gladys Gale, Miss Mary Marshall and Miss Martha Welle. Miss Welle will sail next week for a European tour with her parents.

Semple—Belcher.

At 6 p. m. yesterday the marriage of Miss Isabel Jerdone Belcher and Frederick Humphrey Semple was celebrated at Compton Avenue Presbyterian Church. The church was filled with the friends of the bride and bridegroom long before the hour set for the ceremony. Miss Belcher wore a bridal gown of white satin and point lace and her long tulle veil was secured with lilies of the valley arranged in a half coronet. Miss Frances Allen, Miss Grace Semple and Miss Elizabeth Donaldson, wearing white lace gowns, served as bridemaids, and Miss Mary Semple attended Miss Belcher as maid of honor. Mr. Semple had as his best man Coburn Farrer and Messrs. Griswold Smith, Stacy Brey and William Boyd were groomsmen and ushers. There was a reception at the residence of the bride for the intimate friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

St. Louis Choral Concert.

Thursday evening class No. 3 of the St. Louis Choral, under the auspices of the Morning Choral Club, gave its first concert at the Central High School under the direction of William John Hall.

The first part of the program was devoted to miscellaneous work, consisting of several choruses and solos by Mrs. Black, Miss Hussey, Mrs. Cragg and Mr. Black.

The last part of the program consisted of the cantata, "The Feast of Adonis," by Adolf Jensen.

During the evening one of the members in a short speech on behalf of the chorus, called Mr. Hall forward and presented him with a beautiful baton; then presented Mrs. Hall, the accompanist, and the secretary, Mrs. Cragg, with pins.

WHEN YOU
OPEN YOUR PURSE
COMPARE KIMBALL
PIANOS
With All the Rest.

A man readeth an advertisement in the newspapers about cheap pianos.

He goeth to a sliding-scale house, and, behold, a $400??? piano, with one stroke, is reduced in price to $300. He buyeth; forsooth, not many resist the $100 reduction.

On the next day he findeth that he hath a poorly constructed and miserably poor-toned piano, and, growing suspicious, he goeth to the Kieselhorst "one-priced store" and findeth a much better piano at the flat price of $275—no more asked, no more or less accepted.

MORAL

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN AND TRY THE KIESELHORST PLAN

You'll never know how really good a Kimball, Hallet & Davis, Kieselhorst or Crown Piano is until you compare them with the rest. You'll never know how well the Kieselhorst plan of piano-selling will suit you until you look into it. The Kieselhorst plan is Right, because it's just,

Just, because it's right.

And it saves you money, saves your nerves and your patience.

New Uprights, fully guaranteed, plainly marked to sell at $145 and up—$10 down and $1.25 a week, if desired.

Free Trips to Colorado

Colorado is the great Vacation-Land!

It affords Health, Recreation, Entertainment and Instruction.

Its splendid sunshine, tonic mountain air, cool, sleep-inducing nights, and grand scenery are the attractions which draw increasing thousands to Colorado every summer.

The Rock Island has a daily through train from St. Louis to Colorado and offers low excursion rates, to place Colorado within easy reach. We want the public to know all about Colorado—cost of getting there—cost of living there—what's to be seen and why everyone should go. So we make this Very Unusual Offer.

We want suggestions for advertisements and short articles on Colorado as the summer vacation resort, embracing the reasons why it is the best place to visit, and why the Rock Island System is the best line of travel to and from the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Coast.

We invite the public to aid us by contributing ideas—catchy phrases and expressions (literary excellence will not determine the awards and persons engaged in advertisement writing or similar literary work are not eligible to compete), for which we will award prizes—divided into classes—thirty-three premiums in all.

Class A—Open to all persons not professional writers—eleven premiums.

Class B—Open to High School Scholars—eleven premiums.

Class C—Open to School Teachers (public or private)—eleven premiums.

Contest closes June 24. Awards made June 30.

For particulars and our handsome 80-page illustrated Colorado book, other literature and full information, cut out this advertisement and mail to the undersigned with three 2-cent stamps.

Mrs. Taylor Entertains D. A. R.

Mrs. John M. Taylor and Miss Antoinette Taylor gave a delightful reception to the members of Jefferson Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday afternoon at their country place, Sagamore. About 40 ladies were present.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Samuel McKnight, the regent. Mrs. Thomas H. Wagner read an interesting paper relating her experiences and observations at the Continental Congress in Washington, and Mrs. Herbert Morriss rendered several vocal selections. Miss Marion Ralston was the pianist of the afternoon. For an encore she played one of her own compositions, "Skipping the Rope." The Daughters were much interested in a Paul Revere teapot, a relic in Mrs. Taylor's family.

Luncheon was served in the spacious yard of Sagamore under some huge forest trees. The table was set in the form of a T, with Mrs. Green and Mrs. Delafield in the places of honor.

After a reception the bride and bridegroom left for their future home, 1420 Newhouse avenue amid a shower of rice and old shoes.

Local sleeper, St. Louis to Indianapolis, 9:30 p. m. every day via Big Four.

Singers at Glen Echo.

The entertainment of Mr. Robyn's Amphion Club by the Glen Echo Club, Thursday, proved a delightful affair for the members of both clubs. The Amphions enjoyed the privileges of the Glen Echo Club during the day and at 8 p. m. assembled on the green south of the clubhouse and rendered two numbers, which were liberally applauded by the Glen Echo Club members, who were seated on the balconies and about the lawns. The program was then continued in the parlor. One of the features of the evening was the Amphion Club's rendition of Charles Claflin Allen's "America," under the directorship of the author himself. Among the soloists were Alfred Bertrand and R. Park van Wadelstaedt, vocalists, and Joseph Kern, cellist, with Mr. Robyn at the piano.

EAST ST. LOUIS SOCIETY.

A "Rustic Dance" was given Friday night by the young ladies of St. Patrick's parish at Broadway Hall. The ballroom was decorated with hay, corn and products of the farm, and the guests were attired in country-like costumes, making the affair one of the season's novelties. The following were present:

Misses Agnes Majors, Anita Griffin, Nora Walsh, Mary Albertson, May Walsh, Nellie O'Leary, Nellie Walsh, Maggie Hayes, Susie Kirk, Lillie Donohue, Carrie Rowle, Julia Horan, Katie Moose, Lulu Houser, Mamie Enright, Virgie Dulihan, Nellie Shea, Madge Healy, Josie Healy, Mary Powers, Josie Chapman and Agnes Robertson; Messrs. Misses Mabel White, Mary Forman, Adele Bowman, May Meehan, Cecil Meehan, Mary Kane, Prudence Moody, Nellie Thomas, Gertrude Tabb, Louisa Tabb, Oral Little, Eugenia Bernard, Mary Sullivan, Hallie Roe, Irma Pful and Susie Kirk.

Miss Brockman's Dinner Party.

Miss Rhoda Brockman entertained friends at a 6 o'clock dinner at her home, 3410 State street, Tuesday afternoon. A pleasing musical program was rendered, after which the dinner was served on the beautiful lawn. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. E. Rink, Horace J. Eggman, Forest Beckwith, Herman Brockman, E. M. Ward, Dr. Orella Puderer of St. Louis, Dr. C. Buchanan and C. Gregg of St. Louis, and Misses Victoria Rink, Natalia Fulda, Elma Brockman and Zera Schroeder.

Mrs. Scully Entertains.

A surprise linen shower was given Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Martin Scully, 538 North Twenty-sixth street, in honor of her niece, Miss Agnes Scully, whose marriage took place Wednesday night.

The Scully home was decorated with white roses, carnations and ropes of smilax. The fair young bride-to-be received many handsome pieces of linen. Those present were: Misses Jennie Finnegan, Sadie Dermody, Mamie Hayes, Margaret Collins, Florence Solloway, Anna Rooney, all of Collinsville, and Lizzie Bresnehan, Alice O'Connell, Mamie Costello, Mamie Fahey, Tessie Fox, Lena Stephens, Margaret Hogan, Edna O'Connell, Mamie Scully, Emma Kienzle, Ida Rosenberger, Lizzie O'Day, Gertrude Costello, Clara Wilson, Emma Lentz, Anna Scully, Elsie Scully; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Scully, James Kienzle, John Kerins, William Scully and Gus Kienzle.

TWO BULLETS IN HIS BRAIN

Baltimorean Who Attempted Suicide Astonishes Physicians by Recovering.

BALTIMORE, June 3.—On May 3 George Horst, 32 years old, an employe in a brewery here, attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself twice in the head. The bullets have not been removed, but to the amazement of physicians who have interested themselves in his case he is not only still living, but according to present indications will soon be well enough to be out of the house.

Of the bullets with which Horst attempted to end his life one entered just above the right ear, while the other entered just below the right temple. Ordinarily either bullet would have been sufficient to cause death, but in Horst's case they apparently resulted in nothing more serious than paralysis of the left and part of the right side, which paralysis is now disappearing.

At first it was decided to probe for the bullets, but this plan was abandoned, the physicians in attendance saying they can be removed at any time in the future. Horst's mind began to clear rapidly after the second day, and five days after the shooting he smoked a cigar. His memory is perfectly good and he understands everything going on about him.

SACRED HEART TO REPEAT PLAY

On account of the success attending the presenting of "St. Elizabeth or the Miracle of the Roses," a spectacular play of the fifteenth century, given by the members of Sacred Heart parish in East St. Louis last Wednesday evening, and the fact that the seating capacity of the theater was taxed to accommodate all who had bought tickets, the play will be repeated tonight at the Broadway Theater with the same cast of characters.

The play gave universal satisfaction and the local talent, who are all members of Sacred Heart parish, received well merited applause.

The costumes and scenery are typical of the century in which the spectacle is supposed to take place.

Those who have seen the play praise it highly and say that the talent shown by those who take part, from that of Elizabeth, the Countess, taken by Miss Maria Strueber, throughout the cast, including the minor parts, make it one of the best amateur performances ever given in East St. Louis.

The cast of characters follows:

Elizabeth, a Countess, Marie Streuber; Sophia, Elizabeth's mother-in-law, Mayme Murray; Rosamund, Countess of Falkenstein, Estelle Klingler; Hedwig, lady in waiting, Lola Lenihan; Bertha, lady in waiting, Irene Vennemann; Wiborad, a servant, Lucy Binnette; Castellan, John Hallihan; Hermit, Leo Brearton; Messenger, Tommy O'Donnell; An Angel, Essie Donovan; Herald, John Timlin; Empress, Frances Timlin; Kun Gunda, Rose Brearton; Gertrude, May Boyne; Gottlinde, Loretta Hilly; Gertrude, Gertrude Elmer; Adeline, Fern Hallihan; Liebwarta, Annie Downey; Gerlinde, Genevieve Monihan; Martha, Mayme Lenschaw.

Maids of honor, Misses Campbell, Monahan, Hallihan, Murphy, Brearton, Lynn, Elmer, Larkins and Halloran.

Pages—Eddie O'Day, Eddie Goff, Tommy O'Shea and James Cullen.

Between the acts a vocal solo will be given by J. Nordhaus, with Miss Pearl Adolph, accompanist, and vocal duet by Miss Elizabeth Marsh and I. Howard, Miss Julia McLean, accompanist.

YIDDISH DRAMA IS EMIGRATING

Strictures Upon Their Plays Are Driving Europe's Jewish Actors to America.

Unable longer to tolerate the strictures put upon it by the hostile Governments of Europe, the Yiddish drama, root, stock and branch, is emigrating to America.

So says Emanuel Lowenwirth, a Jewish player and playwright, who is at the head of a Yiddish troupe which is producing melodramas at the Crawford Theater for the 20,000 Jews of the St. Louis Ghetto.

"There are nine Yiddish theatrical troupes traveling in the United States now, and there will be twice as many within another year,' says Lowenwirth. "The whole Jewish drama is coming over here just as fast as it can emigrate. The strictures put upon it in Europe amounts to an attempt to stamp it out.

"The Jewish people of the Continent are great play-lovers and enthusiastic theatergoes, being in this respect entirely different from the Jews of Palestine, who care nothing about a theatrical performance and never go to one.

"A Jewish drama has naturally struggled for existence in all of Central Europe, where there are such masses of people speaking the Jewish tongue; but the hostility of the Governments has been so severe that the Jewish players have finally found it necessary to leave for England and America, where they may play without police interference.

"The United States is attracting the most of them. Here we may enjoy freedom of speech, a wonderful privilege, I can assure you, for in Central Europe the Yiddish drama is forbidden to touch upon anything political, to have such stage characters as policemen, soldiers, etc., to even mention the names of rulers, to satirize, burlesque or even touch with humor the policies and people of governments, or, in fact, to enjoy any of those privileges which are so common over here that nothing is thought of them.

"No drama can exist without them, so the Jewish theater is emigrating to America."

Plays for the Ghetto.

There is novelty in the season of Yiddish drama at the Crawford. It is unlike any other that St. Louis has seen. Though there have been a few Jewish theatrical troupes here ere this, none of them have occasioned such a stir as has this.

This is the theatrical season over in the great Ghetto which has its center around Eighth and Wash streets. It is the time when the freedom of this wonderful country to which they have come vouchsafes to them one of its most precious privileges—to go and see a play produced in their own tongue.

Naturally, the only phase of life of which the Ghetto knows is the melodramatic, and it is melodrama that is produced for them at the Crawford. The manner of doing it is unique. There are no favorite plays, no manuscripts, no playwrights drawing royalties, no classics, no plays by Shakspeare or his counterpart in the Jewish race. They do not even produce the plays of Israel Zangwill.

What they do is this: Emanuel Lowenwirth and his brother, Samuel, are ingenious young men. They read the newspapers for subjects for plays. They find stories from life which are adaptable to the stage, and they plan a play. Their two sisters play with them. The quartet goes to the stage and arranges the parts and the beginnings and ends of the acts. Then they rely upon each other's intelligence to fill in the dialogue.

"My cue is when some one else stops talking," says Emanuel Lowenwirth, discussing this interesting manner of producing a play. "We understand each other so thoroughly that we do not interfere in dialogue. We never repeat a play."

Pretty Headliners on This Week's Bill at the New Empire Garden

DELZELL SISTERS.

Some time ago they read one of the adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Its dramatic possibilities struck them, and they produced it within a few days. They all read the story carefully and discussed together the strong situations. Jewish melodrama, like our own, bounds from one climax to another, being nothing more or less than an exciting story told upon the stage. Such plays, it may be guessed, are not hard to produce, and these Yiddish players have done it until it is an easy matter for them. They occasionally keep each other in some ignorance as to what they are going to do next.

"One of the graduates of the Jewish drama is now a fine success in the English theaters of America," says Lowenwirth. "He is Jacob P. Adler, who receives $1000 in Proctor's vaudeville houses for playing the third act of 'The Merchant of Venice.' "

Lowenwirth says the language they speak upon the stage is a broken mixture of German and Hebrew such as is used by all the Jews of Central Europe. He says:

"The Jews of the St. Louis Ghetto do not speak the Hebrew tongue. A Hebrew from Palestine would not understand them. What they do use is a mixture of German and Hebrew. For that reason, a German would understand our plays. We use quite a good deal of English, too, for there are a great many English expressions which are well understood by our audiences, even that part of them which does not speak English."

* * *

A sort of Four Musketeers arrangement exists among the Bedouin Arabs, the eight Arab acrobats who are out at Forest Park Highlands this week. They are their own managers, and they divide their earnings equally. Seven members of the troupe come from Fez, Morocco, and the eighth comes from another of the cities of Morocco. Some of them have been coming to this country for 10 or 12 years, and one of them, Simon Bonomor, has become an American citizen and has located, with his family, at Chicago. They formerly had an American manager, but discovered that they could dispense with him and increase their earnings. The leader is Prince Mali Ali, who is a cousin of the Sultan of Morocco. He is of royal birth, about 27 years of age, and follows tumbling for pure love of the sport. No one that has seen these splendid fellows can have failed to observe this wonderful leader, whose quickness is so surprising that it often arouses an audience to shouts of applause. The Prince was a wonderful athlete in his youth, and his love for this sort of thing became so strong that he has followed it professionally for some time, athletes being held in such high favor among the Arabs that his family has raised no great objection to his avocation. He is considered the finest tumbler in the world, and the other seven members of the troupe award him an extra $50 per week for his leadership and superior excellence. At home he is known as the "whirlwind of the desert." Bonomor may be easily recalled as the comedian of the troupe—the Arab who leaps and squeals so much. Singularly, these Arabs are all quite small, despite their appearance of being big men on the stage. Bonomor is the biggest man of the troupe, and he is but 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 141 pounds. The strong man is Saad Dahduh, who is also 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 136 pounds. He easily supports the weight of his seven associates. Dr. Osler's old-age theory receives a hard blow in the case of Haji Abak, who is 55 years old and can whirl like a dervish. All of them speak some English. Others of the names of the members of the troupe are Mohammed, Haj Hassan, Tagula Tufanisk and Tamagi Tufanisk.

* * *

E. S. Willard and his company sailed for London last week. They will return in the fall, and will add to their repertoire "The Fool's Revenge," which was one of the favorite plays of Edwin Booth.

* * *

Miss Blanche Bates will spend the summer in Europe. Her plans for next season have not been announced.

Chicago can embrace a stupid, disgusting musical piece quicker and hug it longer than any other city in America, but it seems that even Chicago is finding fault with some of the summer productions arranged for its entertainment this season. The critics are unanimous in the declaration that "Kafoozelum," the first of four new musical pieces to open there for the summer, is unworthy, uninteresting and hurtful to the theater generally. Moreover, a reporter of the Dramatic Mirror (and these, with very few exceptions, are always careful not to write in a critical capacity, but to shovel out honey and country correspondence gush) complains that the display of feminine anatomy upon the stage has reached the novelty limit in "Kafoozelum" and should be abated as offensive to good taste and decency. The indictment of the production and of some of the people in it has been so severe that Dave Lewis, the principal player, has sued Amy Leslie for $10,000 and her paper, the News, for a similar amount. He alleges libel and all the crimes in the calendar. When Lewis was here his work as the royal chef was just as fierce as a mad-dog, so we are inclined to take sides against him in this fight with the critics. His grievance against Leslie seems to amount to a belief that the column roasting she gave him could have been condensed into half a column without bending the column rules. St. Louis has caught and been bitten by so many of these Chicago musical pieces that we always flinch when we hear that something is coming down here from Chicago. The probability of its worthlessness if it has run all summer in Chicago has become so generally accepted down here that theatrical people have sometimes made desperate efforts to keep it scret that the piece ever ran in Chicago. Of course, despite the critics and the abhorrence of the better element of playgoers in Chicago, "Kafoozelum" and others of its ilk will succeed and run all summer, and just as sure as death they will all float down the drainage canal to St. Louis next season and all others to the long list of similar indictments which we have been compelled to return against our sister city. As long as Chicago, even improving a little in its taste, as it seems to be, continues operating as a summer musical show factory, the desirable entente cordiale between Chicago and St. Louis is impossible. A few more like "The Royal Chef," "The Isle of Spice," "The Forbidden Land," etc., and we will steam up the canal with our armored harbor boat and sink a few fire boats in the Chicago River.

William G. Stewart, who was the Davy Crockett of the Delmar "Louisiana" last year, has been sued for divorce and alimony in New York City by Helen B. Stewart. Mrs. Stewart wants a counsel fee of $200 and alimony of $30 a week until she can secure absolute divorce. The couple were married in 1895. Mrs. Stewart alleges that her husband's affections have been alienated by Hattie Fox, a St. Louis girl and niece of Della Fox. Miss Fox was also a member of the "Louisiana" company. Stewart denies the allegations.

James J. Corbett thinks he has just as much right to come into theatrical prominence from the prize ring as Sir Henry Irving had to come from an obscure place in a chorus, as Mansfield had to come from behind a dry goods counter in Boston and as Nat Goodwin had to come from cheap burlesque—as Corbett puts these beginnings of stage notables. He tells Burns Mantle, a Chicago critic, that he heard Wilton Lackaye make a speech roasting prize fighters and divorced women of the stage, and he wished the that he could write, that he might tell Mr. Lackaye "a few things."

Of course, that's the pugilists point of view. He always sees things from the prize ring, and he cannot understand why the defenders of the respectability of the stage object to him as an actor. He thinks that only one objection can stand—that he is not a good actor. He offers evidence that he is a good actor. Prize fighters may be knocked over the ropes and banged against the ceiling, as James J. has been, but no one ever knocks the conceit out of them. They consider themselves the equals in respectability of Irving, Sothern, Willard—or, for that matter, all saints and angels. James J. Corbett unquestionably is a very good actor, but we don't want to see him act out of his sphere—the vaudeville house and the home of melodrama. His evident belief that men were created equal is good as far as it goes, but people who understand these things by reason of commanding a "non-pug" point of view have long ago supplemented this old proverb and made it to read "Men are created equal, but some of them take to prize fighting."

LEE SHUBERT IS PROSTRATED

Grief Had So Marked Him That His Friends Were Shocked When They Saw Him.

Lee Shubert is home from Europe and is prostrated with grief over the death of his brother, Sam S. Shubert. Mr. Shubert was in London when his brother was killed and immediately he heard of it he collapsed. He continued ill, but was strong enough after a fortnight to start for New York. When he stepped from the steamer two days ago his friends were shocked to see him. Always frail, he seemed but a shadow of his former self. He collapsed again immediately after reaching New York and some concern was felt for him.

Mr. Shubert and his brother were devoted to each other. Knowing how it was between them, their intimates, upon hearing the news of the death of Sam, immediately thought of the blow it would strike Lee. The boys went to New York together from Rochester. They began together with nothing, planned together, worked together and prospered together. When Sam was killed in the wreck at Harrisburg Lee was in London arranging for the opening of the Waldorf Theater, which the Shuberts had secured.

So much depends upon Lee Shubert, now the executive head of the Shubert firm, that the state of his health may vitally effect much that had been planned by the firm when Sam was alive. Lee Shubert is almost unknown here in St. Louis. The other members of the firm, Sam. S. and J. J., have always looked after the affairs of their local theater, the Garrick, and Lee Shubert has not been seen here since he came as the traveling manager of some of the Shubert shows, some five or six years ago.

My hat is off to the dramatic critic of the London Daily Express, who has dared to say something which I made bold to exclaim in these columns last January. I was regarded as heretic for saying that Mr. Mansfield should be doing something more worthy of his genius than going about the country playing Shylock, which is so familiar that no one cares to see it. I pointed out that of all the plays in the Mansfield repertoire when he was here last January, "The Merchant of Venice" alone drew a small house and made the audience yawn. It struck me that Mansfield ought not to be doing something 300 years old, which is so well known that school children can sit in the gallery and anticipate the lines of the players and recite in chorus with Shylock the old familiar "Hath not a Jew," etc. Now comes the dramatic critic of the London Daily Express and says:

> Hamlet playing is, of course, an absolute disease, though I have an uncomfortable feeling that if it were necessary to pay royalties for the performance of this curiously unpleasant play fewer prominent actors would feel themselves inspired to alter the interminable soliloquy.
>
> Novelty is, I believe, the very life blood of the theater, and that is the reason why Mr. J. M. Barrie, with his original point of view and his quaintly unique manner of telling a story, has come as a boon and a blessing to the English playgoer. I shall want a great deal of convincing that there is any considerable section of the public that really has any desire ever to see a performance of "Hamlet" again. It is all so familiar and so trite.
>
> We have seen every possible variation and have suffered from every possible eccentricity of appearance and pronunciation. Most of us have ourselves recited long passages from the play in our school days, and even now are not infrequently lured into listening to similar performances by the smirking children of our gushing lady friends.
>
> For my part, despite the beauty of the language which Shakspeare puts into his mouth, I regard Hamlet as a very tiresome and a very ill-bred young man. I do not approve of his conduct either toward Ophelia or to his mother; and if I had been his uncle I should have quietly had him put out of the way before he was allowed to be such a terrible nuisance. In one thing only has Hamlet my sympathy, and that is when he kills Polonius, who was even a greater bore than himself.
>
> But because this play is written by Shakspeare, all sorts of wonderful theories are spun round it, all sorts of traditions are regarded with veneration, all sorts of readings are tolerated; while, as a matter of fact, to the common, natural man, with sufficient courage to say what he thinks, "Hamlet" is merely a very beautiful telling of a very silly tale.
>
> It is this artificial veneration that does induce people to pay to see the play performed, and that makes it, since there are no royalties to pay, a possible financial speculation.

Musical Company at Delmar Will Produce "The Rounders" Next.

The closing performance of "The Girl From Paris" will be given at the Delmar Garden this afternoon and evening. Monday evening a new bill, "The Rounders," will be put on. The principal parts in the cast will be taken as follows:

Thea	Eleanor Kent
Duke de Paty du Clam	Harry Short
Maginnis Pasha	H. Herman West
Marquis de Baccarat	Richard Ridgely
Priscilla, Wife of the Marquis	Pearl Revare
Sigfried Gotterdammerung	Fred Runnels
Stella Giltedge	Nellie V. Nichols
Mme. Seraphine, Thea's Aunt	Bessie Fairbairn
Joseph, Waiter	William Clifton

"The Rounders" was first brought out at the New York Casino with Dan Daly playing the part of the Duke de Paty de Clam, and it was a big hit. It will be played through the week, and next Sunday afternoon will give way to "The Girl From Dixie."

The opening week at Delmar was one of the most successful in the history of the garden. The attendance at the initial performance last Sunday night was the largest of any opening performance of the resort. There were also very large crowds on other evenings during the week. Nearly all the principals in the company have already established themselves as favorites.

"The Butterflies" by the Rujaero Troupe at the Imperial This Week.

The Imperial Theater presents this week, commencing this (Sunday) afternoon, and with the usual daily 25-cent matinees, the Rujaero stock company in "The Butterflies," or "Moths," a dramatization of Ouida's novel.

The Rujaero company has been particularly successful the past three weeks, each bill being presented with care and cast very creditably.

"The Butterflies," or "Moths," tells a story of court life in Russia, how a Butterfly mother will even bargain her daughter to gain a position in the social world. Miss Rujaero will play the leading role and will be assisted by her company, including Eloise French, Robert Harland, Katherine Tabor, Leon McReynolds, John Gordon, Elysian Holmes, Leora Spellmeyer and others, while the scenic surrounding will be first-class.

The Imperial is always cool and comfortable, and every convenience is provided for its patrons during the heated spell.

Fine Bill for Police Benefit Week Out at Forest Park Highlands.

Forest Park Highlands, where the annual Police Relief Association benefit takes place this week, beginning today, has one of the best bills of the season. As is usual with the police, they select only the best that is offered in vaudeville with which to entertain their friends and patrons, and this season's program excels all others. It is headed by Klein, Ott Bros. and Nickerson, perhaps the best musical act in vaudeville. Then follow Prof. Powell's mannikins, a wonder world of mechanical dolls; the Empire Comedy Four, Marco Twins, the Ford Brothers and Sisters and Avery Strakosch, the prima donna. The biograph will also be introduced this week with a set of pictures appropriate for the occasion.

"Pink Dominoes" at West End Heights by the Washburn Comedians.

The offering this week at the West End Heights, commencing with the matinee today, will be the clever farcical comedy "Pink Dominoes," adapted from the French. The play is of the light, breezy order, full of laughable complications and unexpected situations and the stock company is said to be particularly suited to the requirements of the play.

This company is making a splendid impression on the patrons of the West End Heights and the members are becoming local favorites.

The attendance has been very good, despite the cool weather, and under favorable conditions this company will no doubt attract crowded houses.

Miss Helen Lackaye and Mr. Harry Burkhardt will be entrusted with the leading parts, while Mr. Seay, Mr. Soraghan, Miss La Mont and Miss Wayne will have prominent parts.

The Groh Family of Acrobats Are an Added Feature at Suburban Garden.

"Funny Mr. Holligan" is the title of the musical extravaganza which will receive its first performance at Suburban Garden this afternoon. Although similar in name, it bears no resemblance nor relation to the many versions of the much-caricatured "Happy Hooligan." During the past week Miss Hazel Boyne, a petite and clever soubret, late of the Eva Tanguay company, has joined this organization, together with Richard Thomas, and will be seen in leading parts. The piece, as usual, is void of plot, but gives many opportunities for catchy music and pretty dances. A most novel and new feature will be the introduction of the "Babes of Joyland." The "Cane dance," another new dancing effect, will also be produced for the first time here. It gives opportunity for some beautiful costuming. James Leslie, as Funny Holligan, and John B. Wills, as I. Will Ketchum, will be seen in the leading comedy roles. Alvora, the female impersonator, will again endeavor to gain the favor of his audiences with a new and novel dance. The balance of the company will all be seen in minor roles.

A specially added feature of this week's performance will be the first local appearance of the famous Groh family, contortionists and slack wire performers, who have just returned from a successful Australian trip.

Weil and his band will give the first band concert heard in St. Louis since the Fair at Tower Grove Park this afternoon. The versatile bandmaster may be counted on to give his host of admirers splendid musical entertainment at Tower Grove, after his long rest during the winter months. Today's program follows:

March—"Yankee Grit," Holzman.
Overture, "Bohemian Girl," Balfe.
Spring Morning Serenade, Lacombe.
Gems from "Faust," Gounod.
Pan-American, Herbert.
Collection of our popular songs—Listen to the Big Brass Band, In Dreamland, Kate Kearney, If I Should, In a Birch Canoe, You're the Flower of My Heart, Sweet Adeline, Good-By Little Girl Good-By.
Intermission.
Selection, "Torquato Tasso," Verdi.
(a) A Japo Rhapsody, "Karama," Gray; (b) "Moonlight," Moret.
Scenes from "The Royal Chef," Jerome—Let Me Go Back, In the Morning, O'Reilly, The Tale of the Tailless Frog, What Colored Eyes Do You Love, Old Mother Goose, In Chicago, I Wonder What's the Matter With the Man in the Moon.
Waltz Movement, "Amoureuse," Berger.
Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin," Wagner.
Melodies from "Mam'selle Napoleon," Luders.

Professor Herman Barosh, the well-known instructor of advanced vocal methods, will give his annual concert next Tuesday evening, June 6, 1905, at Odeon Recital Hall, corner of Grand and Finney avenues.

This concert is for the purpose of showing the skill and progress of his pupils. Among the latter who will appear that evening may be mentioned Miss Emma Reineke, who made such a favorable impression last year, also Misses White, Tasche and Guest. Messrs. Lawrence, Nietner, Plewa and Reiss will also take part in vocal numbers, and Prof. Barosh himself will delight those present with a few selections.

Tickets can be procured at Bollman Bros. or at the Odeon, room U.

M. COQUELIN TO BUILD A FIREPROOF THEATER.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, June 3.—M. Coquelin, the distinguished comedian, has revived his project for a model theater, which he first mooted two years ago.

His theater is to be so constructed that neither smoke nor fire can enter nor inconvenience his audience, and that it can be cleared in less than two minutes without any danger of a crush.

M. Coquelin and his architect, M. Binet, have the plans all ready, and a site has been secured. When the theater is erected they have offered to set it on fire, and to shut themselves up in it to show how absolutely proof against fire it is.

The theater will seat 3000 persons, and the seats will be arranged in tiers on an incline. The top tier will consist of a row of boxes, to which a special staircase leads.

The whole theater will be divided into sections, which will be approached by separate staircases and in case of panic each section of the audience will leave by a separate way.

M. Coquelin proposes to ask the municipality of Paris and the Government to grant subsidies for the building of his theater.

ROME, June 3.—A dangerous anarchist has just left New York for Naples, pledged to assassinate King Victor of Italy, according to information received by the police here. The choice of an assassin is said to have been made by lot. All arrangements have been completed for the suspect's arrest as soon as he lands on Italian soil.

BRODIE DUKE SEEKS DIVORCE

Tobacco King Charges Statutory Offense in Proceeding Against Bride of Six Months.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Brodie L. Duke, the tobacco king, is suing his wife, Mrs. Alice Webb Duke, for a divorce. Service was secured on her here today. Mr. Duke bases his suit on statutory charges.

The Dukes were married last December. The wedding was immediately followed by Mr. Duke's arrest, at the instance of members of his family, on the claim that his mind was affected.

Though the tobacco magnate was subsequently released, under a habeas corpus writ to the sanitarium to which he had been committed, his property is still held by trustees.

Twenty-Year-Old Bride Forced 90-Year-Old Husband to Make His Will in Her Favor.

KEPT IT HERSELF IN BOX

Strange Melange of Matrimony and Business in an Amherst, Mass., Home.

AMHERST, Mass., June 3.—Mrs. Oren Williams, 23 years old, widow of Oren Williams, who died at the 94, has already begun to enjoy the snug fortune which became hers when Williams ceased to breathe. The brief matrimonial experience of Mr. and Mrs. Williams is the subject of spicy gossip, which does not disturb in the least the composure of Mrs. Williams. Mrs. Williams admits that she married Williams for his money. She buried him the day after he died, and she does not propose to wear mourning.

"Williams has lost his head completely," said neighbors when he married Miss Alice Baker last September. Others expressed themselves in more forcible and less complimentary language. "I think she will make me a good wife," said Williams to a Post-Dispatch correspondent.

It is said that some of the unkind remarks concerning Williams were inspired by persons who were trying to make a match between the nonagenarian and a widow of 50 odd years. Williams thought kindly of the opportunity until he met Miss Baker, whom he married within two weeks. When the promoters of the other match upbraided him, Williams replied with spirit: "I want an heir. I don't propose to have the name of Williams perish when I die."

Mrs. Williams did not accept her aged husband unconditionally. She required him to will his property to her, inspected the document critically and laid it away in a little tin trunk. Married life did not prove one grand, sweet song in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Williams. The nonagenarian spent much of his time in the town hall, where he expressed dissatisfaction with the domestic arrangements in the Williams household. With or without cause, he manifested every symptom of a much henpecked husband. Williams' first wife left a large property, of which he received the income, amounting to about $1200 per year. The second Mrs. Williams saw that the money was spent in ways of her own devising. Williams would readily comply with his wife's requests, and then hasten to the town hall to grumble.

A few weeks prior to his death Williams assumed an unwonted cheerfulness. He had decided, he said, to apply for a divorce in June. The specific grounds on which the action was to be based were not clear. Williams averred that his wife insisted that they should live apart, though they occupied the same house.

Mrs. Williams is the daughter of Albert J. Baker, a wealthy Shutesbury farmer. She is a blonde of medium height, attractive in face and figure and of entertaining personality. She answered Mr. Williams' advertisement for a housekeeper and Williams proposed to her in the second or third sentence he uttered.

One of her reasons for accepting Williams was that a chum of hers married a Hartford (Conn.) octogenarian and was living happily with him. Previous to her marriage Mrs. Williams was cashier in the restaurant of a Springfield hotel. She enjoyed few luxuries and there was nothing left of her wages above the bare cost of living.

Williams was estimated to be worth $10,000. The income from his wife's property was more than sufficient for him to live upon. If Williams lived five years his widow would receive compensation at the rate of $21,000 a year. If he lived a shorter period the return would be even larger. This was the basis on which Williams' bride made her calculations.

Mrs. Williams would like to break the will of her late husband's first wife. Relatives of Williams, it is said, propose to contest Williams' will. Williams' attorney is quoted as saying that he is unable to see how the imperturbable Mrs. Willliams can be dispossessed.

THANKS FOR PARISHIONERS.

Rev Fr. Long to Express Gratitude for Benefit Entertainment.

Rev. Father J. S. Long will thank his parishioners today for their efforts in behalf of the entertainment given for the benefit of the parish at Northwest Liederkranz Hall Wednesday evening. The proceeds will be used to pay part of the indebtedness on the 50x100 property where Father Long has his church, parochial residence and school.

Father Long has been ill for some time, but the work done by the people of his parish helped his convalescence.

Miss Neoma O'Brien who, though not a member of the parish, served as general manager of the entertainment and directed all the work, will also be thanked by Father Long.

It was due to Miss O'Brien's efforts that the entertainment was such a success.

Much excitement was caused by the distribution of the attendance prizes. Miss Teresa Dean was given the sewing machine and Messrs. Owen McInerney and John Neaf won the annual baseball tickets.

Rev. Father Smith, curate of the parish, assisted in making it possible for the participants in the program to acquit themselves well.

STONES HURLED AT HOUSE BY UNSEEN HANDS

Object of Mysterious Bombardment Sets Out in Open Space So Far From Shelter as to Indicate That Catapults Are Used.

NEIGHBORS WILL FORM POSSE TO PROBE MYSTERY

One Theory Is That Men Who Want to Buy Farm Are Employing This Means to Get Possession of It.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FELICITY, O., June 3.—The entire community in this neighborhood is worked up over the mysterious stoning of the home of A. G. Bartlett, a prominent farmer, who lives on the outskirts of town. For several weeks the family has been startled at intervals by heavy stones rattling against their home, while of late the aim of their persecutors seems to have improved, and windows have been broken, while several of Mr. Bartlett's children have been struck and seriously injured by the missiles.

Where the stones come from or who throws them is the mystery that has not as yet been solved, and seems to baffle detection. The Bartlett home stands in a clearing and is 250 yards from any woods or heavy undergrowth that might conceal the persons who throw the missiles, and, as many of the stones weigh several pounds each, it is beyond possibility that they were thrown by hand from that distance.

The fact of the strange bombardment has become known for miles about, and hundreds of persons have visited the Bartlett home to inspect the work of the vandals.

The only conclusion that has been arrived at is that some sort of catapult or spring gun is being used to throw the stones from a great distance. This is considered the most plausible explanation from the fact that of late the stones have been striking the marks aimed at.

Since the stoning began, Bartlett and his family have made every effort to discover whence the missiles come and by whom or what they are propelled, but all their efforts have been unavailing. The missiles always fly in the daytime, and since last Thursday the house has been stoned daily. Yesterday a huge rock struck a kitchen window and carried sash and all into the room. The family at once made a search, assisted by neighbors, but were unable to locate the source of the bombardment. There were several neighbors in the yard at tne time when the rock struck the window, and though all had been waiting and watching for just such an occurrence, no one saw where the stone started from, and the searchers were more mystified than ever.

Friday one of Bartlett's children was struck in the back of the head with a large stone and knocked unconscious, while the same day Miss Anna Olmstead, a neighbor, happened to be driving past the house when a huge stone just grazed her horse's head and then fell beside the roadway. She looked in the direction she supposed the stone came from, but could see no one, and the distance to shelter seemed entirely too great for the rock to have been hurled that far by human agency alone.

Bartlett is considered a good citizen and is not known to have an enemy. Many were of the opinion that some one who desired to secure his farm cheap was doing the stoning, but, while Bartlett admits that a proposition has been made to him for the sale of his place, he declares that the prospective purchaser is a friend who would not resort to anything of that sort.

Residents of Felicity will organize a posse to watch the Bartlett home, in an effort to discover the mysterious source of the bombardment, while Bartlett declares that he will secure the services of detectives to unravel the mystery, if possible, and bring the culprits to justice.'

SHATY SURGERY IS SCORED BY EXPERT

Views of Prof. Schweninger That Knife Is Too Often Used Creates Stir.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—The statements of Prof. Schweninger of Berlin, who was medical adviser to Prince Bismarck, that recourse is had to operations far too frequently nowadays, and that the physician s pushed to one side by the "surgical handicraftsman," have created considerable interest among members of the medical profession in London.

A noted physician told a Post-Dispatch representative today that a revulsion of feeling is taking place in regard to the use of the knife.

"Some years ago," he said, "Sir Felix Semon created a stir by hinting that laryngologists were making too frequent use of the knife. As an example of the revulsion of feeling of which I have spoken, take adenoids—a very common complaint with children.

"It is admitted by many able surgeons that operations have been far too frequent in the past, and now there is a tendency to see what treatment, with change of conditions and air, can do for children suffering in this way.

"It is the same with all obstructions of the throat and nose. There has been too much indiscriminate cutting."

An equally well-known surgeon took Prof. Schweninger to task for saying that "because the functions of the appendix are unknown to us, the organ must be unnecessary, and we cut it out whenever anything is wrong with it."

"The medical man who does not cut out a diseased appendix is wronging his patient," he said.

"I am quite certain that there are not too many operations for the disease. When the appendix shows signs of creating trouble it should be removed while the trouble is not serious, otherwise it may be too late."

AUTO THIEF CHASED 26 HOURS BY PURSUERS, ALSO IN AN AUTO

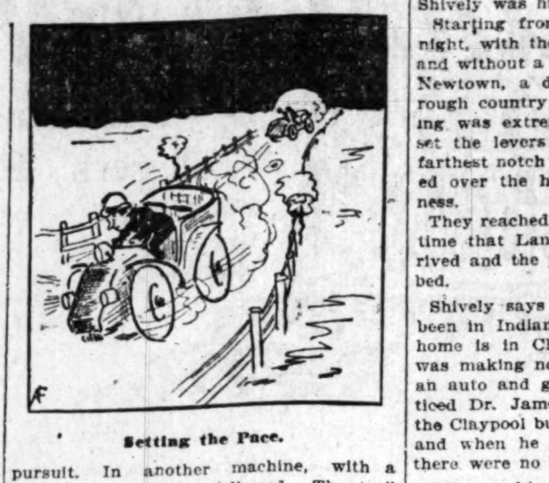
Over 200-Mile Run, He Is Captured and Machine Regained—Made Indiana Country Folk Gasp at His Speed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 3.—After 26 hours of continual riding, during which time they traveled more than 200 miles over country roads, Captain of Detectives Kinney and Officers Lowe and Lancaster reached Indianapolis with Walter Shively, who is charged with stealing the large touring car belonging to Dr. Henry Jameson. The machine was taken from the Newton Claypool building.

Shively was trapped by the officers near Newtown, Ind., after they had chased him all day and night. When the detectives found him he was asleep in a farm house and Dr. Jameson's automobile was standing in a shed near the house.

About noon Thursday the detectives heard that a man was going west on the National road in the machine. Capt. Kinney, with Lowe and Lancaster, started in pursuit. In another machine, with a driver, Dr. Jameson followed. The trail led to Crawfordsville. At that place, while the officers were telephoning to surrounding towns, Shively got ahead of them and later the trail was lost.



Setting the Pace.

The officers began scouring the country around Waynetown and Newtown and late Thursday night they received word that the thief was at a farm house two miles from Newtown. Capt. Kinney and Detective Lowe were then at Crawfordsville, while Lancaster and Dr. Jameson were supposed to be near the house where Shively was hiding.

Starting from Crawfordsville at midnight, with the rain beating in their faces and without a light, the officers headed for Newtown, a distance of 18 miles, over a rough country road. Although the traveling was extremely dangerous the officers set the levers of the big machine at the farthest notch and for an hour they pounded over the hills through the inky darkness.

They reached the farm house at the same time that Lancaster and Dr. Jameson arrived and the prisoner was taken from his bed.

Shively says he is a salesman and has been in Indianapolis for nine weeks. His home is in Chicago, he says, and as he was making no money he decided to steal an auto and go back home. He had noticed Dr. Jameson's machine in front of the Claypool building many nights, he said, and when he saw it Wednesday night there were no lights on it.

After making sure no one was near he lighted the lamps and, after starting the machine, jumped in. He took it to the west end of town and left it. Going back to the Imperial Hotel he collected his clothes, slept the rest of the night, and departed in the machine about noon Wednesday.

$250 RING IS LEFT BY PICKPOCKET IN GETTING 20 CENTS FROM WOMAN

Victim Was Too Frightened to Scream and It Was Lucky She Did Not.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Here is an instance where "pickpocketing" paid the "pickpocketed." The profit to the "victim" of the slippery-fingered individual was the equivalent to $250—a ring set with a dozen diamonds. The thief's gain was goods and chattels worth considerably under 30 cents.

Miss Frances Galbraith of Covington, Ky., arrived in Chicago to spend a week with a relative living at 545 Dearborn avenue. After all the gossip about home folks and home doings, which carried well into the next morning, the visitor went downtown to attend a matinee with a friend. Her friend was a South-sider, and Miss Galbraith went north alone after the play. She was a passenger on one of the "crowded hour" North State street cars, getting the last seat vacant. She had hard work to squeeze into the narrow space.

A block or so north of the river she began to squirm to avoid what seemed to be unneccessary crowding on the part of a well-dressed young man who sat at her left. Presently she became conscious of the fact that the young man was a pickpocket, for she felt a gentle tugging at her jacket pocket, from which protruded to the extent of about three inches a silver-trimmed pocketbook. She looked straight ahead and held her breath. She was too frightened to cry out, or too averse to police court notoriety to call the attention of strap-hangers to the man who, she knew, was stealing her purse.

ONLY 20 CENTS
F

A Bad Bargain.

A block farther north the young man squeezed his way out of the car, and Miss Galbraith saw him cast a glance backward and strike up a merry slip down the cross street. It was not until Division street had been reached, where she left the car, that she made sure the pocketbook had been stolen. The pocketbook was gone, but while her hand was in the pocket she felt something that she knew she had not put there. It was the $250 diamond ring!

The ring was for a big finger, and when Miss Galbraith recalled the fact that the pickpocket was a thin, wiry person she knew that the valuable circle had been too large to stay on his finger, and concluded forthwith that he had stolen it from some other person.

Miss Galbraith's purse contained the inevitable stock of shirtwaist samples, four 2-cent stamps, 20 cents in nickels, a manicurist's business address and a hairpin or two. Still, she was sorry that she lost her purse.

ENGLISH CHURCH MAY SPLIT OVER DIVORCE ISSUE

London Diocesan Conference's Decision That No Divorced Person, Guilty or Innocent, May Wed, Prophetic of Trouble.

DISESTABLISHMENT ONE OF THE POSSIBLE RESULTS

Liberation Society Prepares to Utilize the Conference's Decision to Bring About the Separation of Church and State.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—The decision of the London Diocesan Conference that no divorced person, whether guilty or innocent, shall be remarried in an Anglican church during the lifetime of the other party to the suit, threatens to bring the Church of England into direct conflict with the State.

It also threatens to be fruitful of dissensions within the church itself, and to be a powerful weapon in the hands of the party of disestablishment.

The position is clearly shown in the two following interviews. One is with a barrister well known for his intimate knowledge of church law; the other is with Prebendary Villiers of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, one of the most uncompromising opponents of the remarriage of divorced persons in the church. The barrister said today:

"It is clear that, although the Act recognizes the conscientious views of the clergyman in the case of the remarriage of the guilty party, it does not recognize any such views in the case of the remarriage of the innocent party.

"In fact, the position of the innocent party is left by the divorce act on exactly the same level as that of any ordinary person. The rights of the innocent party are in no way impaired, and, therefore, the innocent party is legally justified in requiring his parish clergyman to marry him in the parish church.

"This raises another and most important point. For if a clergyman refuses to solemnize a marriage which is legal according to the law of the land, he is in no way protected by pleading that he would be breaking the canonical law of the church.

"If he refuses, in fact, to solemnize such a marriage, he is breaking the law of the land, and immediately becomes subject to pains and penalties which would include the possibility of a criminal prosecution.

"Lastly, I would ask you to point out the tremendous importance of the impending conflict between the law and the clergy, for it is quite certain that there are several thousands of the clergy who are ready to refuse to remarry the innocent party in a successful divorce suit during the lifetime of the other party and are to this extent prepared to break the law of the land.

"Such a peg on which to hang a further argument for the disestablishment of the church will not be overlooked by the Liberation Society and the party of disestablishment, and I should not be in the least surprised if this question does not also split the church itself in two."

"You ask me," said the Rev. Prebendary Villiers, "for my opinion as to the remarriage of divorced persons. The one question for churchmen is: What is the law of the Church of England?

"On this subject Sir W. Phillimore once gave expression to an important opinion to the English Church Union in the following words: 'The law of the Church of England must be the law of the Church of the West. When did the Church of England part with the canon law of the Church of the West?'

"And there is no reason to doubt what that law is—namely, that marriage is indissoluble.

"As things are now a second marriage is purchasable by divorce, and divorce is purchasable by misconduct, and thus a man is able to profit by his own wrong.

"On several occasions I have refused the use of this church for such a marriage. So long as I am vicar of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, this church will never be used for the remarriage of either the guilty or the innocent party in a divorce suit."

LYONS POLICE STRIKE; INFANTRY PATROLS CITY.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LYONS, June 3.—The police force of this city of over half a million inhabitants has struck work and detachments of infantry are now policing the town.

Great dissatisfaction has been caused among the men by a measure extending the age limit at which they would be entitled to a pension. Small allowances on which they relied to eke out their slender salary of $15 a month have also been stopped.

This morning the Prefect sent for the members of the committee which the police had appointed to discuss their grievances, and in the most peremptory fashion dismissed them from the force.

When this fact became known the men on duty in the stations left their posts. For this some 220 men were immediately discharged. They in turn informed the members of the force on point and patrol duty. These also promptly left their posts.

The extraordinary scene was then witnessed of several hundred uniformed policemen holding an indignation meeting in one of the principal streets of the town, secure in the conviction that there was no power which could order them to "move on."

Later in the afternoon soldiers occupied the police stations and assumed point duty in the streets.

"I FOUND THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT CALM AND FIRM," SAYS SCHWAB

CHARLES M SCHWAB

Steel Magnate, Who Got the Contract to Rebuild the Czar's Shattered Navy, Says Nation, From Emperor Down, Is for Continuing the War.

BY JAMES CREELMAN,
Staff Correspondent of the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Fresh from his journey to St. Petersburg, which stirred the pens and tongues of two hemispheres, Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Co., declared that he could not talk of his mission to Russia.

"It is said that you have secured a contract to build a new navy for the Russians, Mr. Schwab?"

"I know that," he said. "I have read what the newspapers of England and America have printed, but it would be obviously improper for me to discuss the matter in public. I succeeded in accomplishing the object of my trip; more I cannot say just now.

"I will say this, though: I talked fully with the responsible men at the head of the Russian Government and I was greatly impressed by the courage and confidence with which they confront their present difficulties. The spirit of almost any other European nation would sink in the face of the tremendous fighting power suddenly displayed by Japan. But nothing that has happened in the Far East seems to have weakened the faith of the Russian Government in its ability to work out its problems successfully.

"In spite of the brilliant feats of Japanese arms, I found the Russian Government, from the Emperor down, calm, resolute and determined to go on with the war. There is something very wonderful in the stolid dignity and perseverance of that great Empire. It is doubtful whether any other country could bear the strain and show so little evidence of it as at the seat of authority."

"How long would it take the Bethlehem Steel Co. to furnish a new navy to a first-class nation?"

"About four years."

"Would that include first-class battleships?"

"Yes, battleships, with their armor, guns, projectiles and everything in shape to go into battle at once. We have already furnished one European nation with a complete warship, including even its officers. The Bethlehem Steel Co. is now able to turn out armor plate, guns, machinery and all other kinds of naval equipment enough to keep our own nine shipyards busy and to supply other yards as well. We expect to make it the greatest establishment of its kind in the world."

Everybody knows Mr. Schwab as the man whose genius reduced the steel-making industry to chemistry, the master spirit who rebuilt the Homestead Steel Works; the tireless worker who rose from poverty to be the inspiration of Mr. Carnegie's industrial empire, to be the first President of the United States Steel Corporation, and to build in New York a residence that will cost, when it is furnished, something like $10,000,000. But a new light is shed upon his character when it is remembered that this comparatively young man is in a position to go to the Government of one of the greatest empires and offer it the means of maintaining its flag on the seas.

Mr. Schwab was in vigorous health. His eyes shone and his cheeks glowed. He was the incarnation of strength and energy.

"The harder I work the better I feel," he said. "Hard work is the best medicine a man can find."

As the result of his trip through Europe he expressed the opinion that the business outlook of America was exceedingly bright for the future.

"The more I see of other countries the more I am convinced that the industrial and financial methods of Americans are falling into sound lines," said Mr. Schwab. "We are neither dragging nor drifting in this country. The massing of capital into large productive systems is not only steadying in its tendency, but it is bringing into close and helpful relations the creative and executive ability of a naturally inventive and industrious people. That means not only less waste in meaningless strife, but it also means development along lines of specialization. Our large forms of industrial organization enable us to grasp the largest and most complicated problems and to execute them more quickly than our foreign competitors.

"We may pay higher wages than Europe, but we have the advantage of a protective tariff, and, drawing to us more intelligent and energetic workmen, we are able to produce results in a shorter time, and time is a great and, often, decisive factor in this restless, constructive age."

"Did your observation of industrial and financial affairs in Europe suggest no thought that in such matters America was moving too rapidly or that we had reached the limits of safety in financial and industrial organization?"

"Nonsense. Our business is in the hands of the ablest and most farseeing men of any country or any age. We have almost unlimited natural resources. In some respects, as in the steel industry, for instance, we command a supply of raw materials which the world never dreamed of before—and this at a time when cities and towns in all progressive communities are being rebuilt, steel taking the place of wood and masonry—we are furnished for generations to come with the supplies necessary for leadership in an age of invention. We have a population matchless in intelligence, strength and industry. The door of opportunity is wide open for everybody who has ability and the power of application. In every part of the country you may find millionaires who only a few years ago were working for moderate daily wages. This open road to wealth and power, which is broader here than anywhere else, keeps alive the enthusiasm and spurs the activities of our people. We have only begun to show the world what we can do in the United States. We all work in a larger way on larger problems as time goes on. I came back from Europe more enthusiastic than ever over the prospects of my country. If I could do so without being indiscreet, I could speak of a great many things that justify enthusiasm in the United States at this time."

VICTOR HUGO MONUMENT A MISREPRESENTATION?

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

ROME, June 3.—The photo of the Victor Hugo monument just unveiled in Rome is disappointing. It represents the poet as declamatory and theatrical. He never gesticulated in public or in private; was concentrated, in speaking on a platform or in conversing; had a grumpy physiognomy that might have befitted a Timon of Athens, though so simply, unaffectedly and truly good. The mind was in a constant state of tension, for all the time he mentally sought new and striking forms of expression for the thoughts that fermented in his brain. He struck one on first sight as great but he might have been a mechanic of genius who worked at a clean trade—say, a joiner or a feller of trees.

HUMANE SOCIETY TO HELP ENFORCE NEW GAME LAW

New Act, Which Goes Into Effect June 16, Promises to Necessitate Changes in Missouri's Way of Living.

AUTHOR OF THE STATUTE RECITES ITS PROVISIONS

Prohibits Serving of Game, Wearing of Plumage, Robbing of Nests and Caging of Birds Under Severe Penalties.

After the new game law for Missouri goes into effect the 16th of this month, it will be unlawful for hotels, restaurants, meat shops or dealers to sell or offer for sale either ducks, quail or other wild birds, or even venison and squirrels. And it will also be unlawful for any milliner to have the plumage or any part of any wild bird in stock for sale. Just what the hotels and restaurants will be able to do to serve their trade in this line is a question for them to decide, but it is safe to say that even though the new law makes it a felony for these delicacies to be served that they will be given the public in some manner, probably under an assumed name.

It would not be at all surprising if a person within the next month, after the law goes into effect, were able to walk into one of the restaurants and call for an "extra young" chicken, with the full realization that his order would be filled with a wild duck. "Snow birds" are now served out of season for quail, and this practice may continue throughout the year. Squirrels and venison could easily be disguised under some other name.

Humane societies in St. Louis and elsewhere are laying plans to assist in enforcing the law.

Representative H. S. Walmsley, who was responsible for the introduction of the new law, declared in an interview that he had talked with T. S. Palmer, who is in charge of the game preservation and biographical survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Palmer had expressed himself as favorable to the game law of Missouri and expected to see other States adopt the same kind of a law in a short time.

Mr. Walmsely stated that the bill was one of the best passed by the Missouri Legislature and should be enforced by every warden and deputy warden in the State. Continuing, he said:

"The new law goes into effect June 16 and carries many provisions entirely new to the people of Missouri. The supreme courts of the United States and the State of Missouri have both declared that the wild creatures belong to the commonwealth and that the State might regulate the taking or having possession, as its legislative powers saw fit. In conformity with these decisions, the law declares the State's ownership in all wild creatures that are now in the State or may hereafter come into or be shipped into the State and that no individual can ever, under any circumstances, acquire title to any wild creature in this State.

"The law separates birds into three divisions: One division (specified game birds) is allowed to be used under certain conditions; another (specified noxious species) is declared not protected by the law, and the remaining class (all birds not specified) is protected at all times and under all circumstances.

"The taking of nests and eggs is unlawful except by the holder of a certificate from the state game and fish warden, and such holder must be indorsed by two well-known scientific men and must file a bond in the sum of $200. This provision will prevent the needless and destructive collecting by irresponsible school children and the law should be read to all school children to prevent them from getting into court.

"Only six species are outside of the law's protection—the crow, which is the most difficult of all Missouri birds to kill; the great horned owl, which is rapidly becoming rare; the English sparrow, of few friends; the cooper hawk; the sharp shinned hawk and the goshawk, which is seldom seen in Missouri. So the only safe plan for the average person is to kill no bird except game birds in the proper season.

"Trapping birds or protected animals is at all times prohibited. The sale of birds is unlawful and the having in cages of imprisoned red birds, mocking birds, goldfinches, magpies and jays will cease. Hotels, restaurants, meat shops and dealers cannot legally sell any ducks, quail or other birds, or even venison or squirrels. It will be unlawful for any milliner to have the plumage or any part of any wild bird in his stock for sale. Any attempt at violation is considered the same as the actual violation.

"All peace officers—policemen, constables, marshals, sheriffs—are ex-officio game wardens, and a penalty of from $100 to $500 is to be assessed against any officer failing to perform any act, duty or obligation enjoined upon him as such game warden.

"Wardens are given the right of making arrests, searching premises, opening packages and making seizures."

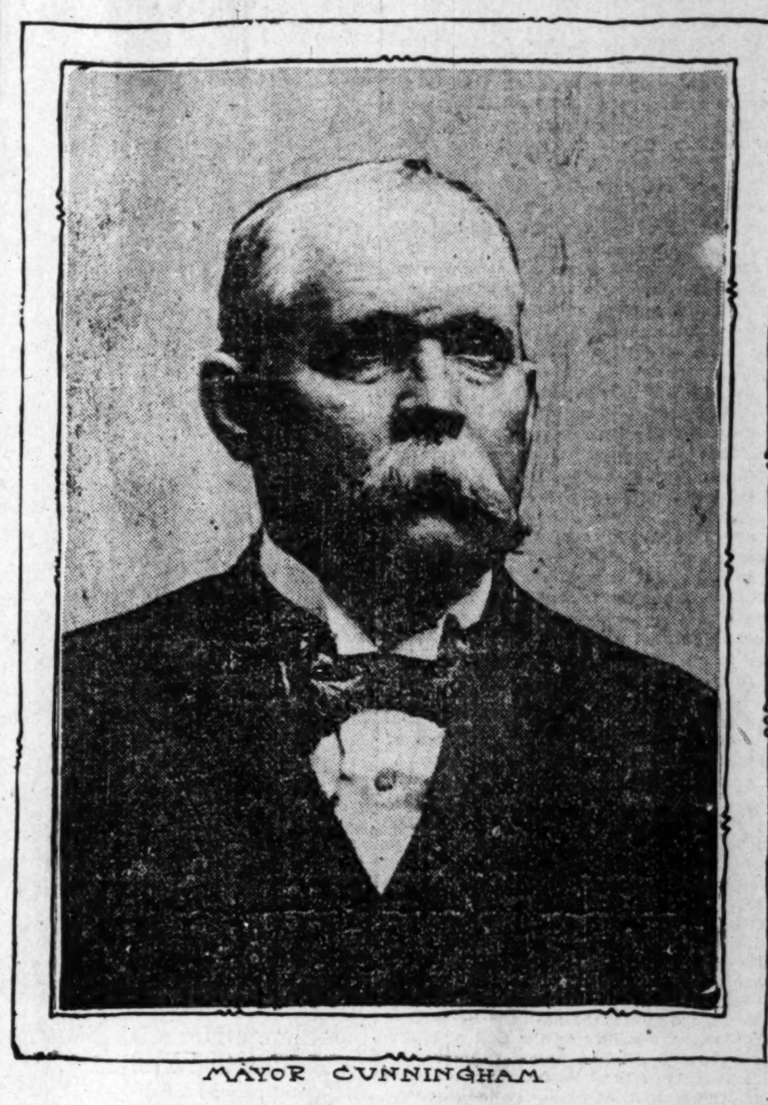
MAYOR OF A MISSOURI CITY GIVES HIS $2000 SALARY TO COMMUNITY



MAYOR CUNNINGHAM

Tom Cunningham of Joplin Says Men Should Not Accept Pay for Serving Public Which Has Made Their Wealth—Built Street Out of Personal Funds.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., May 31.—Tom Cunningham, banker, philanthropist and former Mayor of Joplin, has some peculiar ideas regarding remuneration for public office.

For two years Mr. Cunningham was Mayor of the city of Joplin, and for the services rendered to the city as its executive Mr. Cunningham was entitled to draw $1000 yearly, but an investigation of the books shows that for his term just ended not one cent of salary was drawn by him. The $2000 due to him, he says, will be given to the city for improvements.

Two years ago, when the Democrats nominated and elected Cunningham, he took office without making more than one promise. Within 10 hours after he had become Mayor he put men to work building an extension of Twentieth street toward the east, just as he had promised he would do if he were elected. That was the fulfillment of his sole pledge.

But when no bill was presented for payment, the Council made inquiries of the contractor who had built the extension, which was more than half a mile in length.

To their surprise, the councilmen learned Cunningham had paid the bill out of his own pocket.

The road had been graded and sub-graded and then macadamized.

A few weeks before his term of office expired, the city became involved in some trouble with a local atorney over a bill which he alleged the city owed him. A majority of the members of the Council voted the bill down. Cunningham believed the bill just and, a few days later, the attorney received the Mayor's personal check for the full amount.

Had No Press Agent.

Many other deeds such as these were performed by Cunningham while he was in the office of Mayor, but said nothing about it. The Mayor had no press agent.

To a Post-Dispatch representative today Mr. Cunningham said he was opposed to men accepting a salary for filling an office of honor in a city where they have made every dollar they have.

"When I was nominated to the office of Mayor," said Mr. Cunningham, "I promised the people in the southern portion of the city that East Twentieth street would be extended. I kept my promise. The people didn't care whether it was my money or some other fellow's that paid the bill. In my promise I did not say I would use my influence to get the street extended. I said I would extend it, and I did. I do not believe in paying election promises with the public's money.

"I did not draw my salary as mayor of the city because I did not believe I was justly entitled to it. Of course, according to the city ordinances, I was entitled to receive it, but sometimes ordinances are wrong.

Owes All to Community.

"When I came to Joplin, more than 30 years ago, I didn't have anything except a yoke of oxen. All I have I owe to Joplin. I made my money right here, and when I was elected mayor of Joplin I was given an opportunity to repay a small portion of the debt. It is no work to be mayor of a city like Joplin, and even though it required thrice the effort, I would not feel right in accepting the $2000 salary to which I am entitled by law."

Mr. Cunningham spends his time during banking hours in his bank. In the late afternoon he dons a pair of overalls and a jumper at his residence in the suburbs of the city, where he feeds and milks his cows, feeds the chickens and does all the other chores about his home.

While he was mayor, Cunningham on many occasions acted as police officer. He paid regular visits to the police station every night, and if work was to be done that required the services of more men than were at easy command, the mayor donned a star and went anywhere the chief commanded.

Not long ago Mr. Cunningham's night watchman at his bank wanted "to lay off" one night, and in order to accommodate him, the President of the bank stood guard over the funds.

Mr. Cunningham gives much to charity, and is one of the best known bankers in the State.

TOO MUCH DRINKING IN ENGLISH NAVY

Admiralty Officials Propose to Stop Practice That Is Becoming Scourge.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—The blue ribbon, not red tape, is the badge which the admiralty would like naval officers to wear.

A memorandum is being sent from Whitehall to all naval captains, hinting very plainly at the demoralizing effect of liberal indulgence in alcohol. Suggestions are also asked for as to means of limiting the mess wine bills.

Considerable resentment is felt in naval circles at the covert implication conveyed by this note, which is taken as an affront to officers.

"The navy of today," said a naval officer to a Post-Dispatch representative, "is by no means a teetotal one, but at the same time it is very sober.

"The idea is to limit us to three glasses of spirits a day. Considering that our wine bill has to cover the entertaining of guests on board, it is easy to see that such a proposal is preposterous."

LIVES YEARS HERE, BUT IS DEPORTED

Neglects to Take Out Last Papers and, Leaving Country, Is Ordered to Stay Out.

SUPERIOR, Wis., June 3.—After spending 67 years, his entire life in two republics, Mish Conrad is now in the county jail, waiting for the departure of the steamer that is to take him to a land ruled by a king.

Mish Conrad was born in Switzerland 67 years ago. At the age of 21 years he left his home in the Alps and sought a home in the United States. He landed in New York, and anxious to become a real citizen of the larger republic took out his first papers. Conrad neglected to secure his final papers, but he lived unmolested until he found himself barred from the country.

Conrad left the United States several days ago and visited Port Arthur, Canada. He arrived in Duluth on the steamer Easton. Immigrant Inspector Dean met the boat, and Conrad, not a full citizen of the country, was compelled to pass the regular examination. In the examination Inspector Dean discovered that the man had only $5. His $2 "head tax" would leave him $3 to make his way in the world, and on account of his advanced age the inspector decided that he was liable to become a public charge and ordered him deported.

EQUITABLE LIFE FOUNDED BY HYDE TO GET REVENGE

Important Facts Behind the Origin of the Great Company Revealed by the Boarding House Chum of the Builder of the Company.

WAS ANGRY WITH MUTUAL FOR NOT PROMOTING HIM.

Memphis Merchant Declares Founder Intended From First It Should Be "Mutual" and Letters of That Period Prove as Much.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Just how Henry Baldwin Hyde came to be founder of the Equitable Life Assurance Society is told below by William R. Moore, who was his chum at the time:

The Equitable Life Co. was founded out of spite. Mr. Hyde was 25 years old at the time and was a clerk in the employ of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. He was receiving a salary at that time of $20 a week and was living in a boarding house. Mr. Moore, also a young bachelor at the time, was living in the same house.

Both young men attended the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Dr. Alexander, father of James W. Alexander, the present President of the Equitable Life, was the pastor.

In March of 1859 a vacancy occurred in the Mutual Life. It was a better position than the humble clerkship held by Henry B. Hyde, and as he had worked industriously and given the best of his ability to the company, he believed that he should be promoted to the higher place.

The better position was given to another man. Young Hyde was incensed, and he promptly went to Frederick S. Winston, then president of the Mutual Life, and told him that he meant to start a company which would rival the Mutual Life.

This threat, coming from a young clerk without a dollar of capital, is said to have amused Mr. Winston greatly.

When young Hyde returned to the boarding house that evening and confided to his chum, William R. Moore, his determination to start a life insurance company to compete with the Mutual, young Moore regarded the matter as rash and unattainable and tried to dissuade his companion from an undertaking which, he believed, could only result in humiliation and failure.

Mr. Moore is now president of the William R. Moore Dry Goods Co. of Memphis, Tenn. This is a large concern, with offices in this city at 256 Church street. In a letter to the New York World, written from Memphis, Mr. Moore says:

"Permit me to give your readers some inside history concerning the origin of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

"At the time of the society's formation, Henry B. Hyde and myself were boarders and lodgers with Mr. and Mrs. Hallet, at the corner of Sixteenth street and Irving place, New York. We were young bachelor chums, attendants of Rev. Dr. Alexander's church, located at that time on Fifth avenue, on the exact spot now occupied by the storehouse of Arnold, Constable & Co. Mr. Hyde and myself were warm personal friends, who in many cases had the same social friends and acquaintances.

"I distinctively remember when, one evening, he came home from his daily duties with another insurance company by which he had been employed, how he complained of that company for withholding from him a certain promotion to which he felt himself entitled; and also how determined and positive he was in his declared purpose to start and establish a competing company, which he said would ultimately rival that company which had refused to promote him.

"Knowing that Mr. Hyde had little or no capital, I discouraged any attempt on his part to undertake what then seemed to me to be a hopeless enterprise. But his mind had been thoroughly made up; and his great and tireless energy and self-confidence urged him on in the purpose which he had not the least doubt of accomplishing.

"Proceeding immediately to seek the aid and influence of friendly capital and acquaintances, he, in an incredibly short time, succeeded in organizing the Equitable, and at once began a career of success for the company perhaps unequalled in the history of life insurance companies in the world. This, in brief, was its beginning.

"Everybody knows of its later extraordinarily successful history. Mr. Hyde had then only one idea as to the company's policy, and that idea was always and only that it should be 'purely mutual.' If this idea should now or by anybody be at any time controverted, I have now in my possession (and lying before me while I write) his personal friendly correspondence of more than 40 years ago, attesting to the assertions here made. He never then dreamed of a 'stockholders' company.

"Without here enlarging upon the question, I have thought—being perhaps now the only living intimate and personal friend cognizant of the inside details of the beginning of the Equitable—it might possibly interest the 600,000 policy-holders in that company to know precisely what Mr. Hyde thought at the time of its formation."

Mr. Moore's declaration that the original policy of the founder of the Equitable was that it should be "purely mutual," is of great interest at this particular time, with young James Hazen Hyde fighting with all the resources within his power to prevent the society from being mutualized.

Though it is not stated in Mr. Moore's letter, the Equitable Life was organized in July, 1859, only four months after Henry B. Hyde gave up his humble clerkship in the Mutual Life and started the seemingly impossible task of raising the $100,000 necessary as capital.

He got this money chiefly from the Rev. Dr. Alexander and members of the latter's congregation, whom the minister induced to lend a helping hand to the young man.

CAR COMPANIES IN FAVOR OF GLASGOW PLAN

Want Chicago's Municipal Ownership of Public Utilities to Begin Gradually, as It Did in the Scottish City.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 3.—In drafting the tentative proposition to be made to the city upon the sale of the traction properties the local street car officials are willing to secure an arrangement similar to the one which brought on the municipal ownership and operation of the tramway system in Glasgow.

In Glasgow municipal ownership was secured in 1872, but after that was done, in order to bring on the municipal operation, a lease was given to the private corporation for 23 years, at the end of which time municipal operation was undertaken.

If the city will give the traction companies a lease upon the properties the traction people are willing to enter into an arrangement whereby the title will be vested in the city at once, and at the expiration of the lease the city can take hold and operate under the Mueller law provisions. This arrangement, patterned after the Glasgow arrangement, would give the traction people an opportunity to get back the money they have invested in the local traction properties and would furnish the city an easy way out of the intricate situation.

Whether James Dalrymple, the Glasgow tramway manager, is preparing to advise the city to follow Glasgow in acquiring municipal ownership of the lines first and later undertaking municipal operation is not stated at this time.

It was announced yesterday by Traction officials of both systems that the work upon a definite proposition of the companies to the city is being advanced as rapidly as possible, but it was emphatically denied that they have made any proposition to Mayor Dunne. There have been general discussions, but no definite proposition. The only definite proposition which the traction people declare that they have made is the announcement reiterated several times that they are willing to sell their tangible and intangible property to the city at a fair price.

Ready to Improve Lines.

The traction officials declare that the poor service upon the cable lines should not be attributed to the traction people and that even at this time, while the negotiations are pending, the companies are ready to put the street car lines in first-class condition, providing the money expended for such purpose at this time is taken into consideration by the city in case of a sale. The traction officials told Mayor Dunne and Attorney Clarence S. Darrow during the conference at the Grand Pacific Hotel two weeks ago that they would permit the city to supervise the work of improvement, so that the amount of money expended would not be questioned in any way. The manner of appraising the value of the properties was also discussed in the Grand Pacific Hotel conference.

Mayor Dunne announced last night that before the end of the week he expects to receive the proposition of the street car companies to operate the lines under the city's supervision, with an arrangement for the ultimate purchase of the properties by Mueller law certificates.

Mayor Dunne declared that propositions have been discussed at the Grand Pacific Hotel, but that since that time there have been no private conferences upon the subject.

Expects New Proposition

"The intimation has been made to me that the street car companies will submit some sort of proposition which will contemplate the purchase by the city eventually," said Mayor Dunne. "I do not know whether the plan is to follow the method of the municipalization of the Glasgow tramways or not. A draft of the proposition before the local transportation committee was discussed at the Grand Pacific Hotel, but I could not agree to it. I understand that the definite proposition which I expect to be made within the next two days will include the question of rehabilitation and will unite that question with the sale of the properties. The companies, I believe, will agree to operate the lines until the city takes hold of the property by the sale.

"I am in favor of placing the question of municipal operation upon the ballots this fall. If an act of the City Council is necessary for such action we shall probably draft an ordinance to that effect. I suppose Mr. Dalrymple will make a written report, in which he will state his conclusions."

Adjudication of the rights under the 99-year act, so far as they affect all the lines in Chicago, must be made by the United States Supreme Court and the legality of Mueller law certificates must be determined by the highest tribunal before the traction controversies between the city and the companies can be ended.

Arkansas Unveils Her $10,000 Monument to the Confederacy on Grounds of New Capitol

Splendid Shaft, to the Heroic Troops of the State Was Paid for Through the Efforts of the Women of the Lost Cause.

Confederate Memorial Little Rock Unveiled Yesterday.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 3.—After having been postponed from May 5, on account of the unpropitious weather, the ceremonies of unveiling the $10,000 Confederate monument on the grounds of the new $1,000,000 State House took place this afternoon.

The city was thronged with visitors and the occasion was one of great military and civic display in memory of the Confederate troops of Arkansas.

The unveiling of this monument was the culmination of the movement inaugurated in 1897 and possessed a peculiar interest, since it took place on the anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy.

The monument is the work of Frederick W. Ruckstuhl of New York and Paris. The subject is "The Defense of the Flag," and the idea is carried out in an impressive manner. The statue is 35 feet 5 inches in height, standing on a base of Arkansas granite, with a pedestal of French stone, modeled after that of the Rochambeau monument in Washington. There are two figures, both of bronze.

Surmounting the pedestal is a heroic figure of Fame, standing on a bronze globe, holding on high a crown in her right hand, and in her left a trumpet. Her appearance is that of having just alighted on the globe, and her figure and face indicate great pride and satisfaction in being permitted to hold a crown of glory over the heroic son of Arkansas standing just below.

A striking fact about the figure is that the point of the big toe of the right foot of Fame rests on the exact spot on the globe where the City of Little Rock is located in the outline of the North American Continent.

The lower figure is that of a soldier modeled after the idealized form and face of a captain of one of the Arkansas companies. He clasps the Confederate banner to his side as if in the midst of the battlefield. The staff has been shot away. The face displays the zeal and heroism of the Arkansas soldier on the field of battle, and about it all is a potent suggestion of life that gives the figure virility and power. The monument was exhibited last year in the Paris salon, and attracted much favorable attention from the art critics of the Old World.

The inscriptions on the monument are as follows:

THE CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS OF ARKANSAS,
1861-1865.

On the left side the following, suggested by Col. James Coffin of Batesville:

ARKANSAS REMEMBERS
THE FAITHFULNESS OF HER SONS AND COMMENDS
THEIR EXAMPLE TO FUTURE GENERATIONS.

On the right are two selections from "The Conquered Banner," by Father Ryan, as follows:

"Our furled banner, wreathed with glory,
And though conquered we adore it."

"Weep for those who fell before it;
Pardon those who trailed and tore it."

There is a bronze copy of the seal of the Confederacy on the rear of the pedestal.

The inscriptions were selected by a committee of ladies of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, consisting of Mmes. L. C. Hall of Dardanelle; B. E. Benton of Pine Bluff; C. H. Williams of Newport; R. D. Partee, R. J. Polk, J. J. Keller and J. R. Miller of Little Rock.

The committee of the United Confederate Veterans which has been in charge of the work consists of Gen. B. W. Green of Little Rock, chairman; Col. John G. Fletcher and Maj. J. T. W. Tiller of Little Rock; Col. V. Y. Cook of Elmo and Maj. J. B. Trulock of Pine Bluff.

An interesting incident at the unveiling today was the delivery by Senator J. H. Berry to the Daughters of the Confederacy of the battle flags returned recently to the State by the War Department. These flags, six in number, were carried by Arkansas troops during the war and were returned under resolution by Congress, approved Feb. 28, 1905. The orations of the day were made by Congressman R. Minor Wallace and Col. Asa Morgan. Young women from various parts of the State represented the States of the Confederacy.

GOV. FOLK'S FORMULA FOR BOODLE CATCHING

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The World presents, from Gov. Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, the following formula for catching boodlers:

"I do not know anything about the situation at Albany, and it would not be proper for me to discuss corruption in another State. The ways of boodlers, however, are about the same everywhere.

"Men financially interested in passing or defeating bills purchase votes to accomplish their ends. Boodling is nonpartisan, and so is the law nonpartisan; and the remedy for the evil in New York is the same as in Missouri.

"It takes time, patience and vigilance to secure evidence against corruptionists that will convict. It is one thing for a boodle story to be a matter of common report and quite another thing to prove the story in a court of law. The only way to secure evidence of bribery is to investigate and trace to its source every boodle rumor. If a man tells a story of boodling, naming a specific sum, he either knows of the transaction himself or the person who told him knows of it, or there is a falsehood out. Now, if he knows of a transaction himself, the facts can be developed before a grand jury. If somebody told him it can be ascertained before a grand jury who his informant was. If he has told a falsehood, that can be proven, too.

If Brown says Smith told him that money was paid to a legislator for his vote, subpena Smith. If Smith did tell Brown then it can be found out where he got his information and what he knows of the transaction. If Smith says he did not tell Brown, confront Smith with Brown and find out who is telling the truth, reminding them both of the stringent statute against perjury.

In cases of this kind I found it very effective to allow the man who did the denying to sit for an hour or so in a room alone and consider the matter. Often, at the end of an hour with his conscience, the man was ready to tell truthfully all he knew.

"This work of investigation is by no means pleasant for the prosecutor. No man likes to be interrogated regarding such matters, and it usually makes an enemy of the witness, especially if he is hard pressed with embarrassing questions, as it would be the duty of the prosecutor to put to him. The prosecutor will find himself hedged in by hostile influences, and every conceivable effort will be made to have him desist. He may go on for a long while without any tangible evidence, but if he will not become discouraged and keep [illegible] he will secure the evidence in the end if it is there.

"Of course no two sets of conditions are entirely the same; each instance of bribery has its own features. But patient and impartial investigation will usually be rewarded. Somebody will tell the truth.

"You say that between $4000 and $40,000 was spent to defeat the gas bill at Albany. You should go to the prosecutor there and give him the information. Then if each one who is claimed to know anything from hearsay or otherwise, and everyone who has had opportunity to know is examined, after awhile the evidence of the corruption will be developed or the story will be proven to be untrue.

"Proof, perhaps, cannot be secured in a day or week; it may take months or a year. But if the bribery was done, as it is claimed, someone at some time in the course of the investigation will drop a clew leading up to the evidence required.

"The great benefit arising from the conviction of boodlers is not their incarceration in prison; that is merely an incident. The main thing is the arousing of the public conscience to the necessity of stamping out the things that dishonor.

"A few years ago bribery was not considered as a serious offense. Men gave bribes and thought nothing of it; men took bribes and boasted of it. The revelations followed. Now the people realize that bribery, if tolerated, would lead to the overthrow of Government itself, that it is the treason of peace.

"The result that counts most for good government is the teaching of the lesson that boodling is bad politics. As a rule, boodlers do not know good from bad; all they know is politics. But they do know good politics from bad politics. When they shall have learned the lesson thoroughly that boodling is bad politics, the question of good government will be near solution.

"In answer to your question as to whether these methods could be applied to the insurance scandals now disturbing the country, the same principle that demands honesty in public officials calls for honesty in those who have the people's money in any financial capacity. A man who has a five-thousand-dollar policy is as much interested in the honesty of those in charge of the affairs of the company as the man who owns a farm of like value is concerned in the integrity of those who represent him in an official capacity. Great insurance companies are quasi-public in their nature. The law will not permit even an ordinary trustee to profit beyond any legal compensation, and all that it made, directly or indirectly, out of trust funds inures to the [illegible] que trust.

GREAT PAGEANT TO HONOR TOWN'S TWELFTH CENTURY

Beautiful Folk-Play Will Be Produced to Celebrate Anniversary of Hoary Old Sherborne Which Flourished in Ethelbert's Days.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—"A Labor of Love" would not be an inappropriate sub-title for the "Sherborne Pageant," the beautiful folk-play which Mr. Louis N. Parker has written to mark the 1200th anniversary of the founding of the town, bishopric, and school of Sherborne by St. Aldhelm, in the year 705. It will be performed on June 12, 13, 14 and 15.

The idea of using the lovely ruins of Sherborne Castle—one of the many glories of this Old World Dorsetshire town—as the "stage setting" for the performance was conceived in a modest spirit. There were to have been about 250 performers, and the costumes were to have been fashioned from calicos and serges.

But local enthusiasm, fed by local patriotism, grew and grew until the calicos and serges gave place to gorgeous silks, satins and velvets, and the number of performers jumped from 250 to nearly 800.

Over 4000 reserved tickets have already been sold, and even from the far-off daughter town of Sherborne, Mass., a pilgrimage has set forth to witness the pageant.

A Post-Dispatch representative, who was present at the first full rehearsal yesterday received the impression that the pageant would prove to be the most picturesque and gorgeous, as it will be by far the largest, pastoral production ever seen in this country.

The army of actors and actresses arrived in every conceivable form of vehicle, from costly motor-cars to farm wagons, for among them are Squires and their ladies, clergy, professional men, butchers, bakers, grocers, ironmongers, haberdashers' assistants, farm laborers, and troops of children. All are filled with an intense desire to do their best.

Even three venerable dames and six ancient men from the old almshouse were taking orders from Mr. Parker and apparently revelling in their first attempt at the drama.

Not a single member of this colossal "company" is receiving payment, and in nearly every case each member is paying for his or her elaborate costume. Unlike most amateurs, they all insist on remaining anonymous—even those who are taking such dignified parts as St. Aldhelm, William the Conqueror, and Sir Walter Raleigh.

The text of the play could not well be improved upon. It ranges from the dignified utterances of King Ethelbert's days to the Dorsetshire dialect of the Sixteenth Century. The actors and actresses spoke their words splendidly, and in true out-of-door style, and the orchestra and choir, when they are reinforced by a military

INVENTOR SUPPLIES A COFFIN FOR THE LIVING.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—E. J. Jephson of Cambridge has patented a coffin which will permit a person who has been prematurely buried to communicate with the outside world when consciousness returns.

The coffin is constructed so that air is admitted and means are provided for giving an audible signal. If the "dead" person presses a button he rings a bell which is placed on top of the grave.

The inventor has also placed a shelf containing a hammer, matches and candle in the coffin, so that, when the supposed "corpse" awakes, "he can light the candle and break the glass plate on the roof of the coffin."

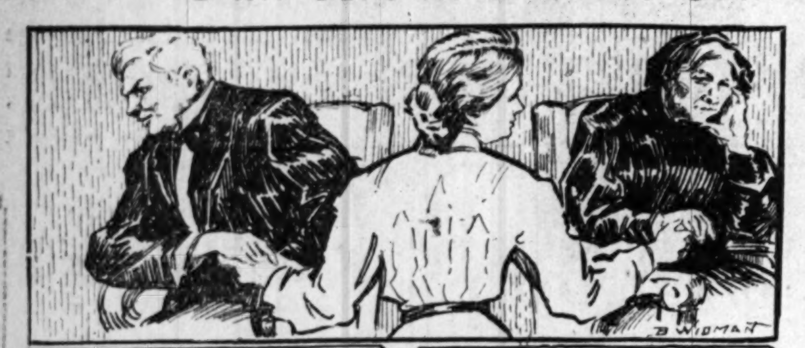
After 21 Years of Silence, Though Under Same Roof, Aged Pair Are in Divorce Court



HAMILTON L. GRUBBS

MRS JULIA ANN GRUBBS

Quarrel Over the Sale of a Flock of Geese Caused a Breach That Efforts of Children Could Not Heal—With Youngest Daughter Grown, Compact Against Separation Is Dissolved.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 3.—Down among the hills of Dearborn County, Ind., there dwells an aged couple, whose lives well exemplify the scriptural adage that a house divided against itself will fall. The couple is Hamilton L. Grubbs, 75 years old, and his wife, Mrs. Julia A. Grubbs, now in her 71st year.

For twenty-one years the two old couple have not spoken to each other or held communication of any kind, though they have lived under the same roof during all that time and have eaten at the same table. Application for divorce has now been filed by Mrs. Grubbs and it is probable that a double existence of more than 50 years will be split in twain.

The youngest daughter of the family having now reached her majority in years, the venerable father and mother are willing to separate and spend the brief remainder of their lives apart. It was agreed between them years ago when the estrangement first came that the couple should live together until all the children had become of age. The youngest daughter then was an infant in arms.

Tragic fate made the little girl's life anything but a happy one. As she became old enough to walk and talk she became a messenger between the couple. She sat between her parents at the table, proffering food first to one, then to the other, with each addressing what few remarks were volunteered to her.

As she became older she tried to act as mediator between the two, seeking with all the tact at her command to bring about reconciliation, but her efforts were in vain. The old folks steadfastly refused to have anything to do with each other. Unyielding and obstinate ever, they lived strictly apart, although the same roof sheltered both and the same child ministered to their needs and did their bidding.

Neighbors Unaware of Trouble.

Strangely enough, the residents of the community did not know that estrangement existed between the aged couple. Even the closest neighbors did not know of it until the divorce proceedings were instituted this week. The couple was considered eccentric, but it was never suspected that sunshine and happiness did not reign in that household.

A trifling incident brought about the alienation of affections and led to a secret compact which has been faithfully observed for many years. The couple had lived happily together in their little home for more than a quarter of a century. Six children had come to gladden the household.

Geese Cause the Trouble.

Then a peddler, happening along, took a fancy to a flock of geese which Mr. Grubbs, or "Uncle Ham," as he was familiarly known through the country-side, had on his farm and offered a good price for them.

"Uncle Ham" was in for selling then and there, but his wife demurred. She wanted the down of the birds' fine white plumage for a feather bed. But "Uncle Ham" did not like to sleep on feather beds and he frankly told his wife so. This led to further difficulties. In the end the geese were sold and "Uncle Ham" and his wife repaired to the sitting room to draw up a secret compact, which has not been violated by either to this day.

It was agreed by the couple in that moment of anger that they should live together for the sake of their children, but that no communication should ever pass between them. "Uncle Ham" should occupy the left side of the house and his wife the right. If business or emergency of any kind should demand communication between them, one of the children should act as a messenger. The old folks themselves should have nothing whatever to do with each other.

The compact was made 21 years ago. The children, then mere boys and girls, have now grown into mature men and women. Miss Rosa, who then was an infant in arms is just past 21. Her recent decision to leave the parental home is what impelled Mrs. Grubbs to sue for divorce. At numerous times she had contemplated such action, but love for the daughter at home and motherly wishes for her welfare kept her from making the first move.

"Eating at the same table with his family, "Uncle Ham" will not speak a word, waiting until the food is passed to him by the daughter, Miss Rosa. He will not even decline a proffered dish not to his liking, but will accept it and then replace it on the table.

Two of the couple's sons are conducting a farm in Illinois and two daughters are managing a woman's tailoring establishment in Lawrenceburg, Ind. One married daughter is living in Ohio and the remaining child, Miss Rosa, has gone to Illinois to live with the brothers.

Mrs. Grubbs desires to be legally separated from her husband, then to go to Illinois and make her home with her sons. Although 71 years old, she is well preserved, all her faculties being absolutely unimpaired.

THEY SHOWED THE MAN FROM MISSOURI.

And He Went Home Perfectly Satisfied With All That He Had Seen.

"I am not much of a hand to plug for any particular brand of goods I have to sell," said a Main street grocer the other day, according to a Hannibal (Mo.) Exchange. "I usually give my customers what they call for and let it go at that. But I have one thing in my store here that I am going to make everybody buy that I can, from now on.

"I was across the river, over in Quincy, Ill., the other day and had a couple of hours to spare and thought I would run out and visit the big Egg-O-See food factory there, and I am mighty glad I went. I tell you, that place is a hummer. It is the biggest thing of its kind in the world, but still it has to run night and day the year round to supply the demand for Egg-O-See.

"I always knew that food was the best seller of all, for I sell more of it myself than I do of all the rest put together, but I never had any idea of the enormous amount there is consumed until I visited that factory. They turn out a good trainload of Egg-O-See every day.

"And the way they make it, too, is something wonderful. It is all done by machinery. It is never touched by anyone's hands from the time the wheat goes into the cleansing vats until it is sealed up in air-tight packages and labeled for the market.

"And clean!

"You've been in these big river passenger steamboats that you can't find a speck of dust or dirt in from stem to stern. Well this factory has got them beat to death. It shines like a brand-new silver dollar inside and out, it is so clean. There is no possible way for the least bit of dirt to get into the food in that place and a fellow would be a mighty long time in getting his peck of dirt eat if he lived on Egg-O-See alone.

"The wheat they use in making Egg-O-See comes from California and is the finest I ever saw. It costs 20 cents a bushel more than any other kind on the market. They put up Egg-O-See in those air-tight, inner-lined packages so that it never gets stale or impure.

"I always knew there must be some reason why everybody liked it so much better than all other cereal foods and I've found out now. It's the way they make it and what they make it out of. It's the only kind I am going to keep in my store after this.

"It won't lose me any business to throw the others out, for when a customer once starts on Egg-O-See, he never quits."

The great demand for Egg-O-See keeps it moving and it never has time to sit around and get stale. It is always fresh, crisp and delicious. It digests itself as soon as it comes in contact with the fluids of the stomach and there is no medicine on earth that is so beneficial to weak and ailing stomachs as this delicious self-digesting food.

The enormous output enables it to be sold at the very low price of 10 cents a large package. It is certainly worth this small amount to see for yourself what the most delicious and most healthful food on earth really is. Buy a package from your grocer today.

EVANGELIST USED A STRANGE TEST

Sent Chance Worshiper Out to Change a $20 Bill and He Came Back.

CHICAGO, June 3.—The Rev. John Lawrence, evangelist, illustrated his confidence in his fellow-man during one of his sermons at the Open Door Mission.

"Will some gentleman in the audience kindly step outside and get this changed for me?" he asked, waving a $20 bill.

The request almost created a panic. In the sudden rush for the platform it was seen that every man in the room, most of them habitues of the lodging house district, was anxious to oblige the speaker. The man who reached the $20 bill first left the room precipitately, followed by cheers and groans from his disappointed competitors.

"He will return," said the Rev. John Lawrence, calmly.

"Nit," said his audience, in chorus.

In three minutes the man who had seized the $20 bill returned with a $10 bill, a $5 bill and five silver dollars, which he placed in the hand of the evangelist.

"Well done, good and faithful servant," said the Rev. John Lawrence, and he gave the faithful servant the $10 bill for the faithfulness. Then he threw the rest of the money among his audience.

These fought and scrambled until the possession of the $5 bill and each of the silver dollars had been established beyond dispute. Then they left the hall, cheering the generous evangelist.

DRESS OF ALL REIGNS WORN AT LONDON BAZAR.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—Some gorgeous costumes will be seen at the Westminster Hospital Bazar, to be held in Dean's Yard.

The Queen has lent her patronage, and the distinguished stall holders will be dressed in costumes to represent every reign, from the present time back to the days of William the Conqueror.

The venerable Baroness Burdett-Coutts has taken charge of one of the Tudor stalls. Lady Horatia Erskine and Viscountess Knutsford will represent ladies of the Court of Charles I, while the Countess of Lytton and Lady Sassoon will wear dresses of the period of Queen Anne.

Georgian dresses have been chosen by the Duchess of Norfolk, the Duchess of Buccleuch, Katherine, Duchess of Westminster, and the Marchioness of Salisbury.

The Marchioness of Lansdowne, as a lady of the Court of William IV, has charge of a stall devoted entirely to wedding presents; and the descendants of Charles Dickens, wearing Early Victorian costume, will be the saleswomen at "The Old Curiosity Shop."

On the first day of the opening ceremony will be performed by the Duke of Connaught, who will be accompanied by the Duchess and Princess Margaret and Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden and Norway. The bazar will be opened on the following day by Princess Louise, accompanied by the Duke of Argyll, and on the last day by Princess Henry of Battenberg, with whom will be Princess Beatrice and Princess Victoria of Battenberg.

OLD MINES ARE BEING WORKED

Discovery of New Process for Treating Zinc Ores Reopens Coeur d'Alene Properties.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WALLACE, Idaho, June 3.—By the use of a new process old mining properties in the Coeur d'Alenes that in former days have been numbered among the most prominent mines in the district, but which during the latter days have been practically idle, are now being worked to a greater extent than at any time during recent years.

In the Nine Mile district are three old producers—the California, the Granite and the Custer—which are being operated on a scale that will place a considerable output to their credit before the close of the year.

The California Consolidated has been acquired by a Pittsburg corporation, and a good sized force of men is employed at the mine and mill. Shipments are being made and development work done on an extensive scale.

The Granite mine has been taken over by the Success Mining Co. During the early days of quartz mining in the Coeur d'Alenes this property was considered among the best. By reason of the prevalence of zinc the ores finally could not be profitably worked and the mine became idle. H. F. Samuels took an option on the property, experimented with the ores, learned that they could be worked by a new process and then organized the Success Mining Co. to take over the Granite properties. A crew of miners is now engaged in development work, and a mill is being erected. Unlike all other mills in the district, it will be constructed with the view of saving the zinc values, as well as the silver and lead.

W. R. Swicegood has a number of miners employed on the Custer, and the old mine appears to be in such an excellent condition that he is preparing to increase the force at an early date. A considerable quantity of ore has been jigged, and a shipment of concentrates will be made by the end of this month. A good body of undeveloped ore has recently been uncovered.

JUAREZ'S NEW WATERWORKS.

EL PASO, Tex., June 3.—The engineer who has been making the estimates for the construction of the new water plant in Juarez has stated that he would soon be ready to make his report. At the beginning the plant will furnish water to the business portion of the city and 15 other streets.

The plant is to be an up-to-date one and to cost not less than $75,000, and all of the materials will be purchased in the United States and be put in under the supervision of American contractors.

The plant will be owned by the city, and it is to furnish the customers with water at the lowest possible cost. The city officials are of the opinion that an ordinary family can be supplied with water for about $1 per month, Mexican money.

MYSTERIOUS DUST BLIGHTED COTTON

Settled Down Over Bell County, Texas, Fields Blackening and Wilting the Plants.

TEMPLE, Tex., June 3.—A partial explanation is forthcoming of the causes which produced the blight killing thousands of acres of cotton in Bell County several days ago.

According to reports of observant farmers whose fields suffered, the blight came as a result of what appeared to be clouds of fine dust or sand which settled down on the fields in patches varying in size. Wherever these clouds struck all vegetation instantly blackened and wilted, some places entirely killed, and in others only damaged.

A peculiarity of these dust clouds consisted in the fact that the leaves of the plants were not torn nor were the stalks thrashed out as in a hard wind. It is the generally accepted belief that what appeared to be dust was a swarm of noxious animalculae with a predilection for cotton plants.

If you would avoid the tunnel when going from St. Louis to Philadelphia, New York and other Eastern points, use the Pennsylvania Lines; all their through trains run via Merchants' Bridge. Ticket offices, 7th and Olive and Union Station.

NO MONEY TILL CURED.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

Then Restored to Health and Strength.

Death stared her in the face, doctors advised her relatives that death would relieve her of her sufferings in a short time. AEG-AN-IURN arrested the disease, cured her and restored her to her accustomed health and vigor. Here is what she wrote us:

"I write you today to tell you that to AEG-AN-IURN I owe my life, my health and my happiness. For years impoverished blood and enfeebled physical condition made me the recipient of diseases of various characters. I suffered with neuralgia, insomnia nervousness and female troubles. My once robust constitution was destroyed. I gradually grew weaker until I was confined to my bed. I tried different physicians, their benefits were merely temporary. It was freely predicted that I would die. I was impressed with the miraculous cures effected by AEG-AN-IURN, and, unknown to physicians I obtained a bottle. It seemed to start the blood anew in my veins; I experienced immediate benefit; the second bottle used, I left my bed, the third started me on the road to health and I am now gaining flesh, sleep soundly, have a splendid appetite. If there ever was a case of one being snatched from the jaws of death when all seemed lost, my case is surely one. I told our family physician that I was going to write to you and express my gratitude for what your medicine did for me. He then asked me to request you not to name our little town or give my name, as it would be to a certain extent a reflection on him. You can print this letter if you wish, for I am sure there are thousands of women who are longing for just such a remedy. I only wish I could tell them personally how AEG-AN-IURN saved my life."

AEG-AN-IURN cures catarrh and all catarrhal diseases, rheumatism, gout, female weakness and diseases, anaemia and all other diseases resulting from impoverished blood. It cures neuralgia, insomnia and nervous affections by restoring the system to strength and health; constipation, all bowel troubles and indigestion. It cures kidney, bladder and liver troubles by its tissue building, strength restoring process. AEG-AN-IURN is FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS—PRICE $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

Great June Trade Sale of Sample Undermuslins

THOUSANDS of beautiful Sample Garments purchased at very unusual concessions. Added to these is a special underprice purchase of French Lingerie. Every garment is fresh and crisp and the patterns are entirely new. We had originally intended this to be our regular June Sale of undermuslins and laid our plans accordingly months ago. The unexpected addition of the sample lines and French Lingerie makes this event all the more important, and affords the broadest scope to one's choosing. Thus you can be sure of finding the garments you desire.

The vital point of this very attractive sale is every garment is painstakingly made, liberally cut and beautifully trimmed. We bought from the best makers only, and our selections were made with a view of maintaining the May Standard at all cost. Thus you can choose with perfect safety.

MANSION MOVED FROM CLEVELAND TO MUSKOGEE, I. T.

Fifteen-Room Homestead Takes a Journey Across Five States With Its Owner to Gratify His Mother's Wish.

BUILDING WRECKED FOR RE-ERECTION

Each Joist, Rafter, Stud and Frame Carefully Numbered and Packed to Encompass Longest-Distance House Moving.

CLEVELAND, June 3.—Dr. C. E. Bryant, a local physician, has just completed a moving job that is perhaps without a parallel in this part of the country. He has moved a 15-room house from Cleveland to Indian Territory. His wife's mother was moving to his new home with him, and she wanted her old homestead to go with them. So it went.

This feat was accomplished quietly and successfully. There was no demonstration, no delaying of traffic and no creation of excitement. This task which seems so Herculean was performed so easily as to destroy the romance that one feels ought to belong in the picture.

The house that traveled from Ohio's metropolis to the Southwest stood in Harkness avenue in the East End. It belonged to Mrs. Austin Beckwith, widow of Wells Beckwith, and was her home for 35 years. She bought it when the original Harkness, now dead, laid out his farm in lots.

When it came to moving, the house was torn down with as much care as marks the moving of a piano out of a flat. Its fragments were indexed classified, tied together and packed.

Only two men were employed on the work. They worked slowly, but with precision. Finally the "debris" stood about the premises ranged in neat bundles of boards, timbers, joists, frames, etc. These were bound with straps of metal, wire and in the conventional packing case methods. As each came out of the house it was numbered.

The lumber was hauled to the railroad and packed into a freight car. Then it started for its destination, accompanied by a car which was loaded with the household effects.

Mrs. Beckwith, at whose request this strange form of moving was adopted, explains it in this way:

"We liked the old house, of course, but it wasn't sentiment alone that made us move it. Dr. Bryant was moving to Indian Territory to live permanently and we wanted to dispose of the property on Harkness avenue. We sold the lot, and the people who bought it did not want the house. Of course they offered to buy it, but they would have had to tear it down and sell it for old lumber. They were not willing to pay for it what it was worth as a house.

"So we decided that we would take it with us. If it was only good for lumber anyway and had to be torn down by somebody we thought that we might as well be the ones to tear it down. The house will be rebuilt in Muskogee precisely as it stood in Cleveland. We will modernize it somewhat and add a few improvements, but otherwise it will not be changed."

It is stated by the Bryant family that their "new" home will have cost them less than they had bought new lumber and built a new house in their new home.

"When we are settled in our new home it will be some satisfaction to know that we are still in our old house," said Mrs. Beckwith.

GASWORKS WASTE ELICITS PROTEST

Campers on Ponchartrain Declare Its Discharge Into the Lake Kills Fish and Endangers Health.

NEW ORLEANS, June 3.—Campers on the shore of Lake Pontchartrain are airing loud protests against the alleged continuation of the Gas Light company's old practice of discharging its refuse and gas water into the lake through Claiborne Canal and Orleans Outfall Canal. It is now threatened that the matter will be taken up with the proper authorities in the form of a petition.

Last year there were complaints of the same sort. It was claimed by those encamped on the lake that the substances in the gas water that floated on the surface poisoned quantities of fish and crabs, which floated ashore and became putrid, forcing the campers away from the vicinity. It is also claimed that this refuse is poisonous to crabs that are sometimes later caught and sold in this city, and that are sufficient to cause severe illness and cramps when so poisoned. Numerous other things are mentioned to show that the discharge of the refuse in this manner is a nuisance to the public and a menace to health.

When the matter was brought up a year ago it is said the Sewerage and Water Board authorized its superintendent to take the matter up with the Gas Light company, and they were notified to desist. The practice, if it was ever stopped, appears to have been resumed, and is now in vogue, much to the consternation of those who are just moving to summer camps in the vicinity.

GOOD HOPE AS A KEY TO NAVAL SUPREMACY.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

CAPETOWN, June 3.—Lord Selborne, the new high commissioner, commented upon the strategical importance of the Cape at a luncheon given to him at the Mount Nelson Hotel the other day.

This has been impressed upon them all, he said, by the rounding of the Cape by the Baltic fleet. Apparently the construction of the Suez Canal had not minimized the Cape's importance.

He firmly believed that its strategical value would be far greater in the future than ever in its history.

There could be no such thing as local defense. The only place where South Africa could be defended was the same place where England must be defended and where the enemy's ships would find both defended equally—namely, where the British fleet met the enemy.

It was only by the command of the sea that South Africa would be enabled to work out her own salvation.

SHAVED HEAD, PAINTED FACE

Ohio Students Used Razor and Iodine on Fellow Who Tampered With Press.

FINDLAY, O., June 3.—As Aaron Hurr, a student of Findlay College, entered his classes recently he was met with laughter his shaved head and painted face.

Hurr, who hailed from Pennsylvania, was informed Monday that there would appear in yesterday's News, a college publicaiton, the announcement of his marriage. As there is to be no marriage Mr. Hurr became enraged and entering the pressroom at the college destroyed the entire edition of the paper.

Next morning about 20 masked students appeared at Hurr's house, and, dragging him from his bed, took him to the gym. There they shaved his head and, it is said, painted his face with iodine. The college authorities promise to punish the culprits if they can be discovered.

CHIMNEY HOLDS 2000 NESTS

TOLEDO, O., June 3.—Those who are interested in the manners and habits of birds may see a pretty sight any fine evening just at sundown at the corner of Jefferson and Huron. They may see about 2000 swallows seeking their nests in the unused chimney of the Odd Fellows' Temple.

For about ten minutes the birds wheel in wide circles about the chimney, with much twittering and exchange of gossip, the circle gradually narrowing until, suddenly, the leaders swoop down and enter the chimney, and pell mell the whole 2000 birds circle down into the chimney.

Only two sentinels remain outside, swooping through the air here and there in search of stragglers for about five minutes. The last straggler rounded up, these patrols, too, seek the chimney recesses.

The birds come every year about May 1, remain a month and then return for a month in the early fall.

RAN A "MUSHROOM SPECIAL"

Railroad Supplied Train for Palatable Fungus Searchers.

DAYTON, O., June 3.—A Mushroom Special, which left this city over the Dayton & Xenia Traction Line before sunrise one morning, carried 200 enthusiastic hunters of the fungi. Most of the number alighted at a convenient orchard and scattered in all directions. It was the first mushroom special in the history of the country, as far as known, and proved a popular diversion.

The freshets of the previous day had made the situation interesting, and some remarkable finds are reported. Hundreds of the fungi were found in clusters, and some measured six inches in height, the cones proper being three inches high and as round as a cup. Most of this species were found in the lowlands of the rich Miami Valley.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

IMITATIONS ARE MADE TO FOOL YOU NOT TO PLEASE YOU

BOTTLED UNDER AUTHORITY
Coca-Cola
COCA-COLA CO. ATLANTA GA.

Coca-Cola

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

IS BEING IMITATED.

Would you be satisfied with imitation happiness, or counterfeit money, or an imitation diamond? Of course, everything good is imitated; but what we can't see is why anyone should be willing to pay as much for imitation Coca-Cola as the genuine. When you ask for Coca-Cola it's because you are convinced that Coca-Cola is what we claim and what you want—then don't let an unscrupulous dealer palm off something else in place of it. You don't suppose he gives you an imitation because it's better for you? When he says he has "something just as good" he's looking out for his own interest—he makes more money on the "something just as good" because Coca-Cola costs him more than the imitation, or he's got a lot of cheap stuff with high-sounding names in stock, and the only way he can get rid of it is to people who are not particular what they drink.

If you are thirsty or tired and nervous or have a headache, you want Coca-Cola. Get Coca-Cola—look at the label and see that it bears the trade-mark signature just as shown above, and the red trade-mark on the crown of the stopper and blown in the bottle. If however, in your opinion, one thing is as good as another, get plain, uncolored water—anything but imitation Coca-Cola.

The public will confer a favor on the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. by sending them the name and address of anyone passing a substitute as Coca-Cola, and we will take the necessary legal steps to prevent its repetition.

St. Louis Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

A rat with a red hot stove in his stomach

In the manufacture of Stearns' Electric Rat and Roach Paste, a peculiar chemical is used that when swallowed by rats or mice feels like a red hot stove in the stomach and begins to burn them up; crazed by this feeling after having eaten they rush madly out of the house in search of water and gasping for air. In a few moments all is over and their bodies are burned up and Stearns' Electric Paste has once more proven that it is sure death to rats and mice. It also kills cockroaches, water bugs and all other vermin.

Stearns' Electric Rat and Roach Paste

GUARANTEE Your money will be refunded if Stearns' Electric Rat and Roach Paste does not do all that is claimed for it.

STOCK MARKET INFLUENCED BY EQUITABLE ROW

Suppression of the Frick Report One of the Things Responsible for Unusual Conservatism in the Face of Favorable Crop Situation.

MISSOURI WHEAT REPORT STIMULATES THE MARKET

More Unsatisfactory Conditions Expected From the Section—Cotton Fluctuates in an Irregular Manner but Reaches Normal Level.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

Wall Street.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The Evening Post in its Wall street review today says:

With the heavy falling off of $10,076,300 in cash holdings, the striking feature of today's weekly return of the associated banks, the surplus reserve stands now at the lowest figure reported for this date, with the single exception of 1903, since 1887.

Today's decrease in cash was some $8,000,000 in excess of the highest estimates made yesterday respecting the effect of the week's drain. While such a loss was not looked for, it no doubt reflects the after effects of the treasury withdrawals from the depository banks, as well as the surrender of gold certificates for telegraphic transfers of currency to the Pacific Coast.

The San Francisco movement alone has taken $3,000,000 from the banks this week, and since $4,500,000 more is to go out on Monday, the day's rather startling decrease may not be difficult to account for.

Today's stock market can hardly be said to have "reflected" anything. Business came to a virtual halt, with a few trifling demonstrations, first in an upward, then in a downward direction. As a rule, the day's changes were unimportant.

In its fundamental conditions the financial situation is sound. The very existence of numerous puzzling questions, affecting the immediate financial future, makes caution and prudence the wiser part. In particular that intangible factor commonly known as "public confidence," is playing just now so large a part that it may offset many other influences.

It is quite useless to deny that two such occurrences, in the space of a few weeks, as the Bigelow defalcation and the Equitable Life directors' action, are having profound effect on this public sentiment.

Putting the best imaginable construction on what the majority on the Equitable Board actually did, it remains true that their action was taken in a way as bludering and as dangerous in regard to the public's attitude as could be conceived.

What inferences people outside of Wall Street are likely to draw, when they read Mr. Frick's report and learn that the Equitable directors voted to suppress it, may readily be pictured.

Nothing that the loud-mouthed Boston Blatherskite has or could have alleged, would compare with this for mischievous influence on the public mind. This is one reason why, even with the crop situation highly favorable, and with the country's trade in an excellent position, there is good reason for moving conservatism.

Grain.

More favorable climatic conditions all over the West were the dominating influences early this week. The effect was mainly noticeable in the remote deliveries.

Late in the week the market showed surprising strength. General buying of July and also of September in various domestic markets was stimulated in good part by the unexpectedly bad report from Missouri, where the State Board of Agriculture places the average condition at 81, against 91 last month, and 86 a year ago.

This report leads traders to look for unsatisfactory reports from other states in that section, where climatic conditions have been similar. The rising tendency was held in check at times by the steady improvement in the weather West, it being clear and warmer where it had been exceedingly wet.

Corn.

In the local corn ring speculative dealings have been small in volume and the variations somewhat slow, although as a rule a strong upward tendency obtained, partly owing to higher cables, but mainly because of stronger advices from the West, where seeding has been seriously delayed by the recent cold, wet weather.

Cotton.

The market was active today, with prices fluctuating in an irregular manner. There was a decline of 10 to 12 points in the early trading from last night's closing quotations.

In this movement July broke to 7.91, while August sold down to 7.92, October 10.02, and December went to 10.12 and January 10.16. This makes a maximum decline from Wednesday's high prices of about 75 points, or nearly $4 per bale.

It looked as though the low prices today were made principally on hammering by bears and liquidation on stop-loss orders, and also as though there had not been a sufficient readjustment of speculative accounts and the market has got once more to the normal level, and is in a better position to be influenced by the legitimate trade conditions and the spot situation.

NO IMPROVEMENT IN SPECULATION

Local Market Drags Through an Uninteresting and Lazy Week's Trading.

INVESTMENT DEMAND POOR

Sales Are Small, but Prices Remain Around the Level Recently Established.

Speculation has dragged through a lazy week on the local Stock Exchange, nothing of importance having occurred in financial circles to stimulate even the investment demand, while on the other hand, the uncertainties bearing on the stock market situation have not been of sufficient weight to cause the speculative element to sell out their holdings. That local securities are in strong hands has been conclusively demonstrated in the past six weeks, for during the decline in the Eastern market local prices have been well sustained around the high level, and as yet no indications are apparent that values have been carried above their intrinsic merit. The small sales noted also indicate that the advance has been largely brought about by investment purchasers and not by a speculative movement, and consequently, unless general conditions become exceedingly bad, the possibility of a lower range of prices for local securities in the near future is exceedingly remote.

From a market standpoint, the event of the week was of course the Japanese victory, and although the response in the world's markets was less pronounced than had been expected, the speculative fraternity will no doubt shortly be brought to a realization of the importance of this event. With Russia in a chaotic condition internally, her navy destroyed, her credit extended to the limit, there is little question but that an early peace must be declared or the present Government overthrown. Talk of peace is prevalent in all foreign markets, and all indications point to an early termination of the war. With the war settled one of the leading adverse features in the market situation will be removed, for at all times this strife and the possibilities of other Powers being brought into the controversy has been a decided menace to higher prices. And the declaration of peace should have a beneficial effect on market sentiment throughout all the financial centers of the world.

* * *

From an adverse standpoint the feature of the week has been the weakened position of the steel and iron markets, which show conclusively that the falling-off in the demand recently noted in the pig-iron market is extending to other branches of this important industry. Whether or not the decreased demand noted is an indication that the pinnacle of prosperity in this industry has been reached, is an open question, but the records of production and consumption in the past five years show that at this period of the year, no matter how great or how small the demand for steel products has been, that a moderate reaction sets in which lasts into the summer months or until the crops are assured. This is the condition that prevails in the steel industry at the present time. Buyers following the recent boom are, naturally, inclined to lessen their purchases for future delivery until the crop situation becomes more assured, but once these interests are convinced that a bountiful harvest is to be had, more confident buying should develop, and a return to prosperous conditions in this industry quickly take place.

* * *

A favorable feature in the general situation is the pronounced pessimism that now prevails among recent bull speculators. The general public is now distinctly bearish, in the face of the decline in securities, that in some stocks on Wall street has extended to $25 and $30 per share; whereas six weeks ago at the higher level, with conditions practically the same as now, they were strongly bullish. The public generally are never right long in the stock market, and now that they are all turned from bulls to bears, the market percentage would naturally seem to favor the trader, who will "copper" them by taking the long side. Commission houses generally report that they are carrying a smaller line of stocks than in years past, which also shows that securities are in the hands of the strong interests, who can the more readily advance them at the opportune time, and who will no doubt make an effort to do so as soon as the crop situation is assured.

* * *

Money conditions from all points of view remain ideal, a plethora of funds is noted in all markets of the world. Interest rates both locally and abroad remain exceedingly easy, and unless an active speculation in the securities market once again extends credit abnormally, the crop-moving period this fall should be passed without a ripple.

* * *

On the local exchange trading during the week was limited to a few issues and even in these the volume of sales was small. United Railways common was traded in in a small way at $30 to $30.25; United Railways preferred sold between $80.50 and $81.25, and closed the trading around the higher figure. United Railways 4s were in strong demand throughout the week at $89 to $89.12½.

* * *

In the bank and trust list, Missouri-Lincoln Trust sold at $143 to $143.62½, then down to $142.25 and back to $143. State National Bank (ex-dividend 3 per cent) at $182 and $181; German-American Bank at the record-breaking figure of $1000 per share for a 10-share lot, and an odd lot of Commonwealth Trust at $329. Other sales were National Candy first preferred at $97.25; Kansas City Home Telephone stock at $79, the 5 per cent bonds of this company $97.75; Brewery Association 6s large at $100, and one small bond at $105. This closed the trading for the week.

East St. Louis Man Asks $6000 Damages From Woman Demanding Rent.

A suit for $6000 damages was filed in the City Court of East St. Louis yesterday by Charles Enright against Lillie B. Davis for trespass.

Enright says he lives on St. Clair avenue in a house formerly owned by Adam Bauchens, but which at Bauchens' death was willed to Mrs. Davis. The will is now being contested, and Enright refuses to pay the rent to anyone until the contest is settled.

Mrs. Davis contends that she is entitled to the rent for the premises, and during the argument Mrs. Davis called him a chicken theif, which language he considers sufficiently offensive to justify his suit for $6000 damages.

ACQUIT LITHUANIAN QUEEN.

Jury Frees Mrs. Sorotch of Violating Midnight Saloon Closing.

Mrs. Anna Sorotch was yesterday acquitted by a jury in Justice Stanton's court on the charge of keeping her saloon open after midnight in violation of the midnight closing ordinance.

Mrs. Sorotch is the widow of Joseph Sorotch, who was murdered in his saloon at 471 Collinsville avenue by Noble Lewis and Virgil McDonald, and is known as "Queen of the Lithuanians." After her husband's death she continued to run the saloon and last Wednesday was arrested charged with keeping her place open after 12 o'clock.

The case was set for Wednesday morning, and after a jury had been impaneled the evidence showed that Mrs. Sorotch had closed her saloon at midnight, but that together with a young lady named Rogers and her bartender she was washing the glasses and cleaning the bar and they had stopped to take a drink of port wine before leaving.

The jury was out only a few minutes and returned a verdict finding her not guilty.

Stern Manager Tells Exchange Girls That Their Flirtations Must Stop.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAZELTON, Pa., June 3.—Flirting by wire with telephone girls must stop. General Manager Mans of the Consolidated Telephone Co., who has his headquarters in this city, has started a vigorous warfare against the practice.

He is not opposed to flirtation per se, but he objects to that species of callow young men who take delight in bestowing gallant attention on the girls in the exchanges, incidentally hampering the service. Mans has issued orders to the girls at all the offices of the company in Eastern Pennsylvania that the exchange must refrain from unnecessary conversations with patrons.

He realizes that the girls are not altogether to blame, but says their acts are detrimental to the service, as when a foolish young man gets the ear of the telephone operator he is engaging her attention, to the neglect of waiting subscribers, who have more important business than telling a girl they have never seen what pretty eyes she has and how much they would like to meet her.

BRING BODY FROM EUROPE.

Funeral of John Bardenheier Not Yet Arranged For.

Cablegrams announce that Mrs. John Bardenheier and daughter, Miss Clara, will sail from Hamburg Thursday with the body of John Bardenheier, the well-known St. Louis business man, who died in Neuenahr of diabetes Thursday.

Relatives and friends of the Bardenheier family from various parts of Europe hastened to the help of the bereaved mother and daughter as soon as Mr. Bardenheier's death was known and will remain with them until their departure for America. It is possible that some of the relatives will accompany them. They will arrive in New York June 15.

John H. and Joseph A. Bardenheier, sons, will meet their mother in New York and return with her to St. Louis. The plans for the funeral will be announced as soon as possible.

FORGIVES LITTLE CULPRIT.

Woman Kisses Girl Locked Up for Taking Watch.

Mrs. Nettie Seinker, 1708 North Tenth street, missing a watch from her room and being unable to find it after thorough search, told a policeman that she believed a little girl who had been to the house that day had taken it. The policeman went to the little girl's house and found the watch. Then the girl was locked up over night at the police station.

Next morning Mrs. Seinker visited the station and her attitude toward the prisoner was different from what the policeman had expected. She took her in her arms and kissed her and asked the officers to release her. This they did, and the sadder and wiser little girl accompanied Mrs. Seinker from the police station hand in hand.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

JULY WHEAT FEELS WEIGHT OF RUSSIAN

Imported Grain in Local Storehouses Cause of Depression in Next Month's Option.

CASH MARKET VERY STRONG

Corn Stocks Have Increased Rapidly—Variety to the Crop Reports.

"Russian" wheat is the only explanation offered for the differences in price existing between July wheat in St. Louis and Chicago. When compared with the slight difference between the September options in the same cities this spread cannot fail to cause comment.

In Chicago July wheat closed Thursday at 88½@88⅝c, while in St. Louis the same option closed at 81⅛@81¼c, a difference of 6⅝c, and during the day the fluctuations had made the difference at times fully 7c. The same day the September option closed in Chicago at 82¼@82⅜, while in St. Louis it was 80⅝@80½c, a difference of 1⅝c.

The spread between July and September in Chicago was 6¼c, in St. Louis on the figures given it was less than 1 cent. The Chicago situation as to the spread between the months and the September situation between the two cities are about normal, as shown by the records of previous years.

The Russian wheat comes into the situation through the disinclination of millers and others to buy it from Spencer-Akin and others to whom it was delivered on the May deal. It and the wheat with which it is mixed forms the bulk of the 1,800,000 bushels public elevator stock in St. Louis, and as it cannot be turned into cash very readily at a profit it will likely remain here. As long as it is held here it will beat down on the nearest option price, as it is likely to be delivered on any deal. Hence the depressed price of the July option reflects to a large extent the depression felt by the local grain men over the mixed wheat.

The May deal, the first in which the Russian mixture, duly graded as No. 2 red winter, figured, closed last week, and the new crop is not more than three weeks off. [illegible] is in St. Louis 1,849,018 bushels of wheat in public elevators and 193,000 bushels in private elevators. Last year the stock was less than one-third of this. According to estimates of grain men, fully 1,000,000 bushels of this wheat will be here July 1 and such offerings of new wheat as reach this market by that time will be little heeded in the deliveries. By September, they estimate, the old wheat will be at such a low ebb that the Russian mixture will be practically eliminated and it will not figure in the deliveries for that month. Last year the old crop available for July delivery was a small fraction of that in prospect this year.

Mixture Already Sold.

In this connection it can be said that it is the popular belief in the grain pit that the May longs have already sold this wheat for July delivery and the owners of it have outstanding some 2,000,000 bu. which must be delivered or settled during July. The constant sale of this line of wheat has aided the Russian wheat in depressing the speculative market to a greater or less extent.

While July delivery wheat is comparatively lower in St. Louis than in any of the other markets, cash wheat has been at a distinct premium here. When country wheat was selling in St. Louis at $1.12, Kansas City was offering native No. 2 red at $1.06 and even Chicago was not offering its equal, considering the normal difference of 3 cents a bushel between the two cities. St. Louis has been receiving a liberal amount of country wheat by reason of this difference and, while the market has been dull and the price well down materially toward the last of the week, the receipts of satisfactory milling wheat have been taken.

There is not a little talk of some good trade for the St. Louis wheat men in the near future from the southern trade. Contracts drawn in the plantation district are expiring and cannot be renewed until the crop is harvested. In the meantime the millers must buy on the market and St. Louis is their natural point. It is not expected, however, that this demand will be so heavy as to cause any very great decrease in the local supply in the elevators before the first of the month.

Corn Stocks Replenished.

The stocks of corn have come up rapidly during the last ten days. For more than a week the public elevators carried about 1000 bushels. June 1 they had 96,545 bushels, most of which was of high grade corn, and the private elevators had 24,000 bushels.

The end of the Chicago May deal in corn which at one time is said to have involved 10,000,000 bushels and a considerable amount of this was held until near the delivery date, cut the cash price of corn materially. In Chicago at times toward the close of the month, cash corn of contract grade was quoted at 62½ cents. It dropped to nearly 50 cents when the delivery was over. In St. Louis, cash corn reached 54 cents for No. 2 white or yellow corn and May 30 collapsed to 50½ and 51 cents. The next day there was a rally to 52 cents and better than that for yellow corn.

It was freely predicted by corn men that as soon as the rush of corn started to catch the Chicago May price was over, the receipts would drop off wonderfully. Lately the receipts at the primary points have totaled somethin~ over 1,000,000 bushels of corn daily. Should the local receipts drop off, the stocks would fade rapidly.

Oats have been causing very little stir in the speculative market, the price being on the actual feeding and shipping basis and not being attractive to the speculator. The local cash market has kept fair pace with the brisk demand.

Crop Damage Reports.

Reports of severe damage to growing crops, especially wheat continue to keep the wires hot from the Southwest. But they are so conflicting that the brokers can hardly tell the safe points. Messages from the same time filed at the same time will tell exactly opposite conditions. The firms receiving these reports have begun to regard the radical ones with suspicion, as no buying orders follow from that part of the country.

These reports have at times had a very decided effect on the market and at times it seemed that the trade believed because one Kansas county had gone to the bad there was to be no wheat. The vast country east of the Mississippi river seems to have been lost sight of by the bulls. Not a direct damage report has come from Pennsylvania, whose five-year average of winter wheat is 24,382,934 bushels, nor from Indiana, which produces a million more, nor from Ohio, who takes second place in the winter wheat states with her 30,000,000. Kentucky is the only State east of the Mississippi from which damage has been reported. Illinois has been set down as a spotted prospect from the first.

The reports on corn are all the same—agreed on late planting. Oats are generally doing well.

The Missouri monthly report this week was a real surprise in the backset it gave the wheat prospects. The report gave the condition ofthe crop as 81, against 89 May 1. Snow's monthly report, announced Friday, gave the winter wheat crop condition as 88.8, against 91.1 May 1, a most remarkable record for the unusually bad month of May.

Duluth's New Delivery Rule.

The Merchants' Exchange is advised by the Secretary of the Duluth Board of Trade that the following rule has been adopted for deliveries of wheat in that market:

"All contracts for the purchase and sale of wheat, unless otherwise specified, shall be understood to be for No. 2 Northern wheat. All contracts for September, 1905, and later delivery to take effect upon the adoption of this rule by the association."

Dramatic Entertainment.

A dramatic entertainment has been arranged for next Wednesday evening by the Woman's Guild of St. James' Memorial Church. The title of the play is "The Return of the Spinsters," it being a sequel to "The Spinsters' Convention," acted early in the spring. This performance is to be given in Entertainment Hall at the Odeon and will be followed by a social evening and dancing.

AMERICA SEES THE YELLOW PERIL SINCE BATTLE

Washington Officials Fear Their Overwhelming Triumph Will Make the Japanese So Arrogant They Will Seek Trouble.

HAD HOPED THE FIGHT WOULD BE INDECISIVE.

Russian Fleet on Paper Looked So Strong That Many Experts Figured That It Had Some Chance of Victory.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—American naval officers talk of little else than the completeness of the triumph of the Japanese and the small price which the Japanese have had to pay for it, according to advices so far received.

Manila Bay and Santiago are not to be compared with it. Manila Bay was a mere slaughter of weak gunboats. Santiago was a case of deliberate suicide for honor's sake. But the battle of the Korean Straits was between fleets well matched in physical power. If anything, the Russians had the best of it on paper. One of the ablest and best known of the naval students and historians of this country said this afternoon that while he had always thought the Japanese would win, he had believed the Russians had a chance—one chance in four or five—at any rate, a chance. As it turned out, he added, they did not have a chance in a thousand. They were simply lambs led to the slaughter.

The truth is that a majority of American officials and naval officers are to some extent disappointed at the result. Some of them thought Russia would win on account of her paper superiority in battleships. Others—and among them must be included various high dignitaries who have much to do with shaping the policies of our government—had hoped the outcome of the naval engagement would be something like a draw, thaat the balance would be held fairly even between the rival powers. It is no longer a secret that official Washington, from ardent sympathy with Japan, has come to look askance at the rising might of Nippon in the far East. There is speculation as to what may happen after the Japanese have taken possession of Manchuria, an empire larger and richer than their entire Empire at the present time, after they have placed China in leading strings, politically and commercially and militantly, after they have collected an enormous indemnity from the Russians and spent a considerable part of it upon their new navy. What then?

At a luncheon table today were gathered members of the Cabinet and other notables. This question was discussed. One eminent man spoke of the fact that in ten years the Japanese had fought and vanquished two of the most populous nations of the earth. "Whom will they fight next?" he asked. "Will they become arrogant with success? Will they get to thinking they are the masters of the Eastern world? If so, there are some bad half-hours ahead for all of us of the West."

Another official spoke of the growing anti-Japanese sentiment on the Pacific coast and said he felt like repeating President Roosevelt's warning to that section. The President once declared that when a people become opulent and arrogant at the same time they must look out for trouble. Some of the ablest men in Washington are already asking the question: "What will happen when the Japanese and the Americans meet in combat?" Thus the mind runs on before when stirred by an epoch-making event like that which has just happened in the Korean Straits and the Sea of Japan.

Perhaps the chief reason why our naval people are astounded at the result of the great battle and a little disappointed, is the evidence which appears on the surface of the reports now at hand to the effect that the torpedo boat played a most important and possibly decisive part in the engagement. Under the leadership of Admiral Dewey and the general naval board, ably abetted by President Roosevelt, our experts have almost run amuck with their pet theory that the torpedo is a negligible arm and that the battleship is the mainstay of every effective navy. It was in too faithful adherence to this theory that many of our experts, forgetting the lesson that after all it is the man behind the gun and the gun rather than the ship that carries them, that achieves results, permitted themselves to be led into the error of thinking Rojestvensky had an even chance. When asked today what naval lessons they drew from the battle these champions of the battleships were silent. They said not enough was known to form judgment upon—which is probably true. They wanted further detail before expressing an opinion. This was Admiral Dewey's attitude and that of most of the others.

But all the indications are that the torpedo boat, and possibly also the submarines which the smart Japanese have been so industriously building, worked havoc among the Russian ships. Practically all the Japanese losses were among the small craft. If they lost ten or a dozen boats and destroyers these craft must have been in the thick of the fighting. If they were ramming home their shots some of those shots must have taken effect.

KAISER ROASTS RUSSIAN COMMANDER AT MUKDEN.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, June 3.—The Strassburger Post, in an account of the Emperor's speech to the troops at Strasburg, gives the following passage:

"As regards the supreme command, the old and so often disregarded lessons have again been justified. Above all, with battlefields of such extent, the commander-in-chief must not go to the fighting front. He can there only get a survey of the section in his immediate vicinity, while he loses completely his grasp of the direction of the operations as a whole.

"At the battle of Mukden, Gen. Kuropatkin, commanding the Russian forces, made the mistake of going right to the front. Marshal Oyama, the Japanese commander-in-chief, remained far away from the actual scene of fighting, and thence directed the widely extended struggle, receiving telegraphic reports, sending telegraphic orders, sitting quiet, like a chessplayer, who can at once follow move by move. This was quite impossible for Gen. Kuropatkin owing to his lack of good position."

KING ALPHONSO JOYOUS OVER HIS PARIS GREETING

Spain's Young Monarch Inspires Merriment Wherever He Goes About French Capital by His Gaiety and Good Nature.

"MY BAPTISM OF FIRE" HIS COMMENT ON BOMB

Gravely Salutes American Flag Among the Decorations at the Opera—"Fonfence" Is Pet Name Bestowd Upon Him.

PARIS, June 3.—"It's my baptism of fire, Mr. President," said King Alphonso, almost gaily, when the first shock of the explosion passed Wednesday night.

It was noticed that the young King, though very pale, was more than ever eager to show in his own boyish way his frank delight at the tumultuous greetings which hailed him as the cortege whirled through the crowded midnight streets, illuminated in his honor.

This note of the gay youth has captivated the Parisians all through; never did a king visiting Paris bring more laughter in his train, without any lack of dignity when the case called for it. Alphonso was manifestly out for a lark. Everything interested him; everything amused him; his face was perpetually wreathed in smiles. Quite often he rose in his carriage and stood looking and laughing at some group or incident which amused him, or waving his hand and laughing like a merry schoolboy at a knot of pretty girls acclaiming him.

Good-natured President Loubet laughed in sympathy, and it has happened sometimes that the whole gorgeous convoy went flashing down the streets, every man grinning broadly. Alphonso's visit in fact has been a prolonged carnival of mirth. People, when not calling him with a sort of kindly familiarity by the diminutive "Fonfonse," speak of him as "le petit bonhomme gai."

All of the constraint vanished in his presence, so much so that at the Hotel de Ville, Prefect Lepine, off his guard, to his own great confusion, committed a monumental blunder.

A champagne cork hit the police official on the back.

"Ah, a bomb!" cried Lepine, jocosely.

Everyone, the King included, burst into laughter, but President Loubet frowned and the prefect hid himself in a moment, manifestly ashamed at having let slip the sinister word and raised brooding fears that had temporarily been forgotten.

The Prefect's blunder was all the more surprising since it was known he had been in perpetual perspiration for fear of some untoward incident during the visit, knowing the Barcelona anarchists had sworn to cut down the young King amid the splendor of the unparalleled fetes with which France was greeting his entry into the domain of world politics.

This accounts for a fact which has been much commented upon, that the route of the royal and presidential passages has never, even from the beginning, exactly tallied with the published program.

It has leaked out that Alphonso himself confided to Loubet he had certain misgivings on coming to Paris, but said: "In the presence of these thousands of enthusiastic friends, I can see no one would dare even to insult me."

He had for some reason expected his welcome to be mainly official, the people remaining coldly civil, and his discovery of the joy of the populace has driven out of his mind all discontent.

He is bound from morning to night in the chains of the program, and has not one moment free to wander at his will, but everyone having an opportunity of judging agrees that "his will" would be very innocent.

Several times the King noticed an American flag among the decoration at the opera and he saluted it very gravely.

LONDON, June 3.—Interest over the King of Spain's visit to London is largely confined to court circles, where, it is hoped, it may eventuate in a royal betrothal, though there is every reason to believe church considerations will prevent it. Doubtless large crowds will welcome him on Tuesday, but there so far has been no attempt at decorating the streets through which he will pass. There are to be the usual banquets at Buckingham Palace, a gala night at the opera and a visit to Windsor Castle, but, unfortunately, no opportunity for shooting, the King's favorite sport.

The closeness of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught is exciting the strongest criticism, for they have not offered a single entertainment for the King, whose guests they recently were in Madrid. Even the inducement of such hospitality as might forward the match is insufficient cause for them to open their purse strings. They achieved a record in meanness during the visit of Princess Margaret's fiance, for

"RUSSIA READY TO FALL ON INDIA;" ENGLISH ASSERT

Deeply Humiliated as She Has Been by Japan, She Still Dreams of World Conquest, London Papers Declare.

MUST DO SOMETHING TO RESTORE HER PRESTIGE

Railway and Fine Military Road Through Barren Land to Frontier of Fertile Afghanistan Bode Ill for Peace of Albion.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—If the London journals are to be believed, Russia, deeply humiliated as she has been by Japan, is still glorying in her dream of world conquest. Here is the manner in which the Express looks on the Czar as a possible invader of India:

No one who has studied Russian ways can imagine for a moment that Russia will remain quiescent under the blows which have demonstrated the failure of Russian arms in the Far East. She must regain her lost prestige at any cost or cease to exist.

To avert disintegration, Russia will be compelled to strike another blow, and along the whole of her enormous frontier there is but one spot where this blow can be struck.

Every great military genius which Russia has produced during the last three-quarters of a century has organized, nursed, elaborated his plan for the conquest of India.

During the present generation—for Russia has hitherto been able to afford to advance slowly—one plan or another has been gradually pushed forward, military posts have been established, railways have been built, and though details may have varied, the objective has always remained constant.

The latest issue of the Times of India received by the current mail states in definite and emphatic terms that Russia has at the present moment 200,000 troops under arms in Central Asia, and a sufficient force within striking distance of Herat to take that city within a week.

Every one of her centers from Sarakhs to Osh is an armed camp. Her outposts confront those of the Ameer on the upper waters of the Oxus, and she is steadily accumulating supplies.

The trains that come across the steppes from Orenburg to Tashkend (the line of railway recently completed) bring soldiers, none of whom ever go back. This railway has brought Russia "weeks nearer" the Indian frontier.

Several fine military roads are being constructed from various points to the Afghan border, and it is now possible to drive comfortably in a carriage along a magnificent road from Osh, over the Alai plateau and the Trans-Alai Mountains, very nearly to Fort Murghabi on the Pamirs. And this is only one of the several such roads which follow the old caravan routes.

To the Indian Foreign Department officials it is thoroughly well known that, despite the heavy work entailed upon Russia by the operations in Manchuria, nothing has been allowed to interfere with her preparations along the Afghan frontier.

Since her intrigues with Tibet were rendered abortive by the success of the Younghusband expedition, these Russian preparations have been pushed forward with constantly increasing energy.

From the Caspian to Merv every detail for an advance has been worked out. Kushk has been converted, since the completion of the Merv branch railway, from a barren village into an important military and engineering post, with huge granaries and stores, well-fitted workshops, and lines of barracks.

From Merv to Tashkend military communications have been established, new railroads have been built and military posts have been created throughout Bokhara, and along the whole line, from Chinese Turkestan on the east to the Persian border on the west, there has been a gradual, unobstrusive concentration of forces.

To all but the wilfully blind these preparations can have but one meaning. If Afghanistan first, and ultimately India, were not the objective, why should Russia keep this vast army in South Turkestan? Why extend her railways through regions which are practically barren till the fertile fields of Afghanistan are reached?

Russia has no interests of peace in this region; no agriculture, no commerce—none that is, to demand a military backing of such great force.

LONDON, June 3.—Great sympathy is felt for Mrs. Brown Potter in her disastrous financial shock. Mrs. Potter was so keen about her art that she deliberately risked her own money in her theatrical venture. She lost not only this, but the solicitor who acted for her, who the other day asserted publicly that she was more than $60,000 in his debt, and had managed her affairs so badly that she had lost practically everything.

In desperation she asked him to effect a mortgage on Braye Lodge, but, instead of doing this, he arranged a bill of sale, not only on the house and grounds, but on the furniture, and it was this which first gave Mrs. Potter an inkling of what had occurred, as she could not understand why men were taking an inventory of the furniture, nor could she understand why one man said they wished to have her sables included, as they must be worth $1500. She made inquiries and found out how she had been caught; also that on one loan 60 per cent had been charged for a fortnight.

She was so determined that none of the people acting with her should lose anything that she sold her jewels to pay them the last week's salaries. Everybody admits she has behaved remarkably well. She and Gilbert Hare are to appear soon at the Coliseum in the second act of "I Pagliacci," and she has offers of other

PARIS, June 3.—French women who once thought it foreign and vulgar to bet at the races except gloves and handkerchiefs and then only with men friends who were expected to pay like little men whatever happened on the field, have recently developed a veritable mania for money-making on the turf.

At Chantilly this week files of fashionable women waited at the booths of the Paris Mutual with the humblest citizens, to stake money in sums often more than manlike in magnitude. The Rothschilds, men and women, always back the family horses to a large extent and make it a point of sportsmanlike honor to line up at the booths.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt will not mix with the common herd, though she often backs her husband's horses. She likes to get a good tip before venturing to send a lackey to place her modest ten dollar bill. She says a woman should bet only enough to give sporting spice to the afternoon and not for vulgar gain.

PARIS, June 3.—Mrs. McCormick is winning golden opinions in Paris society, not only by her personal charm and graciousness, but by the promise of some splendid fetes under her reign as ambassadress. Her hotel, 12 Quai de Billy, is one of the most costly mansions in Paris, with a rental of $20,000 yearly, and it is magnificently furnished.

There are five vast reception rooms, opening one into the other, for official and the larger social functions. These are on the second floor and approached by a superb staircase of old-fashioned Paris amplitude. The ordinary living and reception rooms are on the first floor. Americans, resident or passing through, are leaving stacks of cards daily, and these tacit requests for invitations threaten to create grave problems of precedence and will require herculean work in sifting.

An indiscreet French journalist publishes a calculation that the yearly maintenance of the ambassadress' equipage alone exceeds by a large sum the ambassador's salary. The same writer dubs McCormick the "sumptuous ambassador" and compares his style of doing things to that of princely diplomatists of the old school, as Cardinal de Rohan at Rome and the Duc de Verneuil at St. Petersburg.

Mr. McCormick is making himself popular both in American and cosmopolitan circles. Down in the Latin quarter this week, among the American artists, he made the reception pleasant to everyone by the simple device of first enjoying it

REVOLUTION COMING IF WRONGS AREN'T RIGHTED

"Stick to Your Trade Union and You Must Win," Her Advice to Men Who Gather to Petition Parliament.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—There are hundreds of thousands of employed persons in England and numerous armies, like Coxey's in America, are marching on London. Several have already visited the capital to urge Parliament to pass a bill to provide Government work for the idle.

A curious, not to say astonishing, phase of this situation is the appearance of the "Socialist." Countess of Warwick in her red (note the color) automobile, leading these processions about the streets of London.

This extraordianary woman, of ancient lineage and royal connection, is proclaiming her sympathy with the labor movement at every opportunity and warning the Government that revolution is near.

The great event of the week was her welcome to the Raunds strikers—bootmakers—led by "General" Gribble.

In a room set apart for reception purposes the smiling Countess had to wait some time for the arrival of the gallant "General," as, having received a sprained ankle in the course of his discussion with the police at the House of Commons on the day before, he had gone out to have his foot dressed.

The Countess received him most cordially—one must not say graciously, because yesterday "General" Gribble became a "comrade" of the Countess on the Federation.

Lady Warwick, who has now given up wearing white gloves at social democratic functions, shook hands all round, and then, escorted by the bronzed veterans of the march, she walked to the market place.

The combination of the Countess and the blood-red motor car caused a huge crowd to assemble. The Countess, indeed, had to be ringed round to save her charming spring gown from being hopelessly ruined by the somewhat grimy boots of her "brothers" and "sisters" of the proletariat.

The Socialist Countess then proceeded to make the adversaries of Mr. Arnold-Forster an exceedingly brief, but stirring, speech. She told them that if they "stuck to their trade union" they must win. Pluck was all that was required. As it was, they had afforded a valuable object lesson as to what determined men could do.

The "determined men" then proceeded to give three cheers for the Countess, and afterwards three cheers more for the "social revolution."

Then Lady Warwick daintily picked up her exquisite skirts and gracefully entered the crimson motor car. From this she waved a delicate and scented hand at her delighted "comrades," who cheered and cheered again as the motor car whisked the "vision of socialism" from their admiring gaze.

AMERICANS SHOW PARIS ONE FASHION, ANYWAY.

PARIS, June 3.—American society women have long been trying to persuade their French friends to take up the fashion of women's luncheons, but French women frankly confess themselves unable to understand this one transatlantic custom. They say a gathering without men is like a hat of this season without feathers. The subject was neatly disposed of on Wednesday at a luncheon given at the Ritz by Mrs. Guild of New York for her daughter's birthday. It was a rose festival and the birthday note was struck by the original plan of dividing the guests into table groups according to age and condition, elderly married women at one table decorated with red roses, younger matrons at a pink rose table and the unmarried at one with white roses. To each guest was given her guiding flower, whereupon one bright American matron, holding a pink rose, said:

"Ah, the Francaises are wrong. How much more delightful to be escorted to table by roses than by men."

(New York World.)

LONDON, June 3.—Among many English beauties and famous women of all countries at the King's court this week, none created more stir than Mrs. J. J. Astor of New York.

When she arrived at the palace, many friends surrounded her with congratulations; during her long wait of an hour and a half, when all the ladies were penned up in waiting rooms, she was about the only one who appeared to be enjoying herself and to keep cool in the heated atmosphere.

Before passing the thrones, after her name was called, there was quite a pause, for she was anxious that her magnificent train of rose-red velvet should be displayed to the best advantage, and the two lackeys who arrange these details had a trying two minutes before she was suited.

This unusual pause naturally called the attention of the royalties, and as she passed everyone in the large circle of 30 stared at her.

Quite unperturbed, she passed, and, as she courtesied, the Queen smiled her sweetest and made some remark in the King's ear; he smiled and, contrary to his general habit, gave her a stately little bow as she departed.

Mrs. Langhorne Shaw, formerly of Virginia, and one of the "Gibson girls," has become one of the most popular women in London, and the fact that rumors of her engagement to Lord Revelstoke got abroad has given her an added air of importance; she is invited everywhere, almost outdoing Mrs. Astor in the number of her invitations.

The origin of the rumor was that she and Lord Revelstoke were seen about a great deal together at Melton Mowbray, and what attracts the rather somber peer is the fact that she is small and he is tall, and although not as noticeable in a crowd as is Mrs. Astor, she is intensely amusing and witty. Although Lord Revelstoke has denied the engagement, its possibility is still much canvassed, as a halo of romance always surrounds him owing to the rumor that Princess Victoria wanted to marry him years ago, and fell ill when the late Queen vetoed the engagement. He, however, is exceedingly close to the King, and is almost invariably included at his private dinner parties.

Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago is taking things very quietly, simply giving a series of small dinners to her intimate friends, and is determined for the present to do nothing in the way of big entertaining for to make an effect at Hampden house she must have several hundred guests, and these the cream of society, and she evidently intends to feel her way cautiously. Today she had a big dinner party, among her guests being Mrs. Moreton Frewen (Miss Yznaga of Natchez and New York) and her daughter, Mrs. Shaw, and Mrs. Chauncey and Lady Newborough (the Misses Carr of Louisville).

DUBLIN, June 3.—The part played by the Irish brigade in the overthrow of the English army at Fontenoy in 1745, when it turned what seemed a disastrous defeat into a brilliant victory for the French arms, will be celebrated next week by a pilgrimage to the battlefield, in which many leading Irishmen intend to take part.

Several visits will be paid to the battlefield and the proceedings will close with a banquet at which speeches will be made by Irishmen, Frenchmen and Englishmen. America will be represented by Frank J. Sullivan of San Francisco, who came to participate in the pilgrimage. He has been much feted here, where, at a banquet in his honor, he delivered an eloquent speech expressive of the sympathy of Irish-Americans with the object of the pilgrimage.

PARIS, June 3.—The aristocratic playground, l'Isle de Puetaux, has begun to claim again its customary tribute from the fair Americans, whose mania for sport first gave it its first distinction.

Among the chic Parisiennes converted to tennis and golf by transatlantic innovators have been present of late many members of the American colony, conspicuous, as their French sisters admit, by the wisdom of their costumes, a judicious combination of elegance with the efficiency and practicability required for sport.

French modistes, although they mock America for the gowns it supplies for the street or the ballroom, are in despair at the elegant creations imported from the United States or designed by the resident colony for the purposes of the tennis court. Just as soon as they reproduce one in the hope of meeting the demand of the American colony, the leaders baffle them

THE JAPANESE VENEER OFF.

In his message to the Mikado, Admiral Togo gave us a glimpse of the real Japan, disclosing the inmost thought of the Japanese mind, and the Japanese social and political organization. He ascribed the success of the fleet to the "brilliant virtue of Your Majesty and the protection of the spirits of your imperial ancestors and not to the action of any human being."

This is a combination of ancestor worship and of the worship of the Mikado as the representative of the nation to which all else, life, ambition, talents, must be sacrificed if need be. The individual is merely a unit in the nation, which is everything. The individual has no rights or interests as against the empire. First nation, then clan, then family—all highly organized and effective for their purposes. This enables us to understand the sacrificial courage of the Japanese.

Admiral Togo took the veneer off the Japanese civilization.

BEVERIDGE GAVE US AWAY.

A writer in the Novoe Vremya, a St. Petersburg newspaper, quoted in the Literary Digest, denounces the United States as "the real enemy" of Russia.

Persons not in the secret, who have read of the events at Port Arthur, Liaoyang and Mukden, somehow conceived the notion that Japan was the real enemy of Russia, but the St. Petersburg pundit reveals the truth.

We want Eastern Siberia—everything east of Irkutsk and Lake Baikal—because of the gold and other minerals there. We have, therefore, hounded on the Japanese to a war which will end in an American occupation of those regions. In support of this splendid view of world policy, the writer quotes Senator Beveridge: "No European countries have any right to exploit the countries of the far East, and the American sphere practically includes not only the maritime Pacific provinces, but inland Siberia, Amur and Yakutsk as far west as Lake Baikal."

So it was Beveridge who gave us away. That is what comes of telling secrets to a man who likes to talk. We had intended to keep the matter quiet until Japan had made the conquests and then demand what belongs to us. Of course, there never was any doubt that the Mikado would be good and hand over. The Japanese are a reasonable people. But now that this talker has made our purpose public there will be a European combination and we may have trouble. What should have been ours without cost may have to be won by war.

The man who betrays a state secret is a terraitor-r. Beveridge is that man. He should be punished with a punishment that is to him worse than death. He should be made to restrain the eloquence of his patriotism.

TOGO'S GREAT SECRET.

It was an American, of course, who asked Admiral Togo to tell the best way to reach "success in life." Just at present in this country we are as deeply interested in discovering how to create "success" as the world's great minds used to be in trying to find what they called the "summum bonum," or the "philosopher's stone," or the "elixir of eternal youth."

Thousands of people had been asked the same question before it was put to Togo and their answers would make an entire library. But Togo was the first man who showed fully that he really knew. "Get quick and simple action," he said.

Since then he has demonstrated his theory. He got the quick and simple action the other day which sent the naval power of Russia to the bottom of the Sea of Japan, and his greatest triumph in doing it was in vindicating his own rule of success.

If the right man applies it, it will win every time. But although any one can get quick action, it requires the Togo quality to make the action both quick and simple.

While the monarchs of Europe and their cabinets were consulting and their generals were planning, Napoleon's rule of success was not to count their numbers, but to stick the pin which stood for his point of attack at the weakest point of their lines. That was simple action. Then he got quick action by bringing three times as many men against that point as the enemy had there and winning the battle while they were completing their complicated plans.

In a world where most people think that plans to be great must be complicated, "quick and simple action" puts the victorious foot of genius on the neck of its enemies in business, in politics and in war.

But when the whole thing is over, how much satisfaction is there in leaving a world full of conquered enemies?

The report is that Czar Nicholas will let the people decide the question of peace. It is not improbable. He let the ministers decide the question of war, and when the war was on the Japanese decided the question of victory. ◆◆◆

CAVALRY IN NAVAL WARFARE.

Ever since a French revolutionary general captured a squadron of warships with a troop of cavalry, military and naval experts have studied the possibilities of cavalry in sea fighting.

Russia's experience is not encouraging. It appears that one battleship was manned by the officers and members of the Czarina's Imperial Guard, a crack corps, and the crews of several other ships are said to have been made up of first-class fighting men from the Czar's best troops.

The argument that the sea being wide affords a good field for the evolution of cavalry is not disputed. But the sea is deep as well as wide, and Equus never took willingly to water. He has an instinctive preference for solid earth. He likes to hear the patter of his hoofs. He never envied the duck and doesn't care to fraternize with his distant cousins, the sharks.

The battle of the Sea of Japan probably settles this question. Notwithstanding Gen. Pichegru's splendid exploit in 1794 the use of cavalry in naval warfare is not practicable. True, the Horse Marines have been celebrated in song, but while they are showy they have not been severely tried. Admiral Rojestvensky's experience teaches that Horse Guards and Hussars are magnificent in a sea fight, but they do not make war—not exactly.

THE INSIDE ATTACK ON AMERICAN EDUCATION.

The Kentucky court which decides that the "Bible is not a sectarian book" is not only right, but accurately exact in that decision. Altogether apart from its significance in the religion of a majority of people in the United States, it belongs to the literature of the world and in its historical aspects it is the most important collection of ancient scriptures in existence.

In this Kentucky case, however, there is no reasonable doubt that the purposes of the public school system were being overstepped and the Bible used through mistaken zeal to teach religion by state authority, at the expense of taxes forcibly collected.

To support any form of religion, however sublimely true, by taxes forcibly collected strikes at the roots of the American system.

To teach religion and to teach politics in the public schools is the worst form of nullification, for it nullifies the two fundamental principles through which it was expected to make them nurseries of independent, thinking American citizenship.

In spite of this, politics and religion are both systematically taught in many public schools by teachers who think it their solemn duty to become nullifiers of the law. Some think they are teaching patriotism in teaching their own politics at state expense, as others think they are insuring their own salvation by attempting to propagate, through their authority as teachers, what they think necessary to save the souls of their pupils.

As far as the schools are freed from these two greatest menaces of their usefulness, we will not be mistaken in our hope that they will be the best support of free institutions.

A BONANZA IN VIRILITY.

They do things differently on the Pacific Coast. While we are complaining that there is no "virility" left in American poetry and scolding our Oriental poets for writing dialect and humor, they have arranged at the Portland Exposition for a "Joaquin Miller Day" as the climax of a "Western Authors' Week."

So those who demand "virility" can get all they want of it and to spare at wholesale. They are all virile on the other side of the Sierras and as the "Poet of the Sierras" Joaquin Miller is the most virile poet who has put pen to paper in this country since Whittier laid his down.

He is also the poet of the "Under Dog" and in the reams of verse he has written he is always going to the rescue of some one who has no help or hope except in virility of this kind.

It may be objected that he belongs to the "bucking broncho school" of verse, but those who so object may have grandchildren capable of finding more quotable lines in his verse than in that of any half dozen others who have written verse in English during the last 20 years.

WHY DO CROWDS YELL?

From Leslie's Weekly.

Why do crowds yell? Prof. George E. Vincent, son of the bishop who founded the Chautauqua Association, who is given to the investigation of curious phenomena, has undertaken to answer this question. Like the man who swore with a good round oath that he never swore, many people have been yelling in crowds all their lives and never noticed it. From Prof. Vincent many a quiet, silent man will learn that he has gone to a political meeting, and just because he was no longer an individual, but part of a hypnotized crowd, he has yelled like mad. This same taciturn man has gone to a baseball game and yelled again, and if his team won he tried to embrace everybody he knew, held his plug hat up on a cane, while yelling like a Commanche. An hour later, at home, his children could hardly get a word out of him about the game. Let a thousand people stroll out into a big park and scatter in small groups and they will be extremely quiet. Let the formation close up and they get more and more noisy. The college yell is not an isolated phenomenon, but just the outcropping of the common universal desire to whoop when two or more are gathered together. Prof. Vincent, after a study of the "psychology of mobs," reaches the conclusion that hypnosis accounts for this propensity. A hypnotized crowd, he says, loses itself individually through concentration, the central attitude toward life gets askew, and "suggestion" takes control. With all due respect to Prof. Vincent, we venture to say that the problem is much simpler than that. Man being a gregarious animal, he naturally feels good in a crowd, and when he feels good he yells to show that he is on the earth. There is no psychic mystery about the yell. It is not picked up along the way; it is not a college product. It begins in the cradle.

Ladies, Have a Hat With Me.

Mr. James Van Alen, that tidy American who recently expatriated himself, to all intents and purposes, declaring that no gentleman can live in America, started a new fashion last week when he attended the opening of a millinery shop in London presided over by a titled English woman.

Being urged by Lady Curzon and the Countess Hatzfeldt to patronize the place, he did so. Summoning all manner of dowagers and high-born ladies to his side, he bade each of 40 of them to "have a hat with him," and bought and paid for the whole lot.

For ages it has been the custom of men to invite one another to line up and have something, but this invitation has extended only to malt, vinous and spiritous liquors, usually followed by a peremptory demand on the man in the white jacket to "give us a good cigar." Never yet has it been thought of, on this side of the world, to invite the ladies to line up and have a hat.

But there is no telling what may happen, now that Mr. James Van Alen, gentleman, has set us an example.

THE POWER TO PLEASE.

O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

The power to please is a tremendous asset. What can be more valuable than a personality which always attracts, never repels? It is not only valuable in business, but also in every field of life. It makes statesmen and politicians, it brings clients to the lawyer and patients to the physician. It is worth everything to the clergyman. No matter what career you enter, you can not overestimate the importance of cultivating that charm of manner, those personal qualities which attract people to you. They will take the place of capital or influence. They are often a substitute for a large amount of hard work.

Some men attract business, customers, clients, patients, as naturally as magnets attract particles of steel. Everything seems to point their way, for the same reason that the steel particles point toward the magnet—because they are attracted.

Such men are business magnets. Business moves toward them even when they do not apparently make half so much effort to get it as the less successful. Their friends call them "lucky dogs." But if we analyze these men closely we find that they have attractive qualities. There is usually some charm of personality about them that wins all hearts.

BEEHIVE IN HER PARLOR.

From the Montreal Herald.

In the heart of London over a half a hundredweight of honeycomb has just been gathered. The bees responsible for this rich harvest belong to Miss Baden-Powell, sister of the hero of Mafeking. These wonderful bees are the subject of an interesting experiment. They had been removed from an old residence in Piccadilly to Miss Baden-Powell's new home at Prince's Gate.

During their 15 years in their old quarters the bees never failed to store up large quantities of honey, and were quite content to live in the drawing room, where their specially constructed hive, invented by Mis Baden-Powell, stood on a table near the window.

"The mystery is where they fed in order to make honey so excellent and in such quantities," said Miss Baden-Powell, "for there was no garden attached to the house."

In their new home at Prince's Gate the bees come and go through a passage in the wall as before, and Miss Baden-Powell is watching anxiously for signs of discontent, which she hopes will not be shown.

New Fuel Makes Intense Heat—Progress in Electric Welding—Gasoline Motors on the Thames--Power on Prairie Farms--Photographing the Interior of the Human Eye.

"RADIANT:" A NEW FUEL.

The following is from the "American Inventor:"

A new fuel called radiant, to be used in connection with gas and other fires, has been invented by two young engineers of Southend, England, and if it be proved that it can do all that is claimed for it, will cause as great a revolution in the present system of gas heating as did the introduction of the Welsbach mantle in gas lighting. The inventors claim for raidiant that it gives treble the heat with the same gas consumption as an ordinary gas fire, that it takes up the carbonic acid from the air and purifies the atmosphere; that it does away with the unpleasant smell given off by gas fires; that it burns brightly like a coal fire; that it is as cheap as fire clay, and is inexhaustible. It will take the place of asbestos or fire-clay balls, and will, it is said, give out an intense heat. It is made from materials that are now waste products of chemical works. The new fuel captures the blue flame, which at present is lost, and converts it into intense heat. Radiant is also said to possess the power of retaining heat to a very great degree.

GROWTH OF ELECTRIC WELDING.

The making of wire fences in continuous rolls is the latest development in automatic electric welding. A number of galvanized iron wires are fed to the machine parallel to each other and from another reel placed transversely to these wires lengths of wire are cut off and fed horizontally across them. Where the horizontal and vertical wires intersect small transformers weld them together, after which the wires are moved forward and the operation repeated. The application of electic welding by the American process, now attracting attention in England, promises to be greatly extended as soon as the projects for the installation of large electric power stations supplying current at cheap rates come into operation. The introduction of this system has already caused a complete modification of existing methods of manufacture and in some cases created entirely new manufactures. Among its many advantages over the ordinary forge or gas blowpipe are the facts that finished work can be welded and repaired without damage, the operation may be watched as it proceeds, and the work is done with great rapidity, a few seconds sufficing for most work and in small pieces the weld is made almost instantaneously. Tests showing the almost perfect homogeneous weld obtained give a ratio of weld to solid of 91.9 per cent for electrically welded iron bars, compared with 89.3 per cent for the best hand work. The cost of the fuel is about the same for either process, but the rapidity of the electric operation effects a great saving in labor.

GASOLINE MOTORS ON SAIL BOATS.

An interesting application of the gasoline motor for marine purposes was recently demonstrated upon the arrival in the Thames of the auxiliary vessel Sirra of 500 tons from Dordrecht. This vessel is a three-masted schooner, and with the large area of sails provided in a fast boat on the high seas. The craft, however, is also intended for service upon canals, for which purpose the masts are hinged, thereby enabling them to be lowered for passage beneath bridges. When the sails are unavailable the boat is propelled by a gasoline motor. There is a small single propeller placed well below the water line. The motor is placed right aft so as to reduce the length of the shafting as much as possible, and is controlled from the poop by means of a hand wheel and lever. The provision of this auxiliary power was strongly demonstrated upon the arrival of the vessel in the Thames. Instead of waiting for the tide, or requisitioning a tug, the vessel was driven up by the gasoline motor at a steady speed of six knots, and, as the masts were lowered, could pass beneath the bridges easily. Such a combination of wind and motor power presents many possibilities, since a vessel so equipped has great economy in power, ease in working and adaptability to circumstances. The Sirra was visited by many marine engineers interested in the problem of river navigation during her stay in the Thames. It afforded a concrete example of how the question of dealing with canal traffic may be efficiently and economically handled.

HARNESSING THE WIND.

The one source of power bestowed by nature on the prairie farms of the country has heretofore proved largely unavailable because of the danger involved to machinery in permitting windmills to run during heavy storms. For a new invention it is claimed it will transmit power not exceeding a predetermined limit, no matter how strong a wind is blowing. This new windmill has two wind wheels, with sails oppositely inclined, so they will run in opposite directions. As the velocity of the wind increases the wind wheels are tilted upward, thus modifying the force of the wind on the sails. The shaft of the inner wind wheel is hollow and revolves on the shaft of the outer wheel, and the bracket in which the shafts are mounted has a universal joint connection with the windmill standard, an adjustable counterweight balancing the weight of the wind wheels. The shafts carry bevel gears at their inner ends, that of the inner wind wheel engaging the upper teeth of the power wheel, while the gear attached to the shaft of the outer wind wheel engages the lower teeth of the power wheel. Consequently, although the wind wheels turn in opposite directions, they both act together in driving the the power shaft in the same direction. A blade or sail lying adjacent to and below the level of the wind wheels forms the vane of the mill, which occupies a plane normally transverse to the direction of the wind. As the strength of the wind increases the wind wheels rise because of the pressure against this vane and the wheels then rotate at an acute angle to the direction of the wind. In this way the force of the wind on the wheels is modified, for any increase in velocity will be compensated for by an increase in the angle between the axis of the wheel and the direction of the wind.

PHOTOGRAPHING INTERIOR OF EYE.

Dr. Walther Thorner of the University Eye Clinic, Berlin, has devised an apparatus to obtain good photographs of the background of the eye. Dr. Thorner's contrivance constitutes an improvement of the ophthalmoscope, invented by Helmholtz in 1850, which only admits of looking at the background of the eye. It has been impossible heretofore to photograph the interior. It is difficult to illuminate it sufficiently, and even if strong light were used the exposure would last too long.

Dr. Thorner first obtained photgraphs of the eyes of cats, but the interior of the human eye, being much darker, it required many improvements before good photographs could be taken. With a soft light the eye is first so focused that its back yields a clear image on the photographic plate. The plate put in, the camera is opened by a special lever, and a flashlight composition is ignited by an electric spark. It is possible to distinguish healthy eyes readily from sick ones, the eye of a strongly short-sighted person being, for instance, characterized by a perculiar ring around the illuminated center. Oculists may now watch the gradual progress of eye diseases.

CAPE TO CAIRO RAILWAY PROGRESS.

"The world do move." Here is a paragraph from 'The Missionary Review of the World about a country much of which, within the memory of men in middle life, was an unknown wilderness:

"The Cape to Cairo Railway, of which Cecil Rhodes dreamed, is fast passing from vision to fact. The Rhodesian Railways Co., Ltd., is now in operation from Cape Town to Victoria Falls, on the Zambesi River, 1644 miles. It is five days' journey in trains with all modern equipments, first-class sleeping and dining cars, smoking and writing rooms, over a steel track and steel bridges; fare for the distance, $90. The company has issued a folder that is described as being as handsome as anything of the kind ever printed, having 40 half-tone and six colored pictures and two maps, presenting glimpses of scenery, views of towns, fine bridges, elegant stations and hotels, and 'also a grain field where white men are harvesting with a self-binding reaper—all in Matabeleland and Mashonaland, of which Selous, Kerr and many others were writing 16 years ago that Europeans could enter these countries only at the peril of their lives.'"

WHEN ROYALTY ATE WITH THEIR FINGERS.

From London Modern Society.

None of the sovereigns of England had forks till the reign of Henry VII. All, high and low, used their fingers. Hence, in the royal households there was a dignitary called the ewer, who, with a set of subordinates, attended at the meals with basins, water and towels. The survival of ewery was evident after forks had come into fashion. We learn when James I entertained the Spanish ambassador at a dinner "Their Majesties washed their hands with water from the same ewer, the towels being presented to the King by the Lord Treasurer and to the Queen by the Lord High Admiral." The Prince of Wales had a ewer to himself, which was afterwards used by the Ambassador.

The first royal personage in England who was known to have a fork was Queen Elizabeth, but it is doubtful whether she ever used it. Forks came so slowly into use that they were employed only by the higher classes in the middle of the seventeenth century. About the period of the Revolution —1688—few English noblemen had more than a dozen forks of silver, along with a few of iron and steel. At length the steel fork came in for general use and was manufactured in Sheffield. At first they had two prongs, but afterward another prong was added.

THE CRUEL PIANO.

Mrs. John Lane in London Outlook.

My landlady's little boy, separated from me only by a thin lath partition of a wall, is playing five-finger exercises in halting rhythm and with innumerable false notes. The instrument is one in which the flight of years has left a tone like a discontented nutmeg grater.

The little boy, a pale child in a long pinafore and big white ears, hates his chosen instrument as much as I do, and so we meet on a level of mutual affliction. I loathe hearing him and he hates his instrument; now, in the name of good common sense, why must he be offered up as a sacrifice?

His mother is a poor woman, and the tinkling cottage piano with the plaited faded green front represents the chops and many other wholesome things she has not eaten, and what she allows the young lady in the third floor back, who takes her board out in piano lessons, is a serious sacrifice. Now, I ask, what for?

Why is all the world playing an unnecessary piano?

Marriage has a fatal effect on music. For some occult reason, as soon as a girl is married the piano—the grave of so much money and time—retires out of active life, and swathed in "art draperies," burdened by vases, cabinet photographs and imitation "curios," serves less as a musical instrument than a warning; but no sooner are the next generation's legs long enough to dangle between the keyboard and the pedals than the echoes awaken to the same old false notes that serve no purpose unless an hour of daily martyrdom over a tear-splashed keyboard is an excellent preparation for the trials of life.

"'Jones, you always have better luck than me.'

"'Better luck? How so?'

"'Why, how else do you account for my row of new houses blowing down in last week's wind while yours weren't harmed? All were built the same—same woodwork, same mortar, everything.'

"'Yes,' said the other builder, 'but you forget that mine had been papered.'"

THE ADVENTURES of SHERLOCK HOLMES

The Musgrave Ritual

By SIR A. CONAN DOYLE

(Secured for the Post-Dispatch from Harper & Brothers, who own the copyright.)
(Copyright, 1902, by Harper Brothers.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Reginald Musgrave implores Sherlock Holmes' aid in solving the mystery of the disappearance of his butler, Brunton. The latter was formerly a schoolmaster and knew much of languages and music. He was engaged to Rachel Howells, a housemaid, but jilted her for Janet Tregillis. Rachel is ill of brain fever. The butler had been discharged for examining his master's papers, particularly the strange ritual gone through by the Musgrave heirs on coming of age. He was to leave in a week, but suddenly disappears and Rachel is taken very much worse. Sherlock Holmes is telling the story to Dr. Watson.

CHAPTER III.

Cherchez la Femme.

"THE same afternoon saw us both at Hurlstone. Possibly you have seen pictures and read descriptions of the famous old building, and I will confine my account of it to saying that it is built in the shape of an L, the long arm being the more modern portion, and the shorter the ancient nucleus, from which the other has developed. Over the low, heavy-linteled door, in the center of this old part, is chiseled the date, 1607, but experts are agreed that the beams and stone work are really much older than this. The enormously thick walls and tiny windows of this part had in the last century driven the family into building the new wing, and the old one was used now as a storehouse and a cellar, when it was used at all. A splendid park with fine old timber surrounds the house, and the lake, to which my client has referred, lay close to the avenue, about two hundred yards from the building.

"I was already firmly convinced, Watson, that there were not three separate mysteries here, but one only, and that if I could read the Musgrave Ritual aright I should hold in my hand the clew which would lead me to the truth concerning both the butler, Brunton, and the maid, Howells. To that I turned all my energies. Why should this servant be so anxious to master this old formula? Evidently because he saw something in it which had escaped all those generations of country squires, and from which he expected some personal advantage. What was it then, and how had it affected his fate?

"It was perfectly obvious to me, on reading the ritual, that the measurements must refer to some spot to which the rest of the document alluded, and, that if we could find that spot, we should be in a fair way toward finding what the secret was which the old Musgraves had thought it necessary to embalm in so curious a fashion. There were two guides given us to start with—an oak and an elm. As to the oak, there could be no question at all. Right in front of the house, upon the left-hand side of the drive, there stood a patriarch among oaks, one of the most magnificent trees that I have ever seen.

"'That was there when your ritual was drawn up,' said I, as we drove past it.

"'It was there at the Norman Conquest, in all probability,' he answered. 'It has a girth of 23 feet.'

"Here was one of my fixed points secured.

"'Have you any old elms?' I asked.

"'There used to be a very old one over yonder, but it was struck by lightning ten years ago, and we cut down the stump.'

"'You can see where it used to be?'

"'O, yes.'

"'There are no other elms?'

"'No old ones, but plenty of beeches.'

"'I should like to see where it grew.'

"We had driven up in a dogcart and my client led me away at once, without our entering the house, to the scar on the lawn where the elm had stood. It was nearly midway between the oak and the house. My investigation seemed to be progressing.

"'I suppose it is impossible to find out how high the elm was?' I asked.

"'I can give you it at once. It was 64 feet.'

"'How do you come to know it?' I asked, in surprise.

"'When my old tutor used to give me an exercise in trigonometry, it always took the shape of measuring heights. When I was a lad I worked out every tree and building in the estate.'

"This was an unexpected piece of luck. My data were coming more quickly than I could have reasonably hoped.

"'Tell me,' I asked, 'did your butler ever ask you such a question?'

"Reginald Musgrave looked at me in astonishment. 'Now that you call it to my mind,' he answered, 'Brunton did ask me about the height of the tree some months ago, in connection with some little argument with the groom.'"

"This was excellent news, Watson, for it showed me that I was on the right road. I looked up at the sun. It was low in the heavens, and I calculated that in less than an hour it would lie just above the topmost branches of the old oak. One condition mentioned in the Ritual would then be fulfilled. And the shadow of the elm must mean the farther end of the shadow, otherwise the trunk would have been chosen as the guide. I had, then, to find where the far end of the shadow would fall when the sun was just clear of the oak."

"That must have been difficult, Holmes, when the elm was no longer there."

"Well, at least I knew that if Brunton could do it, I could also. Besides, there was no real difficulty. I went with Musgrave to his study and whittled myself this peg, to which I tied this long string with a knot at each yard. Then I took two lengths of a fishing rod, which came to just six feet, and I went back with my client to where the elm had been. The sun was just grazing the top of the oak. I fastened the rod on end, marked out the direction of the shadow, and measured it. It was nine feet in length.

"Of course, the calculation now was a simple one. If a rod six feet long threw a shadow of nine, a tree of 64 feet would throw one of 96, and the line of the one would, of course, be the line of the other. I measured out the distance, which brought me almost to the wall of the house, and I thrust a peg into the spot. You can imagine my exultation, Watson, when within two inches of my peg I saw a conical depression in the ground. I knew that it was the mark made by Brunton in his measurements, and that I was still upon his trail.

"From this starting point I proceeded to step, having first taken the cardinal points by my pocket compass. Ten steps with each foot took me along parallel with the wall of the house, and again I marked by spot with a peg. Then I carefully paced off five feet to the east and two to the south. It brought me to the very threshold of the old door. Two steps to the west meant now that I was to go two paces down the stone-flagged passage, and this was the place indicated by the Ritual.

"Never have I felt such a cold chill of disappointment, Watson. For a moment it seemed to me that there must be some radical mistake in my calculations. The setting sun shone full upon the passage floor, and I could see that the old, foot-worn gray stones with which it was paved were firmly cemented together, and had certainly not been moved for many a long year. Brunton had not been at work here. I tapped on the floor and it sounded the same all over, and there was no sign of any crack or crevice. But, fortunately, Musgrave, who had begun to appreciate the meaning of my proceedings, and who was now as excited as myself, took out his manuscript to check my calculations.

"'And under,' he cried. 'You have omitted the "and under."'

"I had thought that it meant that we were to dig, but now, of course, I saw at once that I was wrong. 'There is a cellar under this then?' I cried.

"'Yes, and as old as the house. Down here, through this door.'

"We went down a winding stone stair, and my companion, striking a match, lit a large lantern which stood on a barrel in the corner. In an instant it was obvious that we had at last come upon the true place and that we had not been the only people to visit the spot recently.

"It had been used for the storage of wood, but the billets, which had evidently been littered over the floor, were now piled at the sides, so as to leave a clear space in the middle. In this space lay a large and heavy flagstone with a rusted ring in the center, to which a thick shepherd's-check muffler was attached.

"'By Jove!' cried my client. 'That's Brunton's muffler. I have seen it on him, and could swear to it. What has the villain been doing here?'

"At my suggestion a couple of the county police were summoned to be present, and I then endeavored to raise the stone by pulling on the cravat. I could only move it slightly, and it was with the aid of one of the constables that I succeeded at last in carrying it to one side. A black hole yawned beneath, into which we all peered, while Musgrave, kneeling at the side, pushed down the lantern.

"A small chamber about 7 feet deep and 4 feet square lay open to us. At one side of this was a squat brass-bound wooden box, the lid of which was hinged upward, with this curious old-fashioned key projecting from the lock. It was furred outside by a thick layer of dust and damp, and worms had eaten through the wood, so that a crop of livid fungi was growing on one side of it. Several discs of metal, old coins apparently, such as I hold here, were scattered over the bottom of the box, but it contained nothing else.

"At that moment, however, we had no thought for the old chest, for our eyes were riveted upon that which crouched beside it. It was the figure of a man, clad in a suit of black, who squatted down upon his hams, with his forehead sunk upon the edge of the box and his two arms thrown out on each side. The attitude had drawn all the stagnant blood to the face, and no man could have recognized that distorted liver-colored countenance; but his height, his dress and his hair were all sufficient to show my client, when we had the body drawn up, that it was indeed his missing butler. He had been dead some days, but there was no wound or bruise upon his person to show how he had met his dreadful end. When his body had been carried from the cellar we found ourselves still confronted with a problem which was almost as formidable as that with which we had started.

"I confess that so far, Watson, I had been disappointed in my investigation. I had reckoned upon solving the matter when once I had found the place refered to in the Ritual; but now I was there, and was apparently as far as ever from knowing what it was which the family had concealed with such elaborate precautions. It is true that I had thrown a light upon the fate of Brunton, but now I had to ascertain how that fate had come upon him, and what part had been played in the matter by the woman who had disappeared. I sat down upon a keg in the corner and thought the whole matter carefully over.

"You know my methods in such cases, Watson. I put myself in the man's place, and, having first gauged his intelligence, I try to remember how I should myself have proceeded under the same circumstances. In this case the matter was simplified by Brunton's intelligence being quite first-rate, so that it was unnecessary to make any allowances for the personal equation, as the astronomers have dubbed it. He knew that something valuable was concealed. He had spotted the place. He had found that the stone which covered it was just too heavy for a man to move unaided. What would he do next? He could not get help from the outside, even if he had someone whom he could trust, without the unbarring of doors and considerable risk of detection. It was better, if he could, to have his helpmate inside the house. But whom could he ask? This girl had been devoted to him. A man always finds it hard to realize that he may have finally lost a woman's love, however badly he may have treated her. He would try by a few attentions to make his peace with the girl Howells, and then would engage her as his accomplice. Together they would come at night to the cellar, and their united force would suffice to raise the stone. So far I could follow their actions as if I had actually seen them.

"But for two of them, and one a woman, it must have been heavy work, the raising of that stone. A burly Sussex policeman and I found it no light job. What would they do to assist them? Probably what I would have done myself. I rose and examined carefully the different billets of wood which were scattered round the floor. Almost at once I came upon what I expected. One piece, about three feet in length, had a very marked indentation at one end, while several were flattened at the side as if they had been compressed by some considerable weight. Evidently, as they had dragged the stone up they had thrust the chunks of wood into the chink, until at last, when the opening was large enough to crawl through, they would hold it open by a billet placed lengthwise, which might very well become indented at the lower end, since the whole weight of the stone would press it down onto the edge of this other slab. So far I was still on safe ground.

"And now, how was I to proceed to reconstruct this midnight drama? Clearly, only one could fit into the hole, and that one was Brunton. The girl must have waited above. Brunton then unlocked the box, handed up the contents, presumably—since they were not to be found—and then—and then what happened?

"What smouldering fire of vengeance had suddenly sprung into flame in this passionate Celtic woman's soul when she saw the man who had wronged her—wronged her, perhaps, far more than we suspected—in her power? Was it a chance that the wood had slipped, and that the stone had shut Brunton in what had become his sepulcher? Had she only been guilty of silence as to his fate? Or had some sudden blow from her hand dashed the support away and sent the slab crashing down into its place? Be that as it might, I seemed to see that woman's figure still clutching at her treasure trove and flying wildly up the winding stair, with her ears ringing, perhaps, with the muffled screams from behind her and with the drumming of frenzied hands against the slab of stone which was choking her faithless lover's life out.

"Here was the secret of her blanched face, her shaken nerves, her peals of hysterical laughter on the next morning. But what had been in the box? What had she done with that? Of course, it must have been the old metal and pebbles which my client had dragged from the mere. She had thrown them in there at the first opportunity to remove the last trace of her crime.

"For 20 minutes I had sat motionless, thinking the matter out. Musgrave still stood with a very pale face, swinging the lantern and peering down into the hole.

"'These are coins of Charles the First,' said he, holding out the few which had been in the box; 'you see we were right in fixing our date for the Ritual.'

"'We may find something else of Charles the First,' I cried, as the probable meaning of the first two questions of the Ritual broke suddenly upon me. 'Let me see the contents of the bag which you fished from the mere.'

"We ascended to his study, and he laid the debris before me. I could understand his regarding it as of small importance when I looked at it, for the metal was almost black and the stones lustreless and dull. I rubbed one of them on my sleeve, however, and it glowed afterwards like a spark in the dark hollow of my hand. The metal work was in the form of a double ring, but it had been bent and twisted out of its original shape.

"'You must bear in mind,' said I, 'that the royal party made head in England even after the death of the King, and that when they at last fled they probably left many of their most precious possessions buried behind them, with the intention of returning for them in more peaceful times.

"'My ancestor, Sir Ralph Musgrave, was a prominent Cavalier, and the right-hand man of Charles the Second in his wanderings,'" said my friend.

"'Ah, indeed!' I answered. 'Well, now, I think that really should give us the last link that we wanted. I must congratulate you upon coming into the possession, though rather in a tragic manner, of a relic which is of great intrinsic value, but of even greater importance as an historical curiosity.'

"'What is it, then?' he gasped, in astonishment.

"'It is nothing less than the ancient crown of the King of England.'

"'The crown!'

"'Precisely. Consider what the Ritual says. How does it run? "Whose was it?" "His who is gone." That was after the execution of Charles. Then, "Who shall have it?" "He who will come." That was Charles the Second, whose advent was already foreseen. There can, I think, be no doubt that this battered and shapeless diadem once encircled the brows of the royal Stuarts.'

"'And how came it in the pond?'

"'That is a question which will take some time to answer.' And with that I sketched out to him the whole long chain of surmise and of proof which I had constructed. The twilight had closed in and the moon was shining brightly in the sky before my narrative was finished.

"'And how was it, then, that Charles did not get his crown when he returned?' asked Musgrave, pushing back the relic into its linen bag.

"'Ah, there you lay your finger upon the one joint which we shall probably never be able to clear up. It is likely that the Musgrave who held the secret died in the interval, and by some oversight left this guide to his descendant without explaining the meaning of it. From that day to this it has been handed down from father to son, until at last it came within reach of a man who tore its secret out of it and lost his life in the venture.'

"And that's the story of the Musgrave Ritual, Watson. They have the crown down at Hurlstone—though they had some legal bother and a considerable sum to pay before they were allowed to retain it. I am sure that if you mentioned my name they would be happy to show it to you. Of the woman nothing was ever heard, and the probability is that she got away out of England and carried herself and the memory of her crime to some land beyond the seas."

THE END.

OUR POLO PLAYERS STUDY ENGLISHMEN

LONDON, June 3.—The American polo players who have just arrived in this country will make a big effort to get a line of the present best English form this season, with a view to another representative international match. With this object in view the visitors have taken great pains to be well mounted. Mr. Laurence McCreery brought over an exceptionally fine string of ponies, which are now located at Hurlingham, and have been very much admired. Mr. T. C. Garland, another American player, has formed a club which is named Moreton Morell, after his hunting lodge in Warwickshire, where he has had a properly boarded match ground laid out. Besides Mr. L. McCreery, other well-known American players of the top class that will be seen in the matches are Mr. Foxhall Keene and Mr. Crane, who is looked upon as one of the very best backs in America.

NEVER ENGAGED TO GIRL, BUT HE JUST HATED TO DISAPPOINT HER

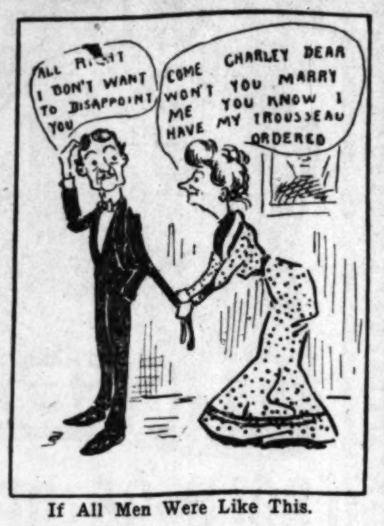
Permitted Her to Woo Him and Prepare for the Wedding Whereupon He Asserted His Manhood.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 3.—Charged with assaulting his fiancee, Charles Stark, arrested two days before the date set for the wedding, was fined $1 in the District Court.

The wedding has been indefinitely postponed. Although Judge Blenski expressed the belief that the young couple will adjust their differences and marry, both Stark and Miss Ida Steffen, his fiancee, protest that they no longer cherish tender sentiments, and that if Cupid knocks at their hearts again it will be in vain.

"Aren't you ashamed to have beaten your bride?" said Attorney Faber for the prosecution, to the phlegmatic prospective groom.



ALL RIGHT I DON'T WANT TO DISAPPOINT YOU COME CHARLEY DEAR WON'T YOU MARRY ME YOU KNOW I HAVE MY TROUSSEAU ORDERED

If All Men Were Like This.

"No," said the groom defiantly. "I never was engaged to her. She kept worrying me until I sort of consented to the marriage—not that I wanted to marry her, but just because I didn't want to disappoint her after she had ordered her trousseau."

According to Stark, Miss Steffen's courtship tactics were of the aggressive variety. He says she did all the courting, and announced to him that she intended to marry him May 27. He acquiesced only because he did not want to disappoint her. The Steffen-Stark romance covered a period of three weeks only.

"We met at the home of Mrs. Anna Steger, a mutual friend, three weeks before I was arrested," said Stark. "It was in the afternoon. When I wanted to go home to supper Ida wouldn't let me. So I had to remain at the Stegers. Ida came to Stegers to live that same day. I boarded there until we had the trouble.

"Shortly after she told me that she loved me. I didn't tell her anything. She asked me to suggest a day for our wedding. I didn't say anything.

"She said that May 27 would give her time to prepare her wedding gown. A few days later she told me that all arrangements had been made, and it wasn't necessary to delay the wedding that long.

"She said she would be ready to marry me on May 24. I didn't say anything. I hated awfully to disappoint the poor girl, you know, after she'd had her clothes made and had announced the engagement. So I just thought I'd let her go ahead and complete the preparations. But I never really consented to marry her. It was a case of silent acquiescence.

"Day or two later she came to me again, and said she had thought it over, and it wouldn't be necessary to wait till the 24th. She thought she could be ready my May 23. I didn't say anything.

"Next day she told me I'd better hire a hall, as she had invited a great many friends and had hired musicians. So I engaged Lemke's Hall and paid a dollar on account. I didn't really want to, you see, but Ida seemed so pleased that I hated to disappoint her.

"I thought I'd go out and see one of my friends after supper on the evening of the trouble. I wanted to talk over old times before Ida married me. She met me at the front door as I was about to leave.

"'Where are you going?' said she.

"'To see a friend,' said I.

"'Well, you can't go,' said she. 'He'll try to coax you away from me.'

"She stood with her back against the door. Man has to draw the line somewhere, you know, so I took her by the arms and pushed her aside. Then she got hold of me and shook me from side to side just like that."

The burly Stark illustrated his slender fiancee's conduct by shaking his hands violently. "It isn't true that I batted her head against the wall, or tried to punch her in the eye. Those blue finger prints on her arms were due to my having squeezed her too hard when I compelled her to permit me to leave the house. I didn't go back to the Stegers that evening."

Miss Steffen alleges that Stark came into the room, and assaulted her, because his jealousy had been aroused by false statements of friends.

WOMAN'S BREAST

A lump in woman's breast is a cancer. It does not pain until almost past cure, but if neglected, it will always poison deep glands in the armpit and kill quickly. If you wait until it poisons glands in the shoulder, death is certain.

I will give $1000 if I fail to cure any cancer I treat, before it poisons the deep glands or attaches to bone.
No knife or pain. No pay until cured. No X-Ray or other swindle. A Pacific Island shrub or plant makes the cures—the most wonderful discovery on earth, today. 3000 cancers cured on people you can see and talk with.

A tumor, lump or sore on the lip, face or anywhere, six months, is cancer. In 30 years I have cured more cancers than any other doctor living. Investigate my absolute guarantee. SICK AND WEAK, READ MY MESSAGE

To the sick and drug weary, to the nervous and dyspeptic, to the pale, overworked woman and the exhausted man; to the multitude of sufferers who are constantly seeking health without finding it, I send this message. Read it carefully, every word:

Electricity: Life! Nervous energy! Human vitality! Strength in every vital organ! Electricity is all of these, and they are Electricity. Weak and weary, it will make you well. I have perfected the greatest improvement of the age in Electro-Therapeutics. My invention is

ELECTRO-VIGOR

The dry cell body battery; the appliance which generates a volume of electricity and infuses it into the body without the use of acid or vinegar, requiring no charging or preparation of any kind.

Electro-Vigor is not an electric belt; it is as far superior to an electric belt as the incandescent lamp is to the tallow candle. Electro-Vigor is worn while you sleep. The warmth, the vigor, the supreme POWER of electricity is in every vital organ after a night's use of Electro-Vigor. With such power, how can you be sick? You cannot. No pain, no weakness, no distress can exist in your body when it is charged by Electro-Vigor.

No Vinegar, No Nasty Odor

Throw away your old-style, burning, blistering, ill-smelling "electric belt," or bring it to me and I will allow you half what you paid for it on the Electro-Vigor.

Electricity is the newest and most succeful cure for nervous and sickly people. Electro-Vigor is the newest and best method of application. Let me send you, free, my descriptive pamphlets. Inclose this coupon:

HE LOST HIS TREASURE POT

Butcher Buried Valuables in Iron Kettle 20 Years Ago and Is Unable to Find the Spot.

BELLEFONTAINE, O. T., June 3.—A pot of gold, a diamond stud and a gold watch were buried 20 years ago by Christopher Bose of this city, who had earned a competence in the butchering business. He was going to Kansas to rough it and did not desire to take all of his valuables with him, so he divided his funds among the banks and, having a little left, he decided to bury it. Selecting a spot, he dug a hole 6 feet deep and placing his valuables in an iron kettle buried it.

Last week he came back and going to the place of hiding found that the marker he had set up had been displaced. For several days he has been digging for his buried treasure, but now has abandoned the search.

NEW ELECTION EXPECTED BY TARIFF REFORMERS.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—Opinions vary as to whether the Government will get through the session. Just now the tendency is to believe that there will be a general election in a few weeks, although no one seems to have any special reasons for this anticipation. It is understood that the remonstrance addressed to the Premier by Mr. Chamberlain as vice-president of the Tariff Reform League was conceived in somewhat strong terms, and the fact that Mr. Balfour has up to now not replied to it shows the difficulty that he has in so doing, for under ordinary circumstances an answer would have been sent before this. Mr. Chamberlain's tone in his last Birmingham speech was by no means conciliatory. He urged a speedy general election, on the ground of tactics, and, as a master of electoral procedure, he is far superior to Mr. Balfour in the opinion of the Unionists. He has not, it is true, just now a strong following in the House of Commons prepared to do battle with Mr. Balfour, but he is stronger than the latter in the party outside Parliament, and he has most of the active electioneers with him. Were he to announce that he is prepared to revolt against the Premier, and to insist on his fiscal program becoming that of the party, it is by no means certain that he would not carry the majority of the Unionist electors with him. To prevent this, Mr. Balfour is quite capable of consenting to some sort of transaction in regard to the period of the general election—all the more as almost all his colleagues are heart and soul with Mr. Chamberlain so far as fiscalities are concerned.

There Is Just ONE Woodbury

MASKS AND FACES.

All but your intimate friends make their estimate of you by your personal appearance. If repulsive blemishes or crooked features hide your true worth, consult John H. Woodbury D. I., who for thirty-five years has devoted his life to this work.

The Two Masks and the Beautiful Girl.

The beautiful young girl in these pictures shudders and shrinks from the horrible faces of the masks. A horrible disfigured human face excites the same feelings. And yet the masks do not exaggerate conditions that oftentimes mar the appearance of men and women. Deep furrowed wrinkles and unsightly facial blemishes are all too common. Thousands of people go through life with these disfigurements.

And yet behind these featural irregularities or blemishes there may be the purest minds and the highest types of mental development. Still, your light is hidden under a bushel and the world accepts you for what you seem to be. It is horrible to admit, but it is the truth, and if you would be accepted for what you really are the human mask must be remodeled. At the Woodbury Institute the change can be wrought painlessly, inexpensively and in a remarkably short time. Why don't you go today and consult the Woodbury specialists?

The Four Important Branches.

In perfecting the organization of the Woodbury Institute its specialists have been divided into four groups, and each group confines its entire energy to strengthening its particular branch of Dermatology.

Facial Blemishes.

With a record of the successful removal of more than a million pimples, moles, blackheads, freckles, warts and other facial blemishes, there is little need to dwell on the detail work of this branch of the Institute. The record speaks for itself, and there is no one in the world who ever questioned the supremacy of John H. Woodbury D. I. in successfully treating these common ailments.

Skin Diseases.

Eruptions of the skin, besides being unsightly, suggest some loathsome disease. The finger of scorn points out the victims. That such diseases can be cured and the eruptions disappear is a certainty. Those who have struggled along taking proprietary remedies that aggravated instead of curing, are warned to put themselves in the care of specialists who are brought daily in contact with such diseases at the Woodbury Institute the eradication of Eruptions is done year in and year out successfully and permanently. Don't delay another day. Consult our Specialists today.

Hair and Scalp.

Intelligent investigation of the cause and remedy for falling hair, dandruff, incipient baldness and other conditions relating to the hair and scalp were first applied by John H. Woodbury D. I. Until then there was never suggested the possibility of applying scientific methods to the treatment of the hair and scalp. Hair restorers flooded the market, but for not a single one of these preparations can any one say truthfully that they accomplished their purpose. At the Woodbury Institute your hair can be saved and be made to grow luxuriantly—that is if there are still hair roots. The man with a shiny pate is past help. But for all others the Woodbury Institute offers the only intelligent and scientific treatment known to the world.

Crooked Features.

Irregularities of feature conceal character, and by so doing create false impressions. A man with ears that flop like sails and stick out from the head looks to be weak-minded. The crooked nose suggests descent from the slums. Other featural irregularities bespeak equally significant characteristics. Till John H. Woodbury D. I. had proved how simply such fixtures could be made symmetrical and attractive those beset with such affliction had no remedy. But now there is no need for them to suffer. Success after success has established for the Woodbury Institute a world-wide reputation, and whatever the specialists undertake is certain of successful results.

Consultations are invited and are invariably given WITHOUT CHARGE.

"Diamondfield Jack" Davis Drove Claim-Jumpers Off in Nevada at Point of Gun.

RENO, Nev., June 3.—"Diamondfield Jack" Davis, who was once sentenced to be hanged in Nevada, drove two claim-jumpers from his mining property at Bullfrog at the point of his gun. He replaced the stakes and prepared to work the property.

Arriving at the claims, Davis was surprised to see men placing stakes on his property. He told them to leave and backed up the command with a revolver. The claim-jumpers recognized the man behind the gun and immediately tore up the stakes and made their way from the place. Later they swore out warrants for Davis' arrest, but as yet he is not in custody.

Davis was once sentenced to be hanged for the murder of a cowboy during a fight over cattle in Idaho. Gov. Sparks of Nevada and others secured his pardon.

ITALY OPPOSES MORGAN'S MARTELLI ART PURCHASE.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

ROME, June 3.—The newspapers announce that special police have been watching the Martelli Palace at Florence for some days to prevent the removal of its great art treasures.

Count Martelli is said to have sold his historic collection, containing masterpieces by Collini, Donatello, Verocchio and others to Mr. Pierpont Morgan, for immediate delivery, for £250,000.

The Martelli family deny the report, but the "Giornale d'Italia" asserts that it is true, and declares that Count Martelli first offered to sell his collecthions to the Italian Government for a sum which is less than half that offered by Mr. Morgan.

EDITOR COPIES ALMANAC BECAUSE HE REFUSED INVITATION TO QUIT

When Boss Fired Him, He Pulled Contract, Whereupon Contractee Gave Him Remarkable Assignment.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WABASH, Ind., June 3.—A curious condition of affairs prevails on an Indiana newspaper at this time, wherein an editor is copying the contents of an old almanac for lack of other editorial duties, while he is drawing a comfortable salary for his service in this line of "editing."

About 11 months ago A. E. Blunck of Johnstown, N. Y., bought the Lafayette Call, and ran the same without achieving either glory or profit until two weeks ago, when he grew weary of doing business for naught and sold out to another newspaper of that town. On the payroll of Mr. Blunck was Mr. L. Armstrong, who did the heavy editorial work, and he was fortified with a contract for one year.

When the Call was disposed of Mr. Blunck gave Mr. Armstrong $20 in addition to his salary due and turned him out to grass. Editor Armstrong was not inclined to be dismissed thus lightly and pulled the contract on his employer. "This contract calls for salary until July," said Mr. Armstrong, "and I shall expect you to pay me the salary until the year is up."

Mr. Blunck was feazed by this demand, but responded that he would carry out the agreement. "But," said he, "you must report for duty at a designated place, do the editorial work that I assign you, earning the money just as though the Call were running." Armstrong assented, and Blunck produced a stack of almanacs and other literature which he laid before the astonished Armstrong, with injunction to write out in good, legible, long hand what he found therein. Armstrong has been regularly transcribing the stuff and drawing his money, and will continue to do so until the contract expires.

He is quite as happy and enthusiastic as though the matter were faithfully printed each day instead of being "turned in" to the gaping waste basket, while the thrifty Mr. Blunck is content in the contemplation of his employe busily earning the weekly stipend.

NOT MRS. DODGE'S BROTHER

Perry McNeal Did Not Marry Eliza Cunningham Sage.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOBART, Ind., June 3.—Mrs. Ray Dodge, sister of Perry McNeal, wants the readers of the Post-Dispatch to know that Perry McNeal, who married Eliza Cunningham Sage recently in Louisiana, is not her brother, as was stated in a story sent out from here. She says.

"Perry McNeal, who, they claim, married Mrs. Sage, is at the present time and has been for seven years in Long Cliff Insane Asylum at Logansport, Ind., and has been almost a raving maniac for five years. He was not the father of the child that figured in the Sage murder case. At the time he was only a mere boy. My brother, Perry, and I were together when the little baby was found, and that was his sole connection with the case.

"I hope you will kindly take the pains to rectify this mistake, which heaps disgrace upon one whom God has seen fit to deprive of his reason and casts a shadow upon the few remaining years of his mother and myself."

STORAGE PLANT AT JACKSON

Packing Company Will Supply South From Mississippi.

JACKSON, Miss., June 3.—The Armour Packing Co. has purchased from T. McCleland a portion of the triangular strip of ground between Gallatin and Pearl streets and the A. & V. tracks, and will erect thereon a large cold storage plant. The work of construction will be commenced immediately. The ground is being cleared today, and it is stated that the company expects to have the building well under way by the early part of June. The plant will be one of the largest ever built by the Armour people in the South, and is to be used in supplying a good portion of the Mississippi trade territory.

ENJOINS WIFE FROM VISITING SHOP AND INJURING BUSINESS

Barber Says He Can't Hold a Job Because She Is Always at His Heels.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., June 3.—Harry Hoffer at last has obtained relief from what he says is a pestering wife, for at his solicitation today Judge Tyler enjoined Bertha Hoffer from annoying her husband, going to his place of business and there interfering with his enjoyment of liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

It was decidedly unique relief that Hoffer asked the court for in his divorce suit, as he says for years he has been so pestered by his wife as to lose position after position. They were married in November of 1900 in Detroit, where he had a barber shop with a fine trade.

After the marriage, however, he says business commenced to fall off greatly because she insisted on insulting patrons. He says she loafed about the shop, and that her intense jealousy and bad temper made life miserable for him, for he couldn't pass a woman without his wife calling him all kinds of names and making numerous charges. She threatened, he said, to make a tramp of him and then either shoot him or throw acid in his face.

Because of her actions he says he had to close up his business and they went to New York, and at her solicitation went on the stage. He says he was a frost at this, however, as it wasn't to his liking, so he went back to barbering.

He went back to Detroit and then came to Toledo, losing several positions because he says she would insist on going into the shop and raising a disturbance because a woman happened to pass by and some one in the shop would nod at her.

FORTUNE USED TO FIND HIDING PLACE

Robbers Bound Victim to Bed With Wire and Applied Burning Brands.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ERIE, Pa., June 3.—Three men broke in the door of James Blackwood's residence, a half mile southeast of this city, wired him to his bed and applied burning brands to his feet in an effort to force from him information of the location of a large sum of money.

In wringing his secret from him the desperadoes tightened the wires with which Blackwood was bound to such an extent that the blood spouted from the wounds in his wrists and ankles inflicted by the tightened wire. On gaining their information they kicked Blackwood, one blow knocking his teeth out.

After getting their booty, the robbers left their victim, gagged and helpless, close to the fire, which they had started on the floor of his bedroom.

About $700 was stolen. The victim still lies in a very weakened condition, and is unable to give any description of his assailants. Blackwood lived alone.

FAMED ST. BERNARD DOG STOLEN FROM HOSPICE.

BERN, June 3.—Barry, the finest of the dogs of St. Bernard, who has saved many lives during the past winter, has been stolen.

The police have traced the animal in the possession of the thief to Aosta, and it is now believed to be in Italy.

A lay helper at the monastery, to whom the dog was much attached, is suspected. The monks say that no stranger could have induced the powerful and sagacious Barry to leave his home.

Last year a similar theft was committed at the Simplon Hospice, and the dog was traced to America, but was never recovered.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN CARLOADS OF UNCLE SAM CHERRYVALE-KANSAS CITY REFINERY PIPE LINE WILL ARRIVE AT YATES CENTER, KANSAS, EARLY NEXT WEEK.

Other Shipments Will Follow Immediately. Cherryvale Plant Will Be Refining Oil in Six Weeks. With Both Refineries in Operation and Pipe Line Completed, Company Will Have Capacity Enough to Clear Twelve Thousand Dollars Per Day.

Money invested in this great enterprise will increase in solid values twenty fold. Franchises from the eight Kansas county boards of commissioners, granting right of way for the 189 miles of pipe line clear through to the navigable waters, now secured. Construction work commences forthwith and will be pushed with vim.

REFUSING to stand idly by while a band of foreign thieves pillage and confiscate the rich oil industry of Kansas, this great refinery and pipe line company is cutting her way through to success on Kansas soil, building a market for a Kansas product, backed by the strong arm of the state, supported by the people, the pulpit and the press, while from all over the United States unlimited financial aid is coming in on every mail, cheering and crowding the good work along. Money invested in the stock is safe because the people in general are behind it. Price on next allotment will be 15 cents per share.

DEMANDING a square deal for Kansas and Oklahoma petroleum and equitable prices for fuel oil consumers of the central west, this great stock company is banding together 4000 men to stand shoulder to shoulder, fighting for a market for a home product that is owned mostly by Kansas and Oklahoma taxpayers, they offer to every investor in the United States a safe, practicable investment, one that will increase twentyfold and at the same time strike a blow for justice in the oil fields. The company now has stockholders in every state and territory and in Canada and Old Mexico.

RIGHT through the richest farm lands of the Sunflower state, the Uncle Sam pipe line will lay down to thousands of Kansas homes nature's own fuel at reasonable prices until it reaches the banks of the navigable waters where Refinery No. 2 will be completed, when down the Missouri river to the Mississippi and over the Ohio, Tennessee and other navigable waterways fuel, refined and lubricating oils will be marketed by steamboats to the greatest manufacturing centers of the union, and, if necessary, the company can float its oil to the ocean steamers unhampered and free, regardless of any railroad robber rates or criminal rebates or Standard Oil conspiracies.

The above picture was taken just as the workmen at the refinery were unloading the second big still last week. This still is now on its brick foundation. Every day machinery is arriving. It is just a question of a few weeks until the Uncle Sam refinery at Cherryvale will be doing business. The company's first advertisements stated they would be refining oil in 120 days. Well, that is just what they will do; if anything, they will beat it possibly a week. Now we told you the truth about this and you will find that the balance of the development will not miss the mark far from where we state in this advertisement. Now, if you want stock in the greatest money maker in the central west, one that will grow stronger year after year; one that will be a monument to Kansas pluck and a square deal in the oil fields, get busy quick and secure some of this stock before it is all sold, for this is about the last advertisement you will ever see of stock in this company at this price. The company has just what it advertises and is prepared to show you or any one else who will come down here and give us the chance. Better invest a thousand or so dollars before the stock gets up to three times the present price or to 25 cents per share.

Pipe Line Will Pay for Itself in Eighteen Months.

There is only one safe way to engage in the oil refining business. That is to own and operate your own pipe lines. That is the reason the Uncle Sam refinery is crowding the work on the pipe line to navigable waters. The company, as above stated, has the right of way already secured. Fifty-five miles of the pipe is now ordered and will be on the grounds in 30 days. There is no speculation about building this pipe line. There is twice over the amount of oil that can be run over the present pipe lines' facilities from the Kansas and Indian Territory oil fields. There is plenty of room for two or three more pipelines. The Uncle Sam pipeline figured on a conservative basis will pay for itself in the saving of freights in 18 months. Now, is this not conclusive proof that when we say the stock of this company will increase twentyfold that we are making a conservative estimate? Why not invest $2000 for 25,000 shares now before the work develops so far as to increase the real values several fold? Don't delay, thinking work will not walk right along, for things are moving down this way.

Fifteen Car Loads of Uncle Sam Pipe Line Now on the Road to Yates Center, Kan.

The pipe from the East will be unloaded at different points along the line at once. The first shipment of 15 carloads of pipe is now on the road from Wheeling, W. Va. It will arrive in Yates Center, Kan., some time during the next six or ten days. Don't wait until a regiment of men are laying this line, and until the Uncle Sam company secures 10,000 acres more oil lands, but secure stock now while it is selling at a price that is bound to greatly increase in solid values and make you good money. You can secure 50,000 shares for $4000. If this is more than you can bite off the company is glad to welcome the small stockholder as well as the large. You can secure 500 shares for $40, or buy on installments offered in this announcement.

Stockholders in Every State and Territory in the Union and in the Dominion of Canada and Old Mexico.

The Uncle Sam company is securing almost unlimited financial aid from the four corners of the country. Remittances have poured in for stock of this company from almost everywhere, until now there are stockholders in this company from every State and Territory in the Union, and also from the Dominion of Canada and Old Mexico. Big deals are pending in a hundred different money centers and the days are limited that anyone can secure stock under 25 cents per share. Better act at once and secure 5000 shares at $400. When you invest at this price you will pay no more than hundreds of other investors, a great many of whom have been on the grounds.

Cherryvale Plant Will be Turning Out Refined Oil in Six Weeks.

The Uncle Sam company has been doing things from the word go. Never has the onward rush of the rapid progress been delayed one minute. Machinery has been coming in every day by the car load. From fifty to ninety men have been steadily at work for the past six weeks. Now the plant is fast nearing completion and it will not be over six weeks until it will be running to its full capacity. When you buy stock in this company you join an enterprise that is doing things. You can buy 10,000 shares now for $800, while in 30 days you will not be able to secure the same stock for even $1500.

Right of Way Secured Across Kansas Counties.

The people of Kansas are so interested in seeing the great Uncle Sam refineries and pipe lines completed that special meetings of the Boards of County Commissioners met in eight different counties and promptly granted franchises permitting right of way for the Uncle Sam pipe line. Business men and farmers along the line are preparing to build lateral lines to the different county seat towns, making one central distributing point, to secure fuel oil. The company will have connections in the line every 10 miles and will lay down to thousands of Kansas homes nature's own fuel at living prices, free from any robber freight rates or criminal rebates. This Uncle Sam company is a Kansas proposition, backed by Kansas men. It is a proposition which Kansans will be always interested in and therefore protection will always be guaranteed by the strong arm of the State. Better secure 1000 shares of stock in the company now at $80 before the price doubles in value.

Personnel of the Company.

James Ingersoll, president.
J. H. Ritchie, vice-president.
H. H. Tucker Jr., secretary and treasurer.

The above men promoted and placed on a dividend-paying basis the great Publishers' Oil Co. of Cherryvale. The great bulk of the stock of the Publishers' company was sold at from 8 to 12 cents per share. This stock steadily advanced until it reached 35 cents per share and was taken off the market, and you cannot buy out a single one of the above men today even at $1.25 per share.

Protected by the Strong Arm of the State—Backed by the Press, Pulpit and Public Approval in General.

The Uncle Sam refineries and pipe line is a child of the favorable Kansas legislation of last winter. It is the only strong and progressive pipe line and refinery company backed by independent capital in the State that is really what you could term in a position to take care of itself. Everybody is for it. The public in general wishes for its grand success, and such conditions as these is what brings success.

Financial Condition of the Company.

Authorized capitalization is $10,000,000. Every share of the stock draws the same amount of dividends as any other share. Par value is $1 per share. Stock is nonassessable. There was no deadhead stock in this company. Every share has been sold for cash from the start. There are now remaining in the treasury 5,515,000 shares. This stock is in good demand at 8 cents per share. For the past thirty days the average cash daily remittances have run over $1500 per day. The company now has over two thousand stockholders scattered all over the United States and in Mexico and Canada. Every stockholder is interested in pushing the company on to greater successes. There are now subscribed in the form of installments on stock which are gilt edge and all will be paid in during the next five months, over eighty-four ($84,000) thousand dollars. Thousands of dollars are now in the treasury. The company is discounting its bills, is paying as it goes. It will continue this policy. The pipe line to Kansas City will be built just as we see our way clear to pay for it. We may be four months and we may be a year, but she will be built, and when she is completed it will belong to the stockholders of this Uncle Sam company, not some bondholder or money shark lender. There are big deals pending on the stock at present. The company is in communication with over three thousand prospective investors. We will cut this statement short by saying if you want any of the stock of this company you had better secure it as quick as you can get your draft or check here, for it is going fast and the company is solvent, solid and a certain winner and is under the management of business men and will pursue a safe business course straight through.

Reasons Why This Stock Will Go Above $1.00 Per Share. There Are Assets Back of This Stock and Here is What They Are:

The company owns and controls over seven thousands acres of oil and gas lands, seventy-eight oilers, four pumping plants, has miles of lateral pipe lines completed connecting the bigger part of the Cherryvale field with the refinery. It is now pumping oil every day, hour and minute into its great storage tanks. The company has thousands of barrels already in storage and has room for thousands of barrels more. One of the great storage tanks has a capacity for 37,500 barrels. The refinery at Cherryvale is now nearly ready to commence turning gold into the treasury. A big car still is now being added. Car load after car load of valuable machinery has been arriving on the company's grounds for the past six weeks. The company owns a splendid 20-acre refinery site right up against the city of Cherryvale, has railroad switch completed. Has water lines and pumps completed. Owns never-failing water rights within a quarter of a mile of the refinery. Has room on proved grounds for over two thousand producing oil and gas wells. Owns 57-acre refinery site at Kansas City. This tract of land has every advantage for a refinery. Company has right of way to this site for a pipe line and pipe is now on the road and the line will be completed as fast as workmen can crowd the work. We have the oil, have surrounded our consuming territory for refined oil with hundreds of stockholders who will be doubly interested in helping the company sell their product at a handsome profit. The capacity of the two refineries and pipe line will be enough to net the company twelve thousand dollars a day with oil at present prices. This is no child of a company; it is strong and is growing stronger, paying as it goes, will make great dividends and stock is certain to go past $1 per share and continue to grow in value.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY YOUR STOCK

For a Few More Days the Uncle Sam Co. Will Sell Treasury Stock as Follows:

500 Shares	$40.00	2,500 Shares	$200.00
1,000 Shares	$80.00	5,000 Shares	$400.00
1,500 Shares	$120.00	10,000 Shares	$800.00
2,000 Shares	$160.00

The Stock is non-assessable and the par value is $1.00 per share.

The time to invest in a company is when that company is selling its ground floor stock. When you buy stock in the Uncle Sam Company at $80 per 1000 shares, you pay no more than hundreds of other investors. The company is strong now, and is hourly growing stronger. By September 1st you will see this stock up close to the dollar mark. Why not help yourself, and also help this company, by remitting today for at least 1000 shares of stock!

INSTALLMENT OFFER GIVES EVERY MAN A CHANCE.

The Uncle Sam company would rather have ten men go together and take one thousand shares each than to have a few men take a large amount of the stock. The company wants men who have a vote and who will stand by the company when it has criminal discrimination to contend with. Better see you friends and raise a club and take ten, fifteen or twenty thousand shares right now.

Subject to raise without notice the company will sell stock as follows on installments:

500 shares $5 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $8.
1000 shares $10 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $16.
2000 shares $20 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $32.
3000 shares $30 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $48.
4000 shares $40 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $64.
5000 shares $50 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $80.
10,000 shares $100 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $160.
20,000 shares $200 cash, with 5 monthly payments of $320.

REFERENCES.

The Montgomery County National bank, Cherryvale, Kan.

The People's National bank, Cherryvale, Kan.

Cherryvale State bank, Cherryvale, Kan.

In addition to the above bank references, if you know of a prominent business man in Cherryvale write to him. In addition to these references the company has had the indorsement of over fifty leading and influential daily and farm papers of the United States that have had personal representatives on the ground. The Uncle Sam will not run an advertisement in a paper unless that paper will first make investigation so that the moral support of the paper goes with advertisements of the company. We could give a list of 500 men and papers in the United States who know this company is doing all it advertises, and that is saying a good deal. The facts are the Uncle Sam company is pretty near "it" when it comes to independent development at present in the oil fields, and if you will investigate you will conclude that "it" would be a good thing to buy stock in. There are no swell heads connected with the management of the company. It's just a plain Kansas management, working for success and fighting for a market for a Kansas product, and contends that any man or company has a right to engage in the refining and selling of oil without the CONSENT of any foreign, thieving corporation or combine.

From Three to Five Dollars Per Barrel Profit in Lubricating Oils.

There are very great profits in lubricating oils when a market can be secured for the same without paying excessive freight. The Uncle Sam company proposes to be in a position to not only secure a market, but to reach that market without spending the profits in robber freight rates made by the oppressive Standard combine. From the river fronts the company can enter the big manufacturing centers of the United States. One-fifth of the population of the union can be reached from these waterways. From the Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio, Tennessee and other navigable rivers the company from the Kansas City plant can market the oil with boats at little expense. Now we have the oil to start with, will soon have pipe line completed, where on earth can you secure a proposition more practical, one that shows more good horse sense, one that offers one-tenth the gain on the investment? The company has one of the best refinery men in the United States as its superintendent. It will maintain its own telegraphic wires, own its own steamboats, and from 1000 feet under the ground, take the oil through its different stages until it is burning in your lamp or running your machinery.

Fifty-seven-Acre Kansas City Refinery Site.

The Uncle Sam company owns in fee simple one of the best and most desirable refinery sites near Kansas City. It consists of fifty-seven acres. Is three miles nearer the manufacturing center of Kansas City than the Standard Oil company. This fifty-seven acres fronts on the Kaw river. Is only a few feet to a rock road leading right into Kansas City. It is on the bluff side of the river, so there is no danger of floods. This land is paid for. No debts or mortgages are allowed to hang over the Uncle Sam property. You will see the stock of this company selling readily for 75 cents per share when the pipe line reaches this land. You cannot keep the price of stock from advancing when rapid development is in progress like the Uncle Sam is showing.

HOW TO SEND MONEY.

Make your checks, drafts or money orders payable to the Uncle Sam company, or to H. H. Tucker, Jr., secretary. Write your name plainly, tell us how, or to whom you want the stock issued, and we will forward stock by return mail, and also send you weekly report thereafter, thus keeping you fully posted. ST. LOUIS OARSMEN ARE PREPARING FOR SEASON OF UNUSUAL ACTIVITY

The National Regatta at the World's Fair Did Much for the Sport Locally—Creve Coeur Lake an Excellent Course.

The ideal Indian summer weather that has brought such delight during the past month to the cheerful St. Louisans who play at golf and tennis and polo, has been equally welcome to St. Louis oarsmen, and down at the little boat and rowing clubs on the river front these broad-shouldered and clean-limbed athletes are busily engaged taking their first try outs for the 1905 season of the great aquatic sport.

Every evening when the great office buildings and factories have closed for the day—for these oarsmen are all workingmen—they may be seen in their "singles" and "pairs" and "fours," pulling with long, rhythmical strokes up and down the river, their backs bending forward and backward with the regularity of machinery, and making a pretty picture in the falling sunlight against the muddy waters of the Mississippi. And, of course, on Sundays every shell and barge and skiff in each of the boat houses along the river front are taken out by the members of the clubs, and the oarsmen have great times trying to dodge one another and the great pieces of driftwood, which are as menacing to the life of these frail shells as a wandering derelict is to the ocean liner.

Rowing has always been a popular pastime in St. Louis, and though the devotees of the sport have had many discouraging things to contend with, there has never been a time since the sport was introduced here that the membership lists of these rowing clubs have not been comfortably filled. But there are several indications this year which seem to promise a season more than usually successful.

National Regatta Influence.

The National Regatta held last summer at Creve Coeur Lake in connection with the Olympic games of the World's Fair, had a most beneficial and appreciable effect on the local rowing situation. St. Louis oarsmen, who had had up to this time but little opportunity to study the Eastern methods of rowing, and to row against men who were trained by the great Eastern coaches, had the rare opportunity of meeting the best oarsmen from all over the country, from the South and West, as well as from the East. They not only met in actual contests these cracks from other cities, but they found out that they could row well up with them in spite of the dismal predictions that had been made by the St. Louis aquatic prophets, whose chief occupation consisted in knocking the methods and the performances of the local oarsmen. This had a very good effect in giving confidence to the St. Louis men, which is one of the necessary essentials in the make-up of a successful athlete.

Moreover, those who had been grumbling for years about the poor facilities in the way of a water course that St. Louis was able to offer, were effectually silenced by the comments of the oarsmen from the other cities, who said that Creve Coeur Lake was a magnificent place for a rowing course, and that the St. Louis boat clubs should move their boathouses from the river front to the lake itself. It was then that St. Louis oarsmen began to realize how great a course Creve Coeur Lake really is. For, with the high banks and cliffs which surround the lake on three sides as wind shields, and with no driftwood or current to contend with, Creve Coeur Lake, except for the fact that it is rather short, is an ideal course for any rowing match.

Races Easily Seen.

From the standpoint of the spectators, too, it has advantages which cannot be duplicated in many places in the world. The races can be seen from the top of the cliff on the east side of the lake, where the entire course is in full view, and from where the crews can be seen far down below, like the race horses in the English National Derby are seen by the peasants from the top of the hills that surround the track, which is in the center of a natural amphitheater.

Then there is a footpath that runs along the entire eastern side of the lake, where those who wish to see the race at a closer distance may follow the crews as the Oxford undergraduates do in their famous "bumping" races. As a consequence of these things the 1905 St. Louis rowing season has opened most encouragingly and several of the clubs have purchased new shells and barges in anticipation of the increased number of those who will row this year.

The Southwestern Rowing Association, which is composed of six St. Louis rowing clubs and two in Quincy will hold its annual regatta Aug. 5 and 6. It has not yet been decided on what course the races will be run. At a meeting of the Association last month the place of meeting was discussed, but nothing definite was decided. Creve Coeur Lake is admitted to be the best course obtainable, but there are restrictions attached to holding the regatta there which offer a serious impediment.

Old Scullers at Work.

Almost all of the old crack scullers are back again at the game this year. Joachim, the veteran of the Western Club, has not yet been able to give up the sport and will row in the Southwestern regatta. At the Mound City Club Charles Gunther, who is the best exponent of the "slugging" stroke in the city, is taking daily tryouts in his pet shell. Gunther is a daredevil in his boat and the risks he takes make him a very striking figure in the club races down the river, which are held almost every Sunday. The Mound City Club considers Gunther one of the best scullers in the city.

Ernest Hess, who came third in the National regatta's final heat for the single scullers last year, is about the best entry that the Centuries will put in the field this season. Hess is not particularly brilliant in any single point of sculling, but as an all-round sculler he is considered one of the best in the Southwestern Association. Last week he went several miles up the river at a very lively clip and, according to those who watched the performance, in excellent form.

In the four races, which are looked forward to with as much interest as the singles, the Mound City and Century are admitted to have the best teams. The Mound City four is fast acquiring the Vesper stroke, which takes its name from the stroke used by the Philadelphia Club, which will represent America in the English Henley this summer. This stroke consists in a short jerky method of catching the water and though disapproved of by many critics is still considered the best stroke, although it is hardest to acquire.

The Century Club, which beat the Mound City four last year, although still in very good form will have to exert itself this year to repeat last season's performance.

Not an Error in Four Years.

Robinson, the first baseman for the Fordham College baseball team, has entered into an agreement to play with the Brooklyn team next year. Robinson has a remarkable record during his term in college. For four years he has played without an error, which is perhaps the longest time a player has ever been able to play ball without making some sort of mistake.

HILDRETH LETS HIS RACE HORSES REST

Successful System Adopted by Man Who Keeps His Animals Sleek and Fat.

"Have you ever noticed how well Sam Hildreth's horses look when he sends them to the post?" said A. Barrett Dade, the well-known Kentucky racing official, as Jake Sanders paraded to the post in the Memorial Handicap at the Fair Grounds. "Take that colt, for instance. He is apparently too high in flesh, but that is the way Hildreth likes to race his horses. He has them all fat and sleek, round as butterballs and strong as bulls. Their hides shine like satin and their eyes sparkle with brilliancy. The horses prance about showing every evidence of life and vigor.

"They tell me that Hildreth has a tonic for his horses that keeps them on their feed. Outside of that he uses nothing but the best of feed, engages the most competent stable help on the market and caps the whole thing by investing in nothing but good racing tools. Here you have the secret of his success and there is no question but that Hildreth outclasses all trainers in the West.

"Watch him in the East. If he don't make things hum on the metropolitan tracks I will be the most disappointed of men. Hildreth's success is due to the fact that he uses modern methods in handling race horses. He has 'passed up' the old-fashioned style of 'drumming' horses to death while preparing them for their races.

"Most horse trainers handle thoroughbreds today as they did before the civil war when five mile heat races were the fashion. Negro slaves trained most of our racehorses in those days and all they knew was to 'drum' a horse until the ribs shone and the animal could run five miles without breathing hard.

"Hildreth does things differently. He wants a horse big and strong and he has them on the track in the mornings for a shorter period of time than any trainer at the Fair Grounds. While other horsemen are galloping their horses around the course until they have become track-sore and weak, Hildreth has his charges grazing in the paddocks, eating the choicest of blue grass and getting a chance to forget all about racing.

"His system is simply infallible in these days of continuous racing and short sprints. I have seen him take horses that could never finish inside the money and make them win a week later from good fields. Rest was all they needed. Hildreth realized it, bought the horses cheap, let them remain off the track for a week or so, then breezed them through the stretch to sharpen their speed and then dropped them in a soft spot in a race that suited their speed and class. Fresh and strong, the horses usually ran like scared wolves and invariably brought home the big end of the purse.

SIZE OF TENNIS TEAMS UNCERTAIN

Americans Demand Four-Man Teams in International Matches.

The attention of American lawn tennis players is centered upon the preparations of their teams for the international matches for the Davis cup, which are to take place in England this summer. Holcombe Ward, the American champion in both singles and doubles, has been selected as captain of the players to be sent abroad by the National Lawn Tennis Association.

The International Committee of the National Association, which is composed of Dr. James Dwight, Robert D. Wrenn and Richard Stevens, was required, under the international regulations, to name the members of the team by May 1, and it cabled to England the names of Ward, Larned, Wright and W. J. Clothier. There is some question as to whether three or four men will be allowed to play, and until this is settled it is not certain whether Wright or Clothier, or both, will go.

The original deed of gift of the cup permitted four players to compete on each team, but an effort has recently been made by the English authorities to amend these conditions. The Americans still contend for the right to name four, while the continental players back up the demands of the English to limit the teams to three.

In any case Ward and Larned will go to England this spring, and it is likely that Wright will be left behind if only three go. However, the selection of the players for singles and doubles from the American team will be left to Ward, the captain, and his decision will not be announced before the time of the beginning of the play in July. It is more than likely that Larned and Ward will play in singles and Clothier in doubles, with the freshest of the other two. The program calls for two matches in singles the first day, a match in doubles the second day, and two more matches in singles the third day.

Teams have been also entered in the international matches from Australia, France Belgium and Austria. A preliminary series will be played this year to decide which of the five nations shall have the right to challenge the British holders of the world's championship. The draw took place some weeks ago in London, and resulted very unfavorably for the Americans, since they will have to beat all of the best teams they can meet the Englishmen.

In the preliminary round the Americans meet the Belgians; then the winners play the French in the semi-finals, while the Australians are playing the Austrians. The winners of these two semi-finals will come together in the final round for the right to challenge the British team.

REAL REASONS WHY MURPHY QUITS YALE

Veteran Trainer Said to Be Dissatisfied With Old Eli's Decadent Democracy.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 3.—The sole topic of conversation on the Yale campus during the past week has been the announced resignation of Mike Murphy, the veteran trainer. Murphy will leave here in September to go to the University of Pennsylvania. It is said that he will receive a home while he lives at the university, $5000 from the athletic association and a professorship of physical culture at the university which will pay him $2500 a year.

But there is one phase of the situation that no one in authority in Yale athletic circles will discuss, and that is the real reason of Murphy's departure. It is officially given out that Mike is in ill health, and simply must go away from the New Haven climate in order to prolong his life.

Those of the older school, though, remember that Mike has always been the victim of malarial troubles, even when he was at the University of Pennsylvania years ago. These wise ones attribute the leaving of Murphy to other reasons, and hint that they are the same that prevented the election of Rockwell to the football captaincy, the direct result of which was that Jim Hogan refused to be Yale's head coach next fall.

In fact, Mike is said to have quietly expressed the opinion at times that Yale is losing all her oldtime grand democracy, and that the extremely conservative policy of the athletic heads is becoming imbued in the students and shows in all their actions.

In the beginning of Mike Murphy's advent at Yale these characteristics in a man made him a hero, and it is said by those in a position to know that sadness over the new order of things more than anything else is directly responsible for his going back to Old Penn.

Murphy was secured before by Pennsylvania in the fall of 1896. His presence was felt imediately in every branch of athletics. Pennsylvania won the intercollegiate championship in the spring of 1897 with comparative ease. Then followed championships on track and field in 1898, 1899 and 1900, some of the records made by Red and Blue athletes under Murphy in these years standing today.

Murphy returned to Yale in the fall of 1900. The following year Yale failed to win the intercollegiate meet, this being the only instance that the remarkable trainer did not win the track and field championship of America for either Yale or Pennsylvania since 1894. But Murphy's presence soon asserted itself and Yale proved all powerful in the championship intercollegiates of 1902, 1903 and 1904, the Blue winning these meets and in so doing captured the loving cup trophy.

Previous to his engagement at Pennsylvania, Murphy had trained Yale track teams that had won the Mott Haven championships in the years of 1894, 1895 and 1896, making his record a continuous chain of victories from 1894 to 1904, a period of 10 years, excepting the year 1901, when the Crimson of Harvard was all conquering.

BALLPLAYERS OF MANY LEAGUES ARE RECRUITED FROM THE MIDDLE WEST

Take a map of the United States and, with a ruler and pencil, block out a rectangle with the northern line parallel with Cleveland, the southern boundary passing through Cincinnati, the eastern border in the neighborhood of Harrisburg, Pa., and the western resting upon the western boundary of Ohio. Block this out in heavy pencil, and then, if you are a baseball "fan," study it carefully, line by line. For that rectangle is the baseball belt—the country which now produces the great professional ball players—and from the circumscribed area the country now draws its chief supplies. If this statement seems in any way incredible, get a list of the players now starring in the National League, American League, American Association, Western League, Southern League, or even the Southern and California organizations, and look over the addresses appended to the names of these 700 players.

At least three-fifths of the men now playing ball in the larger leagues hail from towns or villages within the limits of that rectangle. Of the men who have come into prominence within the past five years the percentage is even larger. Three-fourths of the young players drafted by the National and American Leagues for 1905 have their homes within that territory. On the face of the returns that district is "the baseball belt," beyond question, cavil or comparison.

Twenty years ago—in fact, down as recently as 1895—there were several notable recruiting fields for crack ballplayers, and these districts were widely separated. One of the most productive of these regions was Chicago, where the City League, an association fully equal to the best minor leagues in playing strength, turned out hosts of clever boys.

Another region which produced many fine players was around Troy and Albany, N. Y. Dan Brouthers was a fine sample of the big stars who came from this vicinity. Still another recruiting ground was in the mill region of Massachusetts. Jimmy Ryan, Hugh Duffy and probably 50 others of more than average reputation having come from cities in this section of the Bay State. California formerly sent many crackerjack players East, the men who had made California reputations always receiving big league offers of a nature too attractive to be refused.

All this is altered now. Chicago sends out few players, and these few of inferior pattern. Troy and Albany are out of the market, though still producing an occasional star of great brilliancy, such, for example, as Evers, the wonderful second baseman of the Chicago Nationals. The mill region faded away as a factory of stars after the incomparable Lajoie was given to the admiring fans. California now imports its men from the East, and but few native sons gambol on the professional green.

The passing of Chicago from recruiting fields was due wholly to the activity of the builders. Only a few years ago great spaces, even in the thickest settled parts of Chicago, lay vacant, and on these lots myriads of youngsters pitched, caught and batted. As the city grew, these lots were covered one by one. Today the boy who would play ball in Chicago has to travel long distances to find a diamond, and the ambitions of the Chicago juveniles seem to have shrunk in inverse ratio to the length of these journeys.

California, after producing such men as Van Haltren, Fred Carroll, Frank Chance and William Lange, stopped turning out stars, and began to send East for players, and the "native son" of today shows little of the speed and power upon the diamond which the great Californians of the past were wont to demonstrate before admiring throngs.

CARDINALS AHEAD IN EASTERN INVASION BY THE WESTERN CLUBS

St. Louis Team Split Even in "the Enemy's Country"—Men Are Playing Lively Ball—Records of Individual Players.

The Cardinals led all the clubs of the West in victories on the first Eastern invasion, annexing eight games. Pittsburg took seven and the Chicago and Cincinnati teams six each.

The first intersectional contest resulted in the East winning 27 games and the West 27.

The New York team carried off the individual honors in games won, capturing a majority of each series except the one with the strong Cincinnati Reds. The whole series goes to show that the New Yorks is the strongest team in the league—a fact that hardly needed any demonstration.

A particular point that will tickle St. Louisans is that our own Cardinals did better in the entire series than any other team except New York.

The Pittsburgs, Cincinnatis, and Chicagos all lost more games than they won, but the first two named were only one game short of an even break, while the Chicagos lost three more games than they won, making easily the poorest showing of any of the clubs from the West.

The Cardinals played with more ginger than they have at any time this year, and this rejuvenation has been solely due to the leadership of Jimmy Burke. Who that was present in the little clubhouse the evening of his appointment to the position of manager-captain will ever forget his rousing address to the players, manfully asking for their help.

Let's Pull Together.

"Let's all pull together, boys," said Burke, "and try to win a pennant for old St. Louis. eW may not win it, but let's go at it, anyway."

The club left town the night of May 3 under the most inauspicious circumstances. The long eastern trip, the hardest of the schedule, was before them, and they had not time to become acquainted with the manager in his new capacity.

The first four games were dropped to Chicago and then began the Eastern trip proper. New York was the first city of the enemy visited. The Giants were in the heyday of their success and it was as a joke that the Cardinals were greeted at the Polo Grounds.

Joe McGinnity, the great "Iron Man," was the pitcher for the Giants and Jack Thielman opposed, and when the score boy hung up the figures at the close of the game, St. Louis 8, New York 7, the Giants stole silently away, the merry jest and quip of the afternoon recoiling like a boomerang.

That contest was really the initiation of the Eastern trip in earnest.

The next three games were dropped to New York, after struggles for supremacy that have gone down in baseball history in Gotham. And it was from New York that reports came flashing over the wire of the change in tactics of the Cardinals. They had shaken off their lethargy and in place had came a fierce desire to win games and play them out. They earned the appelation of "Garrison finishers," and the Giants were never sure of victory until the last man was out.

It was right here that Burke began to inculcate his "run 'er out" policy, and the result was an aggressiveness and energy that became part and parcel of every member of the team.

At Philadelphia they won two games, Thielman being the winning boxman.

At Boston three out of four were taken from the Beaneaters and then the Cardinals went to Brooklyn and engaged in a series of games with Ned Hanlon's Superbas. They won two games, thus rounding up the first invasion of the East with eight victories.

From Brooklyn they went to Chicago and engaged in a series of two with Selee's Chicago Cubs. The Seleeites have always been a difficult proposition for the Cardinals, and their Nemesis was still following them in the Windy City, but at that they broke even.

At Pittsburg, three out of four games went to the Pirate band. Thursday and Friday they were scheduled for two games with Kelley's Reds.

The most impressive fact connected with the tour has been the magnificent showing of Jack Thielman, the young recruit from the Pacific Coast.

He pitched five games on the trip and won four of them, bringing his total victories for the season up to six out of a possible seven.

Thielman was credited by all the Eastern critics with having everything that goes to make a successful pitcher—curves, control and a cool head in a crucial situation. Besides, he is a fair batter and above the ordinary pitcher as a fielder, and the bruising campaigns of the Eastern trip have shown that the lad is bound to stay in major league ranks and is of the stuff of which first-class boxmen are made.

John T. Brush said of him: "Thielman is a player of the proper spirit. He has his reputation to make and is full of ginger and vim. He thinks less of himself and more of his work than any recruit I have seen. I have been told that his real reason for not joining the Cardinals last year was that he wanted one more year in the minors, and that he believed the extra year would give him the experience he needed. If this is so, and I believe it is, it speaks well for his general hard-headedness."

Thielman's work has been the sensation of the National League. No other pitcher in the organization has equaled this year his marvelous straight-win record, with the exception of Leon Ames of the New York Giants, and Ames has had the benefit of over a year's experience. His first year's record by no means equaled or approached Thielman's.

"Buster" Brown, who has been attending the Agricultural College at Ames, Io., has sent word that he will join the team within the next few days and his accession should prove of great value to the Cardinals. Brown pitched last year for Omaha and his services were much sought after for the season of 1905. His record last year was 32 games pitched and 24 victories. He was obtained by the Cardinals in exchange for "War" Sanders and a money consideration. In appearance Brown is said to be a big, strapping fellow, and to bear a striking resemblance to Christy Matthewson. Let us hope the resemblance goes farther than a physical one.

Beckley, at first, has been going as fast as at any time in his career, and his hitting and fielding have been features of many of the games on the road. One of the Boston victories was solely due to his great work in the field and at the bat.

The permanent composition of the infield is a proposition that has not yet been worked out. Brain, Shay, Arndt and Manager-Captain Burke are all candidates for the positions, and all of them are infielders above the average. Clarke, who has been held in reserve for utility work, is also a candidate. He is a clever infielder, young and aggressive, and he has more than an outside chance to annex one of the jobs.

Dave Brain, since his return to the game, has been playing superb ball and his batting was responsible for the first victory at Pittsburg.

Brain is not only a good "single" batter, but he is liable at any moment to break any game with a drive for a home run.

Harry Arndt is the new man who has been alternating between short and second. He was obtained from Louisville in exchange for "Southpaw" Campbell. It will be remembered that he was given a trial by Cincinnati on their spring trip to Jacksonville, Fla., and on account of their great number of infielders he was told to return to Louisville. This he refused to do and "jumped' to the Coatesville, Pa., independent club. The same evening he was exchanged by Louisville for Campbell, but as he had left for Coatesville, the Cardinals were not sure of him. They finally got in communication with him and he joined the club in New York, and his playing has since been of a caliber to suggest to the Cardinal management that they would have gone farther than to Coatesville to secure his services. He has been batting with the leaders of the club and has been apparently as much at home at the second bag as he is at short.

Jimmy Burke has been the surprise of the trip. It was thought that the inevitable cares of the managerial toga would effect his batting, and possibly his fielding, but instead of that he has been hitting the ball consistently and bids fair to have his most successful year with the stick.

MALARIA A Poison Breathed into the System

The air arising from low, marshy places, damp cellars, stagnant ponds and pools and from decaying vegetable matter, as well as the gases from sewers, is loaded with germs of malarial poison. The water we drink, that has not been properly filtered and purified, is also full of these germs and microbes, and as we daily breathe and drink millions of these into the system, to be absorbed by the blood, the entire body begins to feel the effects of the poison. The most common form of Malaria is "chills and fever," but when the blood is thoroughly saturated with the poison it becomes so weak and polluted that abscesses, carbuncles, boils, sores, ulcers and other skin diseases result. Malaria also affects the liver, kidneys, bowels and stomach, producing a chronic state of biliousness that often results in jaundice or some malignant fever. In cases of Malaria the blood must be purified before the body can regain its natural health. S. S. S. contains purifying and tonic properties possessed by no other blood medicine, and is the ideal remedy for the treatment of Malaria. It destroys the germs of the disease and builds up the weakened, polluted circulation. It enters into the blood and forces out every particle of poison and waste matter and adds strength and activity to it. S. S. S. improves the appetite and digestion, tones up the entire system by its alterative and purifying action, and Malaria, with all its bad effects, is permanently driven from the system. Book on the blood and any medical advice, without charge.

MALARIA IN HIS SYSTEM FOR YEARS.

For several years I suffered with Chills and Fever, caused by Malaria in my system, and each summer for several years I would have a relapse. Finally my physician prescribed S. S. S. It entirely cured me; I have never been troubled since.

BASEBALL MAGNATE HAS HIS TROUBLES

"It was not always my proud privilege to sit in my own private box up above my own ball park and watch my own players lose the pennant," said President Robert Lee Hedges of the Browns before Thursday's Browns-Detroit game.

"Once I was content to look through the knot holes in other folks' fences to see the men in other people's employ hand the flag over to another team. I was so occupied one day right here in St. Louis in '83, I think it was, when I witnessed the amazing spectacle of an umpire settling a dispute by splitting the difference. You remember left field fence then back on Spring avenue and it was so close in that many a hit went over it. Right at the top of the fence was a pole put there for the purpose of telling what balls were fair that went over the fence.

In this game something happened that never happened before. The Browns, I think, were playing the Athletics at the time, and Harry Stovey, the great-base runner, was at the bat. Harry hit one of Dave Foutz's curves straight against the pole. So squarely in the middle did the ball land that it bounded back in the field without curving to the right or left.

"Stovey ran all the way around, while the crowd yelled 'foul.' But Purcell, who was then the Athletics' captain, rushed into the diamond like a wild man and set up the claim that the hit was a home run.

"Charlie Comiskey then got into the fray, and it looked for a moment as if bedlam had broken loose. The umpire yas yanked this way and that in the old-time style for fully five minutes. Finally, he walked over, and, taking the two captains by the arm, he led them both down to third base.

" 'Gentlemen,' he said, to the two rivals' leaders, 'I'll give you both an even break. Stovey's hit wasn't a foul, nor was it a home run. It was half way between, and it goes for two bases!'

"I don't know," continued the local magnate, "but that I wish those days were back again. The joys of a baseball man are few and far between. After last Sunday's game a prosperous, handsome-looking gentleman came into my office and asked for a few moments' conversation. I led him into the private office and he drew his watch from his pocket and showed me where the crystal had been broken.

" 'I want you to pay for that,' he said, 'One of the balls batted by one of your players broke it.'

" 'Did the player wear a gray or white uniform?' I asked.

" 'Why, he wore gray.'

" 'It must have been a Washington player then,' I said. How much damage has been done to the watch?'

" 'About $4 worth.'

" 'How do you estimate that?'

" 'O, my watchmaker told me.'

FEATURE OF SEASON IS "SQUEEZE" PLAY

New Bit of Baseball Trickery Is Sharing Comment With Famous "Spit" Ball.

The feature of this year's baseball strategy to date is the "squeeze play." The spitball delivery has hardly excited more comment and discussion among the spectators who have been fortunate enough to see the maneuver in operation. While this play is not new and has been used intermittently for a number of seasons, it has never until this year approached a state of perfection to insure a reasonable degree of success so that its use has become a regular feature of the game. The squeeze play when well engineered is practically invincible, for as yet no way has been discovered to prevent the runner from scoring on the move.

The play is used only under one condition—that is, when there is a man on third and but one out. Then at a signal given either by the coacher on the line or the man at bat the man on third starts for home with the beginning of the pitcher's delivery, and the man at bat bunts. By the time the ball leaves the bat the runner is almost to the plate, and no matter how poor the bunt is, if it is on the ground, there is not time enough for the opposing team to field the ball and get it to the plate before the runner scores.

If there is unity of action between the batsman and the runner there seems to be no sure way to stop the play. Almost any batter, no matter how poor, can drop some kind of a grounder on almost any ball that the pitcher can throw within the catcher's reach. He can reach at least three feet on the other side of the plate and hit a grounder, either fair or foul, and if it is foul the runner simply goes back to third for another attempt.

On the other hand, it is almost impossible for the pitcher to throw a ball so near the batter that he cannot meet it for some kind of a ground hit, or take his chances of being hit, which would leave conditions exactly the same as before the play was attempted with another man on base. A high ball thrown by the pitcher would increase the batter's tendency to knock the ball into the air and defeat the play, but even this is far from being a certain solution of the difficulty.

Hugh Jennings, who, with McGraw, Kelley and others of the old Baltimore champions, probably had a share in originating a large majority of the tricks of baseball, saw Brooklyn work the "squeeze" in its final game against Cincinnati. "I can't see any way for the pitcher to get the best of the 'squeeze,' " he said. "If the play is worked right any grounder into the diamond will score the man, and it is almost impossible for the pitcher to throw a ball that the average batter can't step into or away from and hit in some way.

CODY'S TRAIL TO YELLOWSTONE IS NOW OPEN

Buffalo Bill's Route "Through Wonderland" Being the Finest Hundred Miles of Scenery on Earth," Sees First Coach Load of Tourists.

LAID OUT BY THE SCOUT, BUILT AT GREAT COST.

Beginning at Cody, Wyo., It Passes Canyon and Cataract, Two Cody Inns and the Cody Mausoleum on Rattlesnake Mountain.

CODY, Wyo., June 3.—Old "Buffalo Bill" Cody has lived long enough to see another of his dreams realized—the opening of his long-talked-of "Cody Trail Through Wonderland," the "trail" being a new route to the Yellowstone National Park, a "trail" passing through what the famous scout and Indian fighter says is the finest 100 miles of scenery in the world.

It has been the dream of the last 40 years of Col. Cody's life to establish a road running into the Yellowstone National Park from the east and passing through the famous Yellowstone forest reservation, where Cody, as well as others who have passed over the route, say can be found sights and scenes superior to even the National Park, which adjoins the reserve on the west and to which the "Cody Trail Through Wonderland" leads.

Col. Cody years ago laid out the route which he wanted to use. He didn't have the assistance of an engineer in doing so, because it was not his object to make a short line or to avoid difficulties. The first object of the "trail" was to pass through the best scenery possible, and it didn't make much difference how much out of the way of an air line the trail went.

Eventually it would end at the Lake Hotel, in the Yellowstone National Park, and its originating point was on the Shoshone River in the Big Horn Basin, where later the Colonel located his home and the town of Cody.

It is out on the "trail" that Col. Cody has established his two hunting lodges, Wapiti Wickiup and Pahaska Tepee. The first takes its name from the Wapiti branch of the Shoshone River, on which it is located, while the second is named directly for Buffalo Bill—Pahaska Tepee meaning "the home of the long-haired man" (Long Hair is an Indian name for Col. Cody).

"White Beaver" Powell, Col. Cody's foster brother, says this about Pahaska Tepee: "The tepee is in the heart of the big-game country of the Rocky Mountains. Purest water from the mountain springs and melting snows are filled with rainbow salmon, mountain and brook trout, and on every side huge mountains tower thousands of feet into the air. Some of these mountains are capped with snow all the year round."

The Pahaska tepee is the largest log cabin in the world and will accommodate something like 100 persons. Wapiti Wickiup, 25 miles nearer civilization tha nthe tepee, will take care of 50 persons.

Out on this trail, in one of its loneliest spots, Buffalo Bill has built for himself a splendid mausoleum, in which he will be buried. The mausoleum is on the apex of Rattlesnake Mountain and is almost inaccessible except to the experienced mountain climber. Cody has made provision in his will for the expense necessary to remove his body to the mountain, no matter in wwhat country of the globe he shall del.

The road from Cody to the Yellowstone skirts mountains and rivers, dark ravines and appalling precipices. At one time half up the side of the mountain it goes; at another it winds its way along the bottom of some black canyon through which a mountain stream roars and plunges. Through Rattlesnake Canyon to the Shoshone it has been found necessary to even cut several short tunnels, so difficult has the work been.

It was a source of the keenest regret to BuffaloBill that he was unable to be present when the first coach load of tourists, with their tents and camp equipage, left Cody en route to the Yellowstone Park over the new trail; but he was absent in Paris. The opening of the trail took place last month and a long message of congratulation was cabled to Paris to Col. Cody by his friends.

NEW YORK MAY SUE ARKANSAS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 3.—Information has reached Little Rock that an effort will shortly be made to compel the State to redeem the State bonds that were repudiated by the Fishback amendment to the State constitution in 1880. This time the State of New York will be plaintiff. By the provisions of an act passed by the New York Legislature recently, the State is authorized to receive from the owners the bonds or obligations of other states and attempt their collection. The proceeds of such collections are to go into the school fund. It is known that there are parties in New York who hold some of the repudiated bonds, and who have on several occasions made inquiry as to their validity. Should these bonds be assigned to the State of New York for the benefit of the school fund the State will then proceed under the terms of its new law to sue the State of Arkansas for recovery.

The bonds repudiated by the Fishback amendment are as follows: Funding bonds, numbered 491 to 1960, inclusive of both numbers, being the Holford bonds delivered to F. W. Caper and an inheritance from the Real Estate Bank in the early part of the State's history, $1,370,000; Memphis & Little Rock Railroad aid bonds, $1,200,000; Mississippi, Ouachita & Red River Railroad aid bonds, $600,000; Little Rock, Pine Bluff & New Orleans Railroad aid bonds, $1,200,000; Little Rock & Fort Smith Railroad aid bonds, $1,000,000; Arkansas Central aid bonds, $1,350,000; levee bonds, $335,846.66; total, $9,725,846.66.

WARM AND CLOUDY SUNDAY

Winds From South Will Blow Today, Without Rain, Says the Weather Man.

The Weather Man says winds from the South will blow over St. Louis and vicinity today and the weather will be warm. The shade of clouds will be cast on the earth at times, but rain is not predicted. The forecast is:

" Sunday, partly cloudy and continued warm. Southerly winds."

I'M JOLLY GLAD THE LID IS NOT ON AMATEUR BASE BALL

Showers and thunderstorms have been heard from in many States, and it is reported cloudy in States where no rain has fallen. Heavy rains fell in Southeastern Kansas, while showers and thunderstorms are reported from other parts of that State. The same conditions prevail throughout Northwestern and Northeastern States. In almost all sections the temperature has been rising. West of the Mississippi, owing to the low pressure over the western plateau and the Rocky Mountain district, general cloudiness prevails.

HORSE THREW ROUGH RIDER.

Lad Was Only an Amateur and the Equine Realized That Fact.

Dan Miller, a 12-year-old boy living at 1434 North Thirteenth street, got the idea into his head yesterday afternoon that he was a broncho buster and went out riding on the back of a half-broken horse to train the animal and further strengthen his own conviction of his Rough Rider prowess.

At Twelfth and Pine streets the horse grew tired of carrying Dan and his load of conceit and pitched him to the street. The boy went from the saddle to the ground in regular tenderfoot style and his right arm was fractured by the fall.

After being treated at City Hospital, where his injuries were pronounced not serious, he wended his way back home on a street car and found it far more comfortable than the back of a horse which insists upon its rider "making good" if he claims to be an equestrian crackerjack.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

RACING MEN IN COMBINE PLAN FIGHT ON LAW

Kansas City and St. Louis Track Owners Seek Legal Advice on Adoption of New York Betting System.

RACING WILL NOT BE INTERRUPTED AT DELMAR

Scheme Is for Issuance of Numbered Badges to Patrons at Track Who Will Bet Among Themselves.

Information received by the Post-Dispatch last night points to the conclusion that the St. Louis and Kansas City racetrack interests have decided to ignore the law passed by the recent Missouri Legislature prohibiting bookmaking and poolselling by substituting the New York system of bookmaking.

Instead of the old-fashioned method of conducting the books and pools on the races it is announced by the St. Louis contingent that the Eastern method of recording bets without the issuance of tickets will be adopted.

Legal representatives of both the Kansas City and St. Louis tracks have been in conference at the Planters' Hotel during the past two days relative to the proposed innovation, which is designed to evade the iron-clad legislative enactment in regard to racetrack gambling.

The formal announcement that racetrack betting would be attempted here after June 16, when the repeal of the breeders' law, under which all the Missouri racetracks are now operating, goes into effect June 17, was made yesterday by S. W. Adler, a stockholder in the Delmar Jockey Club.

Mr. Adler said that racing would be transferred to the Delmar track Monday, June 12. Bookmaking will be continued in the usual manner for five days. Then the repeal of the breeders' law goes into effect and the New York system of betting will then be introduced.

"Bettors will receive no tickets when they make a wager," said Mr. Adler. "The free gate will be entirely abolished and every patron of the track will have a numbered badge. We expect our patrons to bet among each other. I presume they will keep track of each other in order to settle their wagers by the numbers on their respective badges.

How System Works.

"Bookmaking as it has been conducted here now has been tabooed in the East for a number of years. They have no stands or big blackboards for the display of odds and never issue tickets to the bettors. The bookmakers simply cater to the business of people who are known to them, many settling the next day.

"The new law prohibits registering bets and provides severe punishment for violations of the act. We will not permit bookmaking on our grounds, but we obtained advice to the effect that the track management is not accountable for the actions of individual patrons. They may bet among each other, as people do every day in the year on elections, prize fights, stock transactions and other matters of public concern.

"The Delmar Club will not attempt to interfere with such transactions. Our patrons will doubtless have no trouble taking either end of a bet on the track. Some of them will lay against horses, while others will bet on them. It will be up to the prosecuting officers to make cases against these men who bet among themselves. Evidence that a bet has been made will be difficult to obtain where no record of the transaction exists except with individuals who are being prosecuted.

Must Search for a Bet.

The bettor in search of a chance to risk his money on a horse will doubtless be afforded the opportunity if he makes a diligent search for some man who wants to take the other side of the argument. Both will keep records of the wager, but neither will have any evidence on the other and we are going to make a test case of the matter and see if the courts have jurisdiction.

"'Hand-bets' are what you might call them," said Mr. Adler, "and our attorneys assure us that we stand a good chance of operating unless the State can prove plainly that bets are being registered. Even if the book, sheet or tab upon which hand-bets are recorded is produced it will be a question whether the party who is taking one end of the bet can prove that such a transaction actually happened.

"In other words the whole transaction is one based on a mutual agreement between two men. One man's testimony that he bet with So and So is not going to thoroughly establish the fact until So and So acknowledges it. This is the whole case in a nutshell and we are simply going to give it a trial. If we can't operate according to this system the Delmar track will be closed down for good."

Saturday was the thirteenth day of the Delmar meeting at the Fair Grounds racetrack. The Club transferred its dates to the Fair Grounds because the track is better situated to carry on a fight with Union for patronage.

Mr. Adler said that L. E. Dennig, president of the Delmar Club would appear before the Western Jockey Club at its meeting in Chicago Monday and ask to have the last five days of the Delmar meeting transferred back from the Fair Grounds to the Delmar track.

Introducing New York System.

In New York they have an organization of bookmakers styling themselves the Metropolitan Turf Association, which practically monopolizes the bookmaking privileges on the racetracks around New York city. A similar organization is now in process of formation to control the bookmaking privileges on the local tracks.

It is also understood that the Elm Ridge Club of Kansas City will resume its racing meeting in the fall, probably about Sept. 15. Attorney James H. Harkless of Kansas City and former President C. C. Christie of the Elm Ridge Club have been in consultation with Judge Chester H. Krum.

Judge Krum, while declining to discuss the object of the conference, is said to have outlined to Mr. Harkless and Mr. Christie the attitude of Messrs. Cella, Tilles and Adler, in whose interest he is acting. Mr. Harkless likewise refused to divulge the nature of the conference and insisted in fact that he was here merely on legal business incident to affairs other than those of the racetrack management in Kansas City.

TERRA COTTA PLANT BURNED; LOSS, $200,000

Winkle Factory, at Manchester and Sulphur Avenues, Totally Destroyed Last Night—Twelve Buildings Burn.

THREE HUNDRED MEN EMPLOYED IN WORKS.

Flames Started Just Before Midnight and Burned Fiercely—Second Alarm and Then General Alarm Turned In.

A fire which was discovered shortly before midnight last night in a two-story brick warehouse forming part of a group of three brick buildings belonging to the plant of the Winkle Terra Cotta Co., at Manchester and Sulphur avenues, spread to the remaining buildings of that group and from them to all the buildings comprising the entire plant. Twelve buildings were destroyed resulting in a loss estimated by the night foreman of the Winkle Works at about $300,000.

The three brick buildings were connected with the main five-story building of the Winkle plant, which fronts on Manchester avenue. The fire spread with such rapidity that a second alarm was turned in, this being followed by a general alarm shortly after midnight.

Four or five men were on duty at the works last night, and the plant employs a total of 300 men.

None of the surroundinf buildings was damaged, though for a time many of them were in danger.

The fire started in the factory building, and was discovered by Night Watchman Theodore Freepartner.

In addition to the four principal buildings, which are the three warehouses and the main building, including the office, 5743 Manchester avenue, there were 15 fire kilns, about half of which were destroyed.

Secretary J. G. Hewitt estimates the loss at fully $200,000. The total plant represents an investment of $500,000, and covers one acre.

The Missouri Pacific tracks are directly across the street from the Winkle plant. About 1000 persons climbed a train of freight cars to view the fire, and, while they were there a Terminal engine coupled on the cars and moved them away to a point of safety, carrying the spectators along. No one was injured.

The Winkle Plant is the largest of its kind west of New York. The concern is one of the best-known manufacturing establishments in St. Louis. The officers of the company are J. Winkle, president; A. Winkle, vice-president; J. G. Hewitt, secretary and treasurer, and the downtown offices are at 313 North Thirteenth street.

Andrew Winkle is superintendent of the plant. He arrived on the scene shortly after the alarm of fire sounded.

KING OF GET-RICH-QUICKS CONVICTED

Jury in Federal Court Finds Charles H. Brooks Guilty of Misuse of Mails.

SENTENCE IS DEFERRED

Organizer of National Securities Company Calmly Hears Verdict That Means Prison.

Charles H. Brooks, described by Post-office inspectors as the "peer of get-rich-quick operators," was convicted by a jury in the United States District Court late yesterday afternoon on a charge of using the mail in the furtherance of a scheme to defraud. On request of the attorneys for the defense, Judge John H. Rogers deferred sentence until tomorrow morning.

The Brooks case has occupied the attention of the court for three days. He was indicted by Federal grand jury early in 1903 in connection with the investigation of the National Securities Co., which was raided, along with other alleged get-rich-quick concerns at that time, under orders of Gov. Folk, who was then Circuit Attorney of St. Louis.

The National Securities Co. advertised that it would receive deposits on which it agreed to pay interest at the rate of 6 per cent per month, the interest being payable at the end of each month. It also advertised that the money received would be invested by the company as its own funds, and that the depositor would be protected from any loss. It was represented that the company had a system, by which it was impossible for it to lose, but that even if it should occasionally lose on an investment the depositors would not lose one cent, as the company only invested 5 per cent of its receipts and retained the remainder for use in case of an emergency.

The Government introduced a number of witnesses to prove that they had deposited money with the concern and had received practically no benefits. On the other hand several witnesses testified that they had received the regular interest each month, according to the advertisements of the company.

The defense introduced little evidence. Brooks did not take the stand. The contention of the attorneys for the defense was that the Government had failed to prove the allegations made in the indictment that the firm was organized for fraudulent purposes and that Brooks had so used the mails. The jury, however, found that the National Securities Co. was organized for the purpose of defrauding the depositors and under the instructions of the court held Brooks guilty of using the mails even though the matter deposited in the mails was placed there by others.

Brooks received the verdict of the jury without a change of expression. United States District Attorney Dyer asked that Brooks be sentenced immediately, but the attorneys for the defense asked that sentence be postponed until Monday. This order was made by Judge Rogers, who refused, however, to admit Brooks to bail until his appeal bond should be perfected.

OLD MAN FELL DOWN STAIRS.

"Kill Me? No. It Will Take More Than a Fall to Do That," He Said.

Frank Seimens, a 72-year-old butcher, rooming on the third floor at 3306 Chouteau avenue, fell downstairs to the second floor last night, and was hurried to City Hospital under the belief that a man of his advanced age must have been dangerously hurt by such a mishap.

When the ambulance had made a record run and a slight gash in the left side of his head had been sewed up, the butcher laughed at the thought that he must necessarily be in peril of death because of a one-story tumble at three-score and ten years, hitting every step on the way down.

"It will take more than that to kill me," he said. And then he went back home as chipper as you please.

CHICAGO STRIKE OVER; LEADER IS ARRESTED

Teamsters Go Back to Work Under Old Conditions, but Employers Will Find Positions for All—President Shea's Bribery Charge Calls Out Accusation of Criminal Libel Against Him.

WHAT THE CHICAGO STRIKE COST IN SIXTY DAYS

Financial loss to employers, city and county	$15,000,000
Number of lives lost	14
Number of persons wounded	500
Number of teamsters out	5000
Extra police and deputy sheriffs sworn in	4000
Number of strike-breakers brought into the city	5000

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 3.—The Chicago teamsters' strike is over.

Peace terms were agreed on tonight at a conference between the men and the employers.

The treaty is similar to the one arranged a fortnight ago. At that time it was understood that the men were to call the strike off and that the employers would find places for them as rapidly as possible.

The agreement was virtually a victory for the employers, though it was understood that there were to be no claims of victory or defeat on either side.

The arrangements fell through, because the express companies refused to take their drivers back on any terms and the other teamsters declined to leave the express drivers to theri fate.

The present understanding dodges this issue. The department stores will take their men back at once. The Employers' Teaming Co. will find places for the express drivers and the express companies will, in turn, give a share of their deliveries to the Employers' Teaming Co.

The strike was called April 6 and has been one of the bitterest industrial struggles Chicago has ever known. It began as a systematic strike by drivers for Montgomery Ward & Co. to force the firm to take back members of the garment Workers' Union who had previously gone out for higher wages and better working conditions.

It gradually spread until most of the teamsters in the city were out, the lumber trade entirely tied up, building seriously hampered and still graver results in prospect.

President Cornelius P. Shea of the Teamsters' International Brotherhood was arrested late this afternoon on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Assistant General Manager Robert J. Thorne of Montgomery, Ward & Co.

Shea was arrested on a capias issued by Judge S. H. Bethea of the United States District Court, following the filing of a suit by Thorne who, in addition to making the charge of criminal libel, asks for $25,000 damages.

The suit is based on interviews given out by Shea to the newspapers, and on statements he is said to have made to the effect that he had been offered $10,000 by Mr. Thorne to call a strike against Sears, Roebuck & Co., which is in the same line of business as Montgomery, Ward & Co.

Shea made the assertions against Thorne before the grand jury as well as to newspaper men.

Judge Betha at first refused to take charge of the matter, and directed Mr. Thorne's attorneys to go to Judge Kohlsaat. The latter was not in the Federal building, however, and as no other Federal judge was available, Judge Bethea issued the capias and Deputy Marshal M. E. Patterson was sent to make the arrest.

Shea was found at his hotel and at once accompanied the deputy to United States Marshal Ames' office, and from there to Judge Bethea's court room, where he gave $5000 bonds for his appearance when wanted.

After filing the bill charging Shea with slander and criminal libel Thorne filed another bill of similar import in the State Supreme Court against former President Albert Young of the National Teamsters' Union.

A capias was immediately issued and a deputy sheriff sent in search of Young.

DOCTOR STABS SELF IN ALEXIAN HOSPITAL

Dr. H. H. East of Xenia, Under Treatment for Melancholia, Kills Himself.

According to the verdict of the Coroner, following an inquest held yesterday, Dr. H. H. East of Xenia, Ill., died at Alexian Brothers' Hospital Thursday from blood-poisoning, caused by wounds self-inflicted with suicidal intent.

Dr. East had been suffering from melancholia for some time and had been under treatment in the hispital since May 2. A short time before that date he stabbed himself in the neck with a piece of tin in an attempt at self-destruction. He was then placed under the charge of Dr. James E. Hennerich, of 3603 Utah place, by relatives who live at Clayton, and was taken to the hospital. Dr. Hennerich continued treating his case.

Early during the past week Dr. East stabbed himself in the groin with a knife. At the time it was not known how he had got the weapon, but Dr. Hennerich has discovered since East's death that the latter abstracted a knife from his surgical case on the occasion of a visit, and it was with this knife that he inflicted the wound that caused death.

Blood poisoning had already set in as a result of the first wound in the neck, and this spread to the wound in the groin.

Dr. East was 45 years old and was a prominent physician in Xenia. His wife and mother remained in St Louis while he was being treated at the hospital. He was buried in Wesleyan Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

THREE CRUISERS NOW AT MANILA TO BE INTERNED

Ships Unfit for Sea-Going and American Authorities Will Insist on Russian Commander Adhering to Neutrality Laws.

WOUNDED CARED FOR AT CAVITE HOSPITAL

Admiral Train Extends Helping Hand to Injured While Enforcing International Code—Enquist's Vessels in Bad Shape.

MANILA, June 4.—The three Russian cruisers, Jemtchug, Oleg and Aurora, which put into this port yesterday evening under command of Rear-Admiral Enquist, are still riding at anchor inside the harbor and in accordance with international neutrality laws will probably be interned.

All three of the vessels are in a battered condition and are glowing tributes to the Japanese marksmanship, most of their superstructures being shot away or battered into shapeless masses. None of the vessels is fit for seagoing and had they attempted to run away would probably have been overtaken by Japanee ships.

The casualties among officers and men were heavy and many of the wounded are now being cared for in the American Naval Hospital at Cavite. Others are being cared for in Manila hospitals.

Immediately upon his arrival here Admiral Enquist cabled St. Petersburg for permission to interne his ships and then began the work of caring for his wounded and making arrangements to bury the dead.

Of the three vessels the Jemtchug suffered the most severely in the battle and in addition to the damage wrought by the Japanese shells, was almost destroyed by fire. Her officers report that not a man of the crews of the ship's two fighting tops escaped injury.

The Russians say that the Japanese concentrated the fire of their small caliber guns on the Russian fighting tops and by destroying them protected, in a large measure, the advance of the torpedo boats which are especially vulnerable to the fire from the tops of warships they are approaching.

Rear Admiral Enquist is uninjured. Capt. Egorieff of the Aurora was killed by a shell which struck the conning tower, and he was buried at sea the day before reaching Manila.

On the Aurora three officers were wounded, 20 of the crew were killed and 83 were wounded. The losses on the Oleg were 13 of the crew killed and 18 wounded. On the Jemtchug the casualties were 21 junior officers killed and one wounded; 12 of the crew killed and 30 wounded.

From their appearance the Russian vessels are not damaged below the water line, though above it they are riddled by large and small shot. Several large shells pierced them amidships and a number of guns were dismounted.

The battleship Ohio and the cruiser Cincinnati are guarding the Russian ships. No official action as to their disposition has Admiral Train of the American squadron is seeing that all neutrality laws are being observed by the Russians.

ROJESTVENSKY TO HAVE DIED IF HELP APPEARED.

TOKIO, June 4.—The return of the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers Sazanami and Kagerou to Sasebo has been productive of a more detailed report of the capture of Admiral Rojestvensky.

The two destroyers which became separated from the rest of the flotilla during the battle of Saturday night continued to hunt for Russian vessels the next day, and finally came upon two of the enemy's destroyers, one of which ran away, leaving the other, which had broken down, helpless.

The helpless vessel proved to be the Bedovi with Rojestvensky and staff on board. She flew a white flag and an armed Japanese prize crew boarded her and received the surrender.

Upon the request of the Russians, Admiral Rojestvensky was not taken off the Bedovi because of his wounds, but remained with the understanding that in event of an attempted rescue by any other Russian craft he would be executed by the Japanese prize crew.

Latest advices received here from the prize crews which boarded the captured Russian ships were that their magazines were empty at the time of their surrender by Rear Admiral Nebogatoff, a fact which removes some of the disgrace from the Russian commander, as this condition is one which makes surrender to the enemy an excusable act in naval war ethics.

In his official dispatches today Admiral Togo says regarding the remnants of Rojestvensky's fleet:

"The Russian vessels present in the recent battle, which were not sunk or captured and which are unaccounted for, are," Togo's report adds; "the protected cruisers Oleg, Aurora, Izumrud and Almaz, three transports, two torpedo boat destroyers and one towboat. During the battle the Oleg and Aurora were within range of our third and fourth squadrons and were on fire. They may have escaped, but it will take time to restore their fighting power."

According to dispatches from St. Petersburg, the Izumrud was blown up by her commander after having run on a reef in Vladimir Bay. The Almaz reached Vladivostok early in the week and the Oleg, Aurora and Jemtchug arrived at Manila today.

NEW LEADS OPEN IN THE ARKANSAS BOODLE SCANDAL

Additional Arrests Result as Inquiry Brings Fresh Measures Under the Scrutiny of Grand Jury at Little Rock.

PROSECUTOR RHOTON AND SEN. GRAY DETERMINED.

Killough Levee Bill, Baking Powder and Telephone Legislation Lead in the Trouble They Have Made for Men Concerned in Their Promotion.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 3.—As the investigations of the grand jury into corrupton and bribery in the State Legislature of Arkansas proceed new leads open up. The arrests made during the past week are only a small part of those which it is expected will eventually be made as a result of the inquiry. Lewis Rhoton, prosecuting attorney, declares firmly that he will go to the bottom of the crooked work and will see that every guilty person is exposed and punished.

Senator James A. Gray of this city who has been attached to the prosecution by the prosecuting attorney, served with the men whose records are now rising up against them and will assist in bringing about their punishment. He is as firm in his determination to have justice done as is his chief.

Arrests in the Killough Levee Bill, by which Senator Killough sought to obtain the reorganization of the St. Francis Levee Board, are still continuing as the investigation proceeds. Next to the levee bill the baking powder bill leads in the number of legislators it has brought into trouble. As the inquiry continues however the votes on a considerable number of other measures is undergoing scrutiny to the discomfiture of those interested in their promotion.

SWANGER RENEWS HIS DEMANDS ON PEOPLE'S BANK

Statement of Changes Required Is Prepared Bearing Secretary's Seal for Presentation to New Directors of Lewis' Institution.

COYLE SAYS THEY WILL BE OBEYED TO LETTER

Investigation to Begin Tomorrow, Including Scrutiny of Loans to Lewis—Receivership Unless the State Is Satisfied With Results.

James F. Coyle, newly elected director of the People's United States Bank, stated yesterday afternoon that the requirements of the State Department would be observed carefully by the new Board of Directors.

"We shall begin a thorough investigation early Monday morning, and will go through everything connected with the bank from A to Z," he said. "Bank Examiner Cook will assist the new directors in making the examination.

"One of the first items that we shall inquire into is that of loans of $411,000, which it is said have been made by the bank to Lewis' companies."

To a Post-Dispatch reporter at Jefferson City, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Swanger said:

"I shall at once put in formal shape the demand for corrections in methods that I sent to Mr. Lewis, March 19, and which were set forth in the Post-Dispatch of last Wednesday and Thursday, and shall send these renewed demands to the new Board of Directors.

"The law demands that such instructions to banks be under my hand and the seal of the State. The point has been raised that the seal was omitted from my letter of March 19, but it will appear on the letter which I shall forward today.

Receiver Is Alternative.

"The State banking laws provide that if any bank shall refuse or neglect to obey such instructions, the Secretary of State shall instruct the Attorney-General to bring proceedings for a receiver.

"I have hope and belief that the reorganized Board of Directors of the People's Bank will carry out my orders, but if they do not do so promptly I shall instruct the Attorney-General to act.

"The purpose of my department in demanding a reorganization of the directory of the bank, which was composed entirely of Mr. Lewis' employes, was to secure men of recognized business ability, experience and integrity as directors, who were not so associated with Mr. Lewis and his enterprises as to hamper their independent judgment in the management of the affairs of the bank, and thus prevent the possible evils that might arise from having the bank subject to the control of one man.

"It was, of course, necessary that those selected as directors should be stockholders. In my opinion this result will be found to have been accomplished when the reorganization of the directory is completed. I shall, however, continue to keep in close touch with the management of the affairs of the bank, and if I find that the result desired has not been accomplished, I shall take such action as may be necessary."

This statement was made by Swanger after a consultation with Gov. Folk and Attorney-General Hadley. The use of the seal is the Governor's suggestion.

While Circuit Attorney, Gov. Folk received many letters regarding the People's Bank and a few days after he was sworn in as Governor, he suggested to Secretary Swanger that he examine the affairs of the concern.

Gov. Folk said yesterday afternoon: "Secretary Swanger and Attorney-General Hadley have consulted with me several times, including today, on the subject. The law places the matter entirely in the hands of the Secretary of State, and I understand that he intends that every provision of the State banking laws be met."

The requirements contained in a letter of May 19 from Secretary of State Swanger to President Lewis were not beneath the official seal of the Secretary of State. Mr. Swanger says he will renew these demands in a letter bearing the seal to the new Board of Directors.

A definite or approximately definite time for compliance with demands will be set by the Secretary of State, he says, but he cannot say now just what that time will be until he consults with State Bank Examiner Cook.

The letter containing the renewal of the demands will go out Monday.

PRESIDENT'S PEACE PLAN IS INDORSED BY FRANCE

Ambassador Jusserand Calls on Roosevelt and Expresses the Approval of His Government—Takahira Pays Night Visit to White House—Germany Is Urging Czar to Accept America's Offices

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, lunched with President Roosevelt today and took occasion to assure the chief executive that the support of France is with him in his movement toward peace.

That exchanges on the subject of peace between Washington and Tokio, if they do not for the present go further, are reaching an important stage was strongly indicated by a visit to the President tonight from Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister. He reached the White House at 9:30, and although he had no appointment, was at once received and was with Mr. Roosevelt for an hour.

Mr. Takahira refused to talk of his conference with the President or its purpose. Following so closely his long talk with Mr. Roosevelt on Thursday afternoon, it was suggested that he might have brought an answer from his government to some proposal advanced by the President to further peace, but he declined to say whether this supposition was in any way correct.

Late this afternoon Ambassador Meyer cabled the State Department that on account of the general excitement and confusion at St. Petersburg, no answer to President Roosevelt's offer of his good offices, as a mutual friend, to end the war can be expected from the Russian government for two weeks or more.

In fact, confusion in government circles is so pronounced that Mr. Meyer has not yet formally presented Mr. Roosevelt's peaceful proposal, nor will he do so until the present tension has subsided.

Mr. Meyer states that powerful influence toward peace is being exerted at St. Petersburg by France and Germany, and both are pointing to the United States as the logical peacemaker. Japan would accept no advances from France as an intermediator, and Germany would not be trusted by Russia. The Czar has not forgiven the Kiaser for his suggestion to Mr. Roosevelt which resulted in the international agreement to limit the zone of hostilities.

The President was incensed today over an alleged report, published throughout the country, of his conference yesterday with Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador. He issued an official statement that no information regarding their meeting had been given out at the White House. The inference is that the report originated with Count Cassini, and as it tended to discredit or belittle the President's efforts toward peace, the statement from the White House is accepted as an open rebuke to Count Cassini.

It will have no effect, however, on the steps that are being taken to end the war, as the President had previously decided that the Russian Ambassador should have no hand in his exchanges with St. Petersburg on the subject.

DEWEY SEES LESSON IN RUSSIANS' DEFEAT.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C. June 3.—Admiral Dewey is convinced that Togo has firmly established the supremacy of the battleship and finally exploded the theory, which has been held by the public, rather than by naval experts, that the torpedo boat soon would supersede the real fighting ship. It has been proved, he thinks, that torpedo boats and destroyers are available adjuncts to a navy only when they are used as Togo used them to supplement and follow up the destructive fire of the battleships which protect them until the time comes when they can be used.

The battleship is the base from which the torpedo boat operates, and the urgent need of the American navy, as Admiral Dewey sees it, is more battleships and much more rapid naval construction.

Ranking with the demand for battleships is the necessity for the training of the personnel of the navy. Rojestvensky, who tried to whip green crews into shape in six months and failed, as compared with the veteran fighters of Togo, has proved that fighting crews, like fighting ships, cannot be made in a day.

Admiral Dewey is convinced that the chief factor in the overwhelming Japanese victory was the incompetence of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky rather than the strategy of Admiral Togo.

He accords to Admiral Togo full credit for everything he did, but he believes that if it had not been for the inexcusable blunders of the Russian commander his ships would have inflicted far heavier damage to the Japanese.

Admiral Dewey believes that the first serious mistake of Admiral Rojestvensky was in failing to inform himself through his scout ships of the exact whereabouts of the opposing fleet. Then he made another and fatal blunder when he continued on his course in double line after the Japanese fleet had been sighted, with his lighter ships between his battleships and the enemy.

BUCKLE RENDERS HATPIN USELESS

Policeman George Bock Has Narrow Escape From Attack of Woman Prisoner.

A suspender buckle near his shoulder saved Policeman George Bock of the Dayton street police station from being transfixed by an 8-inch brass hatpin in the hands of Martha C. Nolan, 30 years old, single, living at 3517 Cozens avenue, about 5:45 p. m. yesterday.

Sarah Williams, a negress of 3515 Cozens avenue, had complained to the policeman that Martha Nolan had tried to cut her, and, upon investigation, Bock arrested the two women and a man named Frank Sargent, who was mixed up in the row. At the patrol box the Nolan woman is said to have attacked Sarah Williams again, and when Policeman Bock separated them, she tried to stab him with the hatpin, which bent double when it struck his suspender buckle.

Silas C. Grubb, a carpenter living at 3228 Lucas avenue, protested against the arrest of the Nolan woman, it is alleged, and he, too, was arrested by Policeman Bock, who took his four prisoners to the Dayton street police station.

PANIC JUST AVERTED AT SKAT CONGRESS

Fire in Milwaukee Building Where Tournament Is in Progress.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 3.—What promised to be a frightful panic at the Exposition building tonight was checked almost instantly by the prompt action of the fire department in extinguishing the flames which had started in the decorations in the roof.

The building was the scene of the National Skat Congress, and 1608 players were at the tables, representing almost every city of consequence in America. An attempt was made to take a flash-light picture of the crowd, which resulted in setting fire to a canvas stretched below the main roof of the big structure.

In an instant sparks were dropping on the skat players below. A corps of firemen in the building, however, prevented the spread of the flames, and the players, who had started for the doors, were quieted by the announcement through a megaphone that the danger was past.

ASKS PRESIDENT FOR POSTAGE

Pennsylvania Postmaster Calls on President for Charges on Unstamped Letter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 3.—President Roosevelt, being compelled to obey the postal law as well as the humblest citizen, has sent a 2-cent stamp to the Berwick postoffice for a letter awaiting him there. The letter, mailed Monday, bore a stamp cut from a stamped envelope, which is contrary to the postal laws. Postmaster Bowman accordingly notified the President in the usual form, and upon the receipt of 2 cents the letter was forwarded.

EQUITABLE FIGHT NOW SAID TO BE CHAOTIC JUMBLE

Attorneys Engaged by the Warring Factions in Big Assurance Company Say Legislative Investigation Is All That Will Settle It.

HARRIMAN AND FRICK STILL ON HYDE'S TRAIL

Notwithstanding That the Directors Have Resigned, They Will Continue Efforts to Oust Vice-President From One-Man Control.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The situation in the Equitable Life Assurance Society is in almost helpless confusion. The great corporation lawyers retained by the various factions to bring order out of chaos have practically thrown up their hands. Several of them admitted tonight that they were helpless.

It is now the conviction of many of the men engaged in the struggle that the only hope of the Equitable lies in a legislative investigation conducted on lines that will show up every phase of the society's management and all the irregular methods of its officers, without fear or favor.

Robert T. Lincoln of Chicago has been mentioned as a new head to the society to rank both Alexander and Hyde. He now directs the destinies of the Pullman Car concern and receives a salary of $50,000 a year. No definite information concerning his possible selection can be obtained. All is rumor, but one of these rumors which seems to possess the elements of truth says Mr. Hyde favors Mr. Lincoln.

It was flatly announced today by one of Mr. Hyde's representatives that in the end he would select the chairman of the board, as anyone named by the Nominating Committee who was objectionable to him would be defeated by the votes he controls in the directorate.

Hyde's Surrender Nominal.

It was also declared on behalf of Mr. Hyde that his surrender of the control of the society in agreement with the resolution passed on Friday would be nominal rather than actual. It was stated that he would probably trustee his stock, but that the trusteeship would be surrounded with conditions and restrictions made by him.

While the details of the trusteeship have not yet been completed, it is declared that it would probably take the form of a Proxy Committee, which would name 28 directors to be elected as representatives of the policy holders.

This proxy will not be composed of directors of this city, but by outsiders, and it was said to be Mr. Hyde's purpose to get the biggest men in the country who would agree to serve on that committee. Mr. Hyde, of course, it was pointed out, would have the naming of the proxy committee.

Though E. H. Harriman and Henry C. Frick are now no longer directors of the Equitable, it was positively stated tonight that neither of the two men, particularly Mr. Harriman, would cease in his efforts to force James H. Hyde out of his one-man control of the society and its hundreds of millions of money, and also out of his office as first vice-president of the Equitable.

BRITISH SHIP SUNK; 23 SAILORS DROWN

Bark Afghanistan, Run Down in Fog by English Warship Cesar, Sinks With Crew.

LONDON, June 3.—During a fog off Dungeness early this morning, the British battleship Caesar collided with the British bark Afghanistan, which sank two minutes after the collision. It is feared that 23 men on board the bark were drowned.

At the time of the accident the channel fleet, steaming in two columns with the Caesar leading the second column, suddenly entered a fog bank and was unable to give the signal to slow down.

A second disaster was narrowly averted as the battleship Hannibal shortly afterward fouled another vessel and carried away her headgear.

The Alps Will Reopen.

The announcement that the Alps, one of the most famous of the World's Fair attractions, will open on June 10, under the management of Hannerty & Strine, will prove welcome to the stay-at-home St. Louisans, as it will provide a place of delightful entertainment during the summer.

The management has expressed itself emphatically as to the character of this resort, and pledges to do everything possible to keep up its standard, one of the best evidences of which is the engaging of an orchestra of 50 of the best musicians in St. Louis, under the direction of Mr. John Lund of New York, Buffalo and Saratoga. Mr. Lund was official Director of Music at the Pan-American Exhibition, and has a record of ten years as director of the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra and of the orchestra at the Grand Union Hotel, Saratoga. He will be remembered by St. Louisans as the director of the Orpheus Club of Buffalo, who participated in the great national saengerfest, held in the Liberal Arts Building in 1903.

Mr. Lund's vast fund of experience in providing music for Summer visitors is sufficient guarantee that the programs presented by the Alps Orchestra will be of a character calculated to delight listeners without descending to the much-abused rag time or going over the heads of the people by presenting heavy programs.

It is proposed to make the Alps the summer home of amusement and music in St. Louis. The management further contemplates giving local artists an opportunity to be heard. There is a wealth of good musical material in St. Louis, which has vegetated purely from a lack of enterprise on the part of local managers, and the Alps management hopes to be able to arrange to present the best of this material to its patrons. Concerts will be given from 7:30 to 11:30 every evening and in addition on Saturday and Sunday from 3:30 to 5:30.

PRISONER JUMPED OFF CAR, BROKE LEG

Convict on Way to the Penitentiary Made a Desperate Effort to Escape.

Ben Hastings, the prisoner who jumped from a train near Bonnett Mills, Mo., at 11 o'clock yesterday morning as he and 22 other prisoners were being taken to Jefferson City by Sheriff Patrick Clarke and several of his deputies to serve terms in the penitentiary, is today commencing his two-year sentence for attempting grand larceny.

Although the train was moving at the rate of 20 miles an hour, Hastings did not hesitate when the opportunity to escape came and it was not until he had broken his right ankle that he decided to give himself up, this decision being reached after he had started to swim the Missouri river.

Hastings was handcuffed on the train to Frank Mazzoni, another prisoner, and had been complaining all morning of the tightness of the steel cuffs, but the deputies would not "loosen up" any.

Just as the train left Bonnett Mills Hastings got the cuffs loose and through the window he went before anyone realized what was going on.

Sheriff Clarke gave the bell cord a jerk, and with five of his deputies made for the back door of the coach, all opening fire on the escaping prisoner as he fled down the track. Jumping from the train before it stopped, the officers began a chase across the fields, joined in by farmers and passengers from the train.

Once Hastings was confronted by a high barb-wire fence, but he leaped it and jumped into the Missouri River. A shot that whizzed close by convinced him that in his crippled condition further attempt at escape would be futile and he swam back to the shore and surrendered. During the chase Hastings right ankle was broken and his right leg bruised.

The rest of the trip to the capital was uneventful.

Hastings was arrested Aug. 17, 1904, at the Franklin Hotel, Sarah street and Westminster place, by Detective Cordell of Chief Desmond's staff, on suspicion of having written a letter to the Mermod & Jaccard Jewelry Co., purporting to come from Walker Hill, president of the American Exchange Bank, calling for the delivery of some diamonds to the latter's residence, 4056 Westminster place, just opposite the hotel. Cordell found Hastings when a "fake" package was about to be delivered at the Hill residence.

Hastings was found guilty of attempted grand larceny and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

ALICE ROOSEVELT WINS AT LATONI

President's Daughter Reported to Have Been Lucky in Choice of Horses at the Derby.

MANY PARTIES PLANNED

Cincinnati Entertainment Not Quite as Quiet an Affair as Was Originally Announced.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, June 3.—Rumor has it that Miss Alice Roosevelt won at the Latonia Derby today.

The amount is understood to have been small. Nevertheless, the friends of the President's daughter are congratulating her on the correctness of her judgment in horseflesh.

Never before was the Latonia Derby such a society event as today. Of course, Miss Roosevelt's presence explained it. Congressman Longworth's party, with Miss Roosevelt as the guest of honor, lunched before the races began at the club house in a private room decorated with the stars and stripes and a profusion of flowers.

The upper gallery in front of the dining room was roped off from the rest of the long veranda and given over to the exclusive use of Miss Roosevelt and her friends.

When the group finally appeared in the gallery they consented to pose for a number of amateur and professional photographers. Miss Roosevelt wore a skirt of lavender linen, an embroidered shirtwaist o white and a lavender hat with a sweepin plume of shaded brown. Her hair wa waved and done low. She was withou jewelry.

The President's daughter will atten church tomorrow morning. In the afternoon the Longworths plan to driv with her to the Pillars for luncheon. A few friends have been invited to din at the Longworth home in the evening.

Mrs. Ingalls, Mrs. Wallingford and Mis Harrison will give a dance Monday evening in Miss Roosevelt's honor. The function will take place at the Pillars, an will be preceded by a country dinner an a minstrel performance.

Tuesday night there will be a dinner a the home of Charles P. Taft, a brothe of Secretary of War Taft.

Little doubt is expressed among leader in Cincinnati society that Miss Roosevelt's engagement to Congressma Longworth will soon be announced.

ZIEGLER INQUIRY MAY BE BAD FOR STATE OFFICERS

Mine Officials, Accused of Responsibility for Explosion, Seek to Shift Blame to Inspectors Who Approved Conditions.

PENALTY A HEAVY ONE IF CONVICTIONS ENSUE

Violations of State Law Charged by Franklin County, Ill., Grand Jury Punishable by Large Fine for Each Alleged Offense.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 3.—If officials of the Ziegler coal mine, in which 51 men lost their lives in an explosion last April, violated the state mining laws, how happened it that conditions in the workings were approved by the state mine inspector?

The company's defense to the indictments returned against it by the Franklin County Grand Jury will consist, it is said, of an attempt to shift all responsibility upon the state officers who should have seen that the statutes were enforced.

As there have been no arrests as yet, the names of the individuals indicted and the accusations against them are still withheld from the public.

State officials who are conversant with the case say, however, that informations will be filed against all responsible persons connected with the company, the law holding all equally liable.

The law provides that no room shall be worked or entry driven more than 60 feet from an air current. Yet it was charged before the grand juy that some enties were driven and rooms worked as much as 350 feet from the air current in the Ziegler mine.

The law provides that cross-cuts shall be made not to exceed 60 feet apart and that no room beyond these cross-cuts shall be worked until the air is circulated there. The grand jurors were told that there was no pretension of observing this requirement.

Other flagrant violations of the statute are charged in the storing of powder in the mine and in the employment of an examiner unlicensed by the state.

"There are ten entries in the Ziegler mine," said one state officer, "and in practically every one of them there were violations of the law every day the mine was operated.

"A maximum fine of $500 is provided for each such offense. In addition to this there is a maximum fine of $500 for storing powder in a mine."

Sheriff's Deputies Enjoy Banquet.

The attache sof the Sheriff's office gave a banquet last Thursday evening that was participated in by a large number of Clark's deputies. Charles T. Jerabek, John F. Wade, John M. Tossick and other deputies furnished musical selections. Frank Malone, the "man that holds the coin and makes the ghost walk," read a poem of his own composition which dwelt on the virtues of each deputy. A round of serenades at the homes of those unable to attend the banquet wound up a pleasant evening.

CAPTAIN OF MISSOURI ACCEPTS SILVER BELL

State's Handsome Gift to Her Battleship Namesake Presented With Appropriate Ceremonies at Hampton Roads—Miss Julia Cabanne Does the Honors of the Occasion—Several Missourians Present.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., June 3.—With impressive ceremonies, and in the presence of an assemblage of handsomely gowned women and army and navy officers in full dress uniform, the handsome silver bell, the gift of the people of the State of Missouri, was presented to the battleship Missouri here this morning at 11:30 o'clock.

The bell, a heavy silver affair, beautifully engraved and decorated, has upon it this inscription:

"Presented to the Battleship Missouri by the People of Missouri in Hampton Roads, June 3, 1905."

The presentation was made by Miss Julia Cabanne of St. Louis, who was selected by the committee appointed by the Governor of Missouri, and an informal speech, appropriate to the occasion, was made by Saunders Norvell of St. Louis, chairman of the committee. Capt. C. W. Cowles, a brother-in-law of President Roosevelt, who is in command of the Missouri, gracefully accepted the gift on behalf of his ship, with a few well selected remarks.

This is the first instance in which a warship has been presented with a bell, it being the usual custom for the people of the state for which she is named to present her with a silver service.

The presentation of a ship's bell was first suggested by the Artists' Guild of St. Louis and met with the instant and hearty approval of the Navy Department and the ship's officers as being especially appropriate. The funds with which the bell was purchased were raised by popular subscription through the medium of the Post-Dispatch, the response to the movement constituting a strong indorsement of the plan. As Chairman Norvell of the presentation committee took occasion to point out in his presentation address, the bell was designed by Sculptor Robert Bringhurst of St. Louis, a member of the St. Louis Artists' Guild.

Immediately after the presentation ceremonies the entire party went down into the officers' cabin of the ship, where an informal reception was held before the luncheon, which was served in the officers' dining hall.

Besides the Missourians there were present nearly all of the officers of the fleet, Col. R. D. Potts, commandant at Fort Monroe, and a number of officers of the post, accompanied by their wives and invited guests from Norfolk, Hampton and Newport News.

Those who officially represented Missouri besides Mr. Norvell and Miss Cabanne, were Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Drake of Carthage, William K. Caffe of Carthage, Walter Hill, Leonard Matthews, Miss Matthews, Franklin L. Ridgely, Miss Ada Birge, Mrs. Saunders Norvell and Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Gordon of St. Louis.

The members of the Missouri party will remain here until Monday. Tonight they attended a ball given in their honor at the Chamberlin Hotel, and tomorrow they will spend the day visiting points of interest hereabouts and on the ships of the fleet.

ACQUITTED; HELD FOR MURDER

After Being Freed of Charge in Mexico Man Is Rearrested for Same Crime in Texas.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, Tex., June 3.—Jack Bendele killed Walter Blunt on a ranch in Mexico, and friends spirited the body of Blunt to Texas.

Bendele was acquitted in the Mexican courts because no inquest could be held over his victim, but when he came to the American side of the river today was arrested by the Texas Rangers, as an inquest had been held over Blunt's body by American officials.

In view of the complications and one acquittal of Bendele, an international mixup may result, since Bendele makes his home in Mexico.

DOG FOUND BABY IN BASKET.

Tiny Girl Left on Doorstep Discovered by Poodle.

A one-week-old girl baby was found in a basket in the alley at the rear of 4126 Harris avenue yesterday morning, but the finder did not take the child unto his heart and home and adopt it for his own. No, the finder was a dinky little white poodle dog.

The dog belongs to Henry Specht of the number given, and on making the necessary discovery it barked and whined at the door until Specht got up to see what had so disturbed the animal in the middle of the night. The dog led him to the basket and the baby.

The child was taken to St. Anne's Foundling Asylum.

Mr. O'Fallon Surprised.

Eugene P. O'Fallon of 4800 Hammett place was tendered a surprise Thursday evening at his home, on the eve of his departure on a two months' tour of Colorado. A beautiful traveling outfit was presented to Mr. O'Fallon, Harry B. Hawes making the presentation speech, and a bouquet of American Beauties was presented to his wife. Music was furnished by Park Commissioner Robert Aull, Walter F. Burke, Con P. Curran and Stephen A. Martin.

MISSOURIANS WILL BE IN TAFT PARTY

Representative DeArmond and Former Congressman Joy to Visit Philippines.

WILL STOP IN JAPAN

Rooms for Official Party Have Been Engaged on Steamship Sailing July 8.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Practically all arrangements have been completed for the visit of Secretary of War Taft and his distinguished party of guests to the Philippines this summer.

The party will sail on the Pacific Mail steamship Manchuria from San Francisco, July 8. According to present plans, it is probable that a special train will be run from Washington to San Francisco via Chicago, equipped with sleeping and dining cars sufficient to accommodate the party. This train will likely leave Washington on the afternoon or evening of June 30, and leave Chicago the night of July 1.

Rooms for the party have been reserved on the Manchuria and the voyage across the Pacific is expected to be exceptionally enjoyable owing to the special arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the government's guests. Missouri will be represented in the party by Congressman and Mrs. David A. De Armond and their daughter, Mrs. Clark, and former Congressman and Mrs. Charles F. Joy of St. Louis.

Tour to Include Cities.

Upon arrival in San Francisco the party will be entertained by the municipal authorities and preparations for their reception and entertainment in Manila and other important cities in the Philippines are being made along elaborate lines. Secretary Taft is very popular in Uncle Sam's Far Eastern possessions, whose affairs he administered prior to his appointment to the Secretaryship of War, and it is expected that his present visit to the Philippines will result in much benefit to the islands.

During the course of his visit to the Far East, Secretary of War Taft will stop at Tokio with the avowed purpose of making a study of the various governmental deparments, especially the War Department. No arrangements have been made for his presentation to the Mikado, and the Secretary of War has already stated that if the presentation does take place it will be purely unofficial and will have no significance as bearing upon international affairs.

The full list of guests has now been made out and members of the party are being advised of the detailed arrangements for the trip. The majority will probably meet in Washington and make the tour across the continent in a body. The revised list of guests who will compose the Secretary of War's party is as follows:

Many Officials in List.

The congressional contingent—Senator and Mrs. Dubois of Idaho; Senator Foster of Louisiana, Senator Long of Kansas, Senator and Mrs. Newlands of Nevada, Senator Patterson of Colorado, Senator and Mrs. Scott of West Virginia, Senator Warren of Wyoming, Congressmen Cochran of New York, Cooper of Wisconsin, Curtis of Kansas, De Armond and wife of Missouri, Driscoll of New York, Foss of Illinois, Gilbert of Indiana, Gillett of Massachusetts, Grovesnor and wife of Ohio, Hepburn and wife of Iowa, Hull and wife of Connecticut, Howard of Georgia, Jones and wife of Virginia, Landis of Indiana, Longworth of Ohio, Loud and wife of Michigan, McKinley of Illinois, McNary and wife of Massachusetts, Otjen of Wisconsin, Parsons and wife of New York, Payne and wife of New York, Scott of Kansas, Sherley of Kentucky, Smith and wife of Illinois and Wiley of Alabama.

The Secretary of War's official party—Hon. William H. Taft, secretary of War; Col. C. R. Edwards, chief of the Insular Bureau; Maj. Guy L. Edie, surgeon of army medical corps, as attending surgeon; Capt. J. K. Thompson, aide-de-camp to Secretary of War; Gen. T. H. Bliss, U. S. A.; Capt. William Kelly, United States Military Academy; James A. Leroy, Durango, Mex.; John F. Stevens, railroad expert; Fred W. Carpenter, secretary to Secretary of War; W. R. Pedigo, private secretary to Col. Edwards.

Unofficial guests—Miss Alice Roosevelt, Washington; Miss Boardman, Washington; Miss MacMillan, Washington; Mrs. Clark, daughter of Representative De Armond of Missouri; William S. Reyburn, Washington; Rogers K. Wetmore, Newport, R. I.; Arthur H. Woods, Groton, Mass.; Fred. E. Warren, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Hon. Emile Godchaux and wife, New Orleans; Hon. Charles F. Joy and wife, St. Louis; Hon. Lafe Young, Des Moines, Io.; J. G. Schmidlapp and son, Cincinnati; Miss Helen Patten, Washington; Stuyvesant Fish Jr., Washington; Mr. Stillman, son of James Stillman, New York; Col. William C. Church, Army and Navy Journal, and Burr McIntosh, New York City.

HOUSES STRIPPED OF PLUMBING

East St. Louis Police Recover Tons of Lead and Arrest Four Men.

Detectives Haggerty, Stocker and Yowell of East St. Louis yesterday recovered several thousand pounds of lead pipe, faucets and other plumbing fixtures which were identified as property taken from unoccupied East St. Louis houses.

The lead was found in the shop of Nathan Banks at 515 Converse avenue, and Banks and his three negro drivers—Jim Brock, John Washington (also known as John Shine and Harry Johnson—were arrested.

The discovery was the result of complaints by Police Clerk James Murphy and L. D. Abbott.

Murphy said that his house at 201 South Main street had been tenantless scarcely 24 hours when he discovered that all the plumbing had been removed.

Abbott made the same complaint about his houses at 1101 and 1105 College avenue.

Two old warrants against Washington for alleged theft from the Republic Iron and Steel Co. and the Southern Railroad were found at the police station and he will be prosecuted on these as well as the present charge.

Patrolman Is Suspended.

Frank Dolan, mounted district patrolman, was suspended from the force by Acting Chief of Police Gillaspy yesterday afternoon for being drunk. The patrolman had been ordered to report to the Acting Chief at 12 o'clock to explain why he had refused to pay some debts that it was claimed he owed. He staggered into the Chief's office four hours late and fell over a chair.

ROW IN ALTON MAY FASTEN LID DOWN

Saloonkeepers and Poolroom Proprietors Engaged in Kilkenny Cat Fight.

The lid will probably go on in Alton, not alone on Sundays, but every night during the week, and this not through the orders from the Governor or from Mayor Edmond Beall, but because of friction between the saloonists and the proprietors of the billiard and poolrooms.

At a secret meeting held Friday evening the saloon men, it is reported, passed a resolution to the effect that the Mayor be asked to close the pool and billiard rooms on Sunday.

The poolroom men say this resolution was passed by saloonists who have no pool tables in their rooms, hence the poolists will ask that the city ordinance be enforced which demands that all saloons be closed at 11 o'clock prompt each night. A meeting of the poolists will be held Monday night.

In the meantime the people in favor of local option are shaking hands with each other, because they do not need enter actively into the fight for the close of the saloons. The row between the saloonists and the poolists may result in the saloons being closed every night, and tight on Sundays.

RUG WINDOW DISPLAY.

Louis Goldman Invents Revolving Shaft Which Attracts Attention.

Realizing how necessary it was to have something new and attractive on display in show windows, Louis Goldman, a member of the firm of Goldman Bros., 1100 Olive street, has invented and patented a revolving rug display shaft.

It is composed of a large frame, the size of the rug, and at the top and bottom a rod about two feet in length is fastened to the ceiling and floor, taking the form of an axle.

The shaft is turned by a motor, and as it revolves it has an attractive appearance, with a green rug on one side and a red one on the other. Mr. Goldman said that since the display has been in the window the sale of rugs has doubled.

"SUNDAY LAW, RELIC OF INTOLERANCE"

Resolutions of Tower Grove Improvement Association Asks Repeal by Special Session.

The Tower Grove Improvement Association adopted resolutions Friday night at a meeting at Muth's Hall, condemning the enforcement of the Sunday law in St. Louis.

The committee appointed to draft the resolutions consisted of John Muth, Dr. G. H. M. Goehring and Nicholas Humm.

The resolutions assert that the Sunday law is a relic of intolerance and bigotry, and is not in accord with the spirit of the times. They condemn the enforcement of the law as to a particular class. The association favors the repeal of the Sunday law and asks the Governor to call a special session of the Legislature for that purpose.

DEDICATE ST. ANN'S FOUNDLING ASYLUM

Archbishop Presides at Ceremonies at New Institution at Union and Page.

THRONGS VIEW STRUCTURE

Modern Equipment Includes Rows of Pretty Little White Beds and Tiny Bath Tubs.

A continuance of Saturday's ceremonies of the dedication of St. Ann's Foundling Asylum will be held this morning at 9 o'clock in the temporary chapel which has been beautifully decorated for the occasion. Rev. Father Rogers of St. Louis University will be the celebrant. The ceremonies dedicating the new institution at Union and Page boulevards were performed by Archbishop Glennon in the chapel Saturday morning. All day Saturday throngs of people visited the new building and spent hours viewing the interior of the splendid structure which will be the home of hundreds of little children.

The foundation of the new institution was laid in 1900 and the superstructure has been in course of construction since June 15, 1904. Just inside the main entrance of the main hall are two great marble tablets, one "in memory of the Most Rev. Peter R. Kenrick, archbishop of St. Louis, and the other "the corner stone of this building was laid by Cardinal Satoli, assisted by the Most Rev. Archbishop J. J. Glennon, July 3, 1904."

Over 100 infants have been removed from the darkened quarters on Biddle street to the beautiful rooms of their new home.

The modern equipments of the new foundling home are perhaps more complete than any institution of its kind in the country. The first floor is confined to the reception parlors and the spacious playrooms for the larger children. Row after row of pretty little white beds for the larger children occupy the rooms on the south side of the second floor, and on the north side of this floor across the floor are dainty little toilet rooms with rows of little bathtubs for the children.

Donated Thirty Beds.

Thirty of the small white beds were donated by Miss Emily Maffitt and the Chambers family were the donors of furnishings for a large room for hospital use. Many persons have taken advantage of the opportunity to show charity to the little ones and lots of the costly furnishings have been donated by prominent St. Louis families.

The building is full of modern appliances. Telephones are provided in the various wings of the house for calls. No chance of fire exists in the building. The painted ceilings are iron, the walls are of tile, many of the floors are marble, and the winding staircases are made entirely of iron and steel.

One of the most beautiful gifts to the institution is that of Mrs. P. J. Toomey. In memory of her little daughter, Mary Wilhelmina Toomey, she has presented an artistic color statue group of "Christ's Agony in the Garden". A statue of St. Vincent de Paul, faicng the main entrance, has also been contributed. Two handsome davenports of leather and of velvet are the gifts of Mrs. John O'Brien. The huge elevator is the one that was exhibited at the World's Fair.

The crowning glory of the new hospital is its abundant quarters. Each of the three floors are furnished with a beautifully fitted bedroom, a dining room and a sitting room. In the large rooms as many as 50 patients may be accommodated.

K. C. S. OFFICIALS CHANGED.

President Edson Shakes Up Staff of His Railroad.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 3.—President J. A. Edson of the Kansas City Southern Railroad has announced the following changes in his official staff:

C. W. Coughlin to be general manager, a position abolished in 1902.

F. Mertsheimer, to succeed W. E. Symons as superintendent of motive power.

L. F. Jordan, to succeed A. R. Dillon as purchasing agent.

M. A. Calhoun, to succeed A J. Clark as chief clerk to the president. Other changes are said to be forthcoming. The position of general superintendent is to be abolished, but it is understood that E. T. Jarrett, who now holds the place, is to be given another appointment. There is talk to the effect that R. G. McCarty is to return to the road as auditor.

Graduation Honors Await Thirty Young Pupils of East St. Louis High School

Miss Louise Cross, Historian, Is Just Sixteen, and a Number of the Girls Have Already Passed Examination for Teachers' Certificates—Boy Athletes in Class.

The commencement exercises of the East St. Louis High School will be held Thursday evening, June 22, in the school auditorium when 30 young men and women will receive diplomas tied with the school colors, orange and blue, from President William Moody of the Board of Education.

Commencement will be followed by the annual alumni reunion and preceded by class night exercises, Friday evening, June 16.

The baccalaureate sermon will be given in the First Methodist Church by Rev. J. F. Harmon, pastor. Miss Louise Cross is class historian, Miss Ollie Ward class prophet, and Miss Adah Skinner, class poet.

Thomas W. Samuels, the young lecturer and debater, is president of the class. Charles Webb, also a member of the debating class, is a member of 1905.

Although the essays of the members of the class will not be read commencement night, the students are giving considerable attention to them. Edward L. Lalumier has selected the story of East St. Louis as his subject, and is making research to find facts about the Illinois town that have not been told before.

Miss Cross, the historian, is probably one of the youngest pupils to graduate from the East St. Louis High School. She entered school when she was 12, and was not 16 until May 31. She is a daughter of Rev. Cross of Venice, Ill.

A number of the girls of the class have already passed examination for teachers' certificates, among them Miss Ollie Ward, class prophet, and Miss Anna Montgomery.

The class contains a number of young men prominent in athletics: Louis Beasely, Edgar Campbell, Fred Gunn, Stephen Jarvis, Edward Lalumier, Eates Pershall and Bernard Tietze.

The class colors are orange and black, but in order to show special honor to the school colors to which class members have so often given victory, both in intellectual and athletic meets, the colors, both under the seal of the diploma and tied about it, will be orange and blue, those of the school.

Delos Haynes, a student of Washington University, will have charge of the stereopticon views that will be shown class night. Principal Charles L. Manners will have general charge of the various programs, and Prof. M. Edwin Johnson will direct the class song.

The full class roster is as follows:

Misses Julia Cannady, Louise Cross, Fannie Howard, Beulah Irons, Minnie Kappahahn, Bessie Miller, Anna Montgomery, Blanche Price, Pearl Pruett, Lizzie Rosenberger, Adah Skinner, Camille Stief, Henrietta Surber, Ollie Ward, Alice Winkler and Thomas Samuels, Louis Beasley, De Witt Billman, Edgar Campbell, Charles Davis, Fred Gunn, Stephen Jarvis, Percy Knoebel, Edward Lalumier, Estes Pershall, Willard Smith, Fred Stief, Claude Strother, Bernard Tietze and Charles Webb.

WEDDING A SECRET FOUR YEARS

Missouri Young People Keep the News of Marriage From Friends.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., June 3.—A wedding secret kept four years leaked out today when friends were apprised that "Miss Mayme Hubbard" of Carthage is in reality Mrs. H. Earl Sampson, having been married June 8, 1901, by the Rev. Mr. Creager at Galena, Kan.

The license was secured at Columbus, Kan., where the young people went to avoid publicity. They kept the secret to build a home before announcing their marriage.

In the meantime Mr. Sampson acted as city salesman for a Webb City commission house and his bride as stenographer and bookkeeper for a wholesale grocery in Carthage.

Going Abroad.

Mr. Chas. W. Welek of firm of Chas. F. Welek & Co., 616 Locust, importers, departs Tuesday, June 27, on Kronprinz Wilhelm, to visit London, Paris, Switzerland and Germany. Will buy silks, laces, dress trimmings, etc., remaining abroad until Sept. 1. Commissions on special orders given personal attention.

FEAR OF CHARIVARI HURRIES WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. John Mahon Are Housekeeping, but Friends Cannot Find Out Where.

Dread of a charivari that he had been told would follow his wedding, was the seemingly illogical reason given by John Mahon, a clerk in the street cleaning department, for disregarding the date set for his nuptials with Miss Mamie Houlahan, daughter of Police Sergeant Houlahan of the Central District, and stealing away to be married quietly by Father Dempsey of the Visitation Church, Friday at 3 p. m.

Mahon lives at 2253 Mary avenue and is a son of Frank Mahon, famed throughout the "Forty Acres" as the first occupant of Mahon's Castle, as the white building at Florissant and Mary avenues is still called, although Mahon has not occupied it for seven years.

Known to everyone in his own and his bride's neighborhood, Mahon numbers his acquaintances by the hundreds. While sitting on his home porch, Thursday night, he heard some friends in passing say that they were only waiting for his marriage night to give him a "hot tin pan serenade."

Mahon turned to a member of the family who started to joke with him and said, "No charivari for mine. Just you watch me fool those fellows."

When asked his plans, Mahon turned a deaf ear, and his family as well as that of his bride were wholly unprepared for the announcement of his marriage Friday evening, when he brought his bride to supper.

Mahon acknowledged that he had a house in readiness and that he and his bride would go immediately to housekeeping, but he has refused to tell even his mother its location.

Mahon's refusal to divulge the location of his new home has whetted the desire of the young men who had planned the charivari. They are determined to find it and several self-appointed sleuths have taken to dogging Mahon to his great disgust.

MULHALL NOT READY TO PAY.

Cattle Man Has Himself Served in Damage Suit.

Col. "Zach" Mulhall, general livestock agent for the Frisco railroad, against whom Ernest Morgan, the youth who was shot on the Pike June 18, 1904, filed suit in the Circuit Court for $20,000 May 25, appeared at the Sheriff's office yesterday afternoon and asked to see the petition of young Morgan, inasmuch as a copy had not been served on him.

Chief Deputy John Becker did not recognize the "Cattle King" as he entered the office, and when he asked what Col. Mulhall desired, the latter replied:

"I understand that you have a petition to serve on me in a $20,000 damage suit in which I am the defendant," telling Becker who he was.

"Oh, yes," said Becker, "do you wish to pay the $20,000 right now?" queried the Chief Deputy.

"No, just let me see the petition."

Mannion's Opens Today.

Mannion's Park opens today, with performances this afternoon and evening. The "garden on the bluffs" is one of the last to start the summer season on account of the repairs which have caused a delay. The stock features remain, including toboggan slide, figure eight, picnic grounds and miniature "Pike," in addition to the electric swing, a duplicate of that at the World's Fair. The principal novelty is the automatic base ball game, played by mannikins. They bat the ball against a wall, electricity being the motive power, and field and run bases much on the order of a regular diamond.

The vaudeville program will be headed by Myles and company in a farcical sketch, "The Race Tout's Dream." The other numbers promise to be interesting.

VAST VILLA FOR MILLIONAIRE BABY

All Front Rooms Are for Master John Nicholas Brown, Mamma Takes the Rear.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 3.—The $10,000,000 baby, otherwise young John Nicholas Brown, is having built what will probably prove the most luxurious villa at Newport, and as the vast stone structure contains only three guest chambers, it may be said to differ from all other Newport mansions in that it is designed more for the comfort of its owner than with any idea to entertainments and house parties.

Indeed, the entire front of the stately building is given up to the youngster, whose mother, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, sister of Mrs. George Vanderbilt and of Daniel Leroy Dresser, contents herself with a couple of rooms on the rear of the villa.

The building occupies the old Hugh T. Dickey place on Halidon hill, and commands a superb view of the city, harbor and bay; indeed, the Dickey estate has been so transformed and beautified since it was purchased for the youngest of American multimillionaires, two years ago, that it is difficult to recognize it.

Mt. Pleasant School Picnic.

Residents of Mount Pleasant School District have declared June 7 a holiday, and all business will close after the parade with which the annual picnic of the Mount Pleasant School, Nebraska Avenue and Neosho Street will begin, led by a band, the scholars and their elders will march to the Riverside Park picnic grounds.

Daily Life Brotherhood.

A meeting under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the Daily Life will be held in the Coliseum at 3:15 this afternoon. "The Use and Abuse of Talent" will be discussed by Rev. Harry L. Davenport, Elder John Beaird, J. Y. Mason and others.

MYSTERIOUS "SPY" ALARMS FRANCE

Man, Who Refused to Reveal His History, Is Given Heavy Sentence.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, June 3.—James Ellis, who says he is a British subject, and who was arrested nearly a year ago at Cherbourg on a charge of espionage, has at last been sentenced.

His punishment is five years' imprisonment, 10 years' exclusion from France, and a fine of $1000.

The case of Ellis has attracted a great deal of attention, and the mystery connected with him has never been cleared up.

At the magisterial inquiry he declared that his name was Ellis, that he was a Canadian born in Quebec, of French parents, 24 years ago, and was an agricultural engineer by profession.

He stated then that he had no fixed home, and absolutely refused to disclose his means of subsistence.

It has never been possible to find out his real name, and it is extremely doubtful whether he is a British subject at all. The British Consul is of the opinion that the man is a German.

When first arrested he refused to avail himself of the opportunity offered him of communicating with the British Embassy. Envelopes with German, Belgian and Swiss postmarks were found on him, as well as fragments of papers on which appeared to be markerd in pencil particulars of the fortifications near Brest.

When his photograph was first circulated it was recognized by persons in nearly every fortified town in France.

All the time he lay in prison at Brest and Toulon he maintained the strictest silence, and would give no information as to his identity or his previous movements, beyond the meager statements he made to the magistrate.

BLOOD

On account of its frightful hideousness, Blood Poisoning is commonly called the King of All Diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it the disease may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, Rheumatic Pains, Stiff or Swollen Joints, Eruptions or Copper Colored Spots on the Face or Body, little Ulcers in the Mouth or on the tongue, Sore Throat, Swollen Tonsils, Falling out of the Hair or Eyebrows, and finally a Leprous-like Decay of the Flesh and Bones. If you have any of these or similar symptoms, get BROWN'S BLOOD CURE immediately. This treatment is practically the result of life work. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom disappears, completely and forever. The blood, the tissues, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life. "MUSHED" MORE THAN 2000 MILES Longest Snowshoe Tramp Ever Taken in One Winter by Any Man in Alaska.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 3.—Bishop P. T. Rowe, who has charge of all the Episcopal church work in Alaska, and who is at present in Seattle, holds the record for the longest "mush" ever taken in one winter by any man in Alaska. The bishop made his record a year ago last winter, and all told he mushed a trifle more than 2000 miles.

Alaska is full of old sour doughs who think nothing of hiking out for a tramp across the snows of anything from 500 to 1000 miles, but until Bishop Rowe performed his feat, no one had had the hardihood to mush into a new country and keep going until by the time the sun of spring had thawed the trail he had covered a bit more than 2000 long miles.

And where other men take long tramps up in that frozen country in the hopes of getting gold, the bishop cheerfully underwent the hardships incident to his trip for the purpose of advancing the work of his church among the natives of Alaska. Sometimes he was alone and again he was accompanied by a companion, but no matter what the hardships were, he came through the winter in splendid condition, enjoyed himself thoroughly and the only misfortune he had was to freeze his fingers.

In discussing his work in Alaska Bishop Rowe said:

"I first landed in Seattle nine years ago. I purchased my outfit here and eventually mushed into the interior over the Chilkoot Pass. Steamer accommodations in those days—before the big strike had been made—were very poor, and in getting inside I was compelled to live the life of the sourest old sour dough in all that country.

"However, in the nine years that I have worked in Alaska we have founded 17 central mission stations, and in seven places we have hospitals and schools as well, among the natives. No, I never had any trouble with the natives but once, and then I thought for a time that the Stick Indians would get me sure. That was the first year I was in the North. Dick Emmons was with me. We found an Indian hunter who had lost his way. He was nearly starved. We took him to his own camp, and in doing so nearly lost our lives. The Indians wanted our outfit and we got away only by a good bluff with our rifles. Later some of those same Indians were hanged for killing white people, and it was only when the government sent a gunboat up there that they quieted down.

In discussing his long "mush," Bishop Rowe said:

"A year ago this past winter I froze in with my dog team and was on snowshoes all winter long, traveling a little more than 2000 miles. I started from Nuhluhkayet, away in the interior on the Yukon and about 100 miles from the Tanana. I crossed the Arctic Circle and a year ago last January I pulled into Fairbanks. There were about 400 people there then, although the city now has a population of 10,000. I established a mission, a chapel and a hospital, and left two nurses and four workers in charge.

"I took that tramp to get thoroughly acquainted with that new country and to ascertain the work the church had to do there. It was pretty cold, of course, and one time when my dog team had a mix-up with one belonging to a mail musher I froze my fingers, and while they put me out of business for a short time, they did not suffer permanent injury.

"I left Australia last September and this winter I have spent in the East. The people there are all greatly interested in Alaska, and I was surprised to find out how much they know of that country. I am now on my way to Sitka with my family. I will build a house there and direct the work of the church in Alaska from that city."

ACCUSED OF GETTING HIS NAME FORGED

Man With Bank Account Held for Participating in a Queer Swindle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 3.—One of the queerest cases of conspiracy to defraud a bank on a forged check was unfolded today before Magistrate Beaton, as a result of which August G. Derrickson, owner of a livery stable at 25 South Twentieth street; John Bauer, alias Jack Conway, alias Baltimore, and John H. Elliff were held in heavy bail for trial. Bauer is charged with forging a check for $350 on the Colonial Trust Co., Derrickson with conspiracy and forgery and Elliff with passing the forged check.

Detective Rutledge of the Pinkerton agency arrested Bauer in Baltimore on a warrant sworn out on information given by Elliff, who said Bauer asked him to cash the check. Bauer also swore out a warrant against Derrickson, who, he alleges, induced him to make out the check and divide the money with him.

At the hearing before the Magistrate the bank officers testified that on May 9 they were called up on the telephone by a person who said he was Derrickson and informed them that he had sent his man Elliff to the bank with a check for $250.

A description of Elliff was given and his dress indicated so minutely that when he presented himself he readily received the money. Derrickson's account, the bank officers testified, was much greater than the amount.

The following day Mr. Derrickson appeared at the bank and asked if a check for $200 had been received, and on being informed that no such check arrived, but that his check for $350 had been cashed the day before, he expressed surprise at such a check being out, and when it was shown to him pronounced it a forgery.

The matter was then put into the hands of Detective Rutledge, who arrested Elliff several days ago. Elliff, when taken before Magistrate Beaton, said he was asked by Bauer to go to the bank and get the money, as Derrickson had given him the check in payment for some horses. Elliff got the money after Bauer had telephoned in the name of Derrickson, and for his trouble Bauer paid him $1, he testified.

Bauer swore that Derrickson had him practice writing his (Derrickson's) name several days before he made out the check and that on May 6 Derrickson got him to make out the $350 check, of which he paid Derrickson $200 and kept the balance. Bauer testified the scheme was hatched when he appealed to Derrickson for a loan, and that at that time Derrickson told him it was easy to get money and he would show him how. They then set to work, he said, preparing to forge Derrickson's name.

The day the check was made out, Bauer swore, Mr. Derrickson was standing beside him and, looking it over, told him that that would do and he could get the money at the bank with it. Bauer, who is only 20 years old, declared the scheme was worked at the instigation of Derrickson and that Derrickson got some of the money. Magistrate Beaton held Derrickson in $2000 bail and Bauer in $1000, and both, failing to get bail, were taken to Moyamensing.

WOODMEN MEMORIAL SERVICES

East Side Camps Will Honor Departed Members.

Today being National Memorial Day for the Modern Woodmen of America, Laurel and Economy camps of East St. Louis will hold memorial services this afternoon at Mount Hope Cemetery.

The members will meet at 1 p. m., at Kirsch's Hall, Ninth street and Illinois avenue, where the parade will be formed, and will march up Illinois avenue to Collinsville avenue, to Broadway, to Main street, where special cars will be in waiting to convey them to Mount Hope Cemetery on the bluffs.

Rev. W. E. Archibald will deliver an appropriate address, and the officers of the lodge will deliver the ritual services of the order, after which the graves of departed members will be decorated.

MESSENGERS DREW COLOR LINE TAUT

Memphis Special Delivery Boys Resigned When Postmaster Appointed Negro.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 3.—The color line bobbed up at the postoffice when six of the special messenger boys quit because Postmaster Dutro appointed a negro boy to be messenger.

The boy, Walter Searcy, was appointed and put to work the evening before, and next morning six of the white messengers got together and, selecting Ervin Battle as spokesman, waited upon Mr. Dutro in his office. The postmaster was asked if the appointment of the negro boy was permanent, and replied that it was.

"Then we will quit," replied the spokesman, in the most emphatic manner.

"That's as you like," replied the postmaster, "if you do not care to work under present conditions, you have a perfect right to quit. Just turn in your books to the superintendent."

This was the end of the interview, and the boys marched out. They deposited their books with Superintendent Jones, and with their wheels and traps they left the office rather than work with the negro boy.

The boys who quit are from 12 to 15 years of age, and some of them have been employed for a long time. The office employs eight special messengers and six of them walked out. The positions pay well for boy's work. The boys get 8 cents for every letter they deliver, and in the course of a month they make a respectable sum. Last month one made [illegible].88 and another $51.45.

When asked last night about the appointment Mr. Dutro said that he did not anticipate trouble when the appointment was made.

"The government does not recognize any unions, and knows no color line," said he, "and I think the boys were very foolish for quitting under the circumstances. They did not have to associate with the colored boy, and their work was not with him. I have had the boy on my list for several weeks, and I needed a messenger and appointed him. He has been recommended to me, and is on of the best colored boys in the city. His father is a preacher of considerable standing and influence, and has always preached and talked good citizenship to his people."

PANTHER TEARS WOMAN CRUSHED AGAINST CAGE.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, June 3.—A panic followed the sudden extinction of the acetylene gas lights in a menagerie at Nogent-le-Roi, near Dreux, last night, and a young woman who was forced against a panther's cage was terribly mauled.

When the lights went out the wild beasts became excited, and roared furiously. The audience sat still for a moment, but the tension was too great, and there was a rush for the exit.

The cords which held the great tent in position were cut, and many men attempted to cut their way through the canvas.

In the scramble Mlle. Faurean became entangled in the network of ropes and was flung against the side of a cage containing a panther. The animal shot his paw between the bars, and drew her tightly to the cage, holding her there.

She fainted and was dragged from the infuriated animal in an unconscious condition by the keepers and removed to a hospital.

Having a Capital Stock of $1,200,000

Has Been Organized by a Number of Leading and Representative Business Men for the Purpose of Financing Propositions of the Highest Order in Banking, Manufacturing, Real Estate, Mining, Railroads, Telephones, Etc., After Making Careful and Critical Examination of the Same by Its Expert Engineers.

We Eliminate All Risk and Possibility of Failure by Carefully Investigating Propositions Ourselves Before Investing Our Own Money or the Funds of Our Customers. We Want Satisfied Clients Only. They Send Us More Business Than Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Newspaper Advertising.

Our Business Motto Is PRODUCERS and DIVIDEND Payers Only—No Prospects—No Speculation. We Eliminate Failures by So Doing and Satisfy All Our Customers Who Place Their Money With Us for Investment.

Through our Engineers, Audit and Appraisal Department we are in a position to put our exhaustive and aggressive investigation into effect in every section of the UNITED STATES, EUROPE, CANADA or MEXICO, and upon every variety of capitalized property.

THE UNITED STATES SECURITIES COMPANY Unhesitatingly Recommends and Indorses This Stock and You Will Make No Mistake by Buying All Your Means Will Permit at This Price.

We have on our books today more than one hundred propositions of various nature in stocks and bonds. All of them have been thoroughly investigated and they are all good. But there is one that stands out prominently "head and shoulders" above all the others, and it is this one to which we wish to call your attention. This stock today is actually worth 50c per share, and within 30 days will be selling for not less than 50c. When the new mill is erected for which this stock is being sold the output will be doubled, and the stock should then at once advance to par—$1.00 per share, and even far beyond par.

The UNITED STATES SECURITIES COMPANY secured an option on all the stock of this company, which it desires to sell, and we now offer for sale one-half of our option. The price is 25c per share. In a week from now we positively will not sell a share for less than 40c. There is no speculation in the purchase of this stock. They are now taking out more than $5000 worth of lead and zinc per week, and the supply of ore is, we might say, almost unlimited and it is of the highest grade. The company to which we refer is none other than The Chicago Lead & Zinc Mining Co. of Joplin, Mo. This company has a capital stock of $2,000,000. Par value, $1.00 per share.

The officers of this company are men of the highest standing, which is a sufficient guarantee that its affairs will be honestly managed and that the smallest stockholders will receive every consideration rendered to the largest. All will be justly treated.

This mining property is located one mile north of Webb City, Mo., in the heart of the great Joplin zinc and lead region, and is thickly surrounded on all sides by the best lead and zinc mines in the world—only 1500 feet from the great "Portland Mill" and 2500 feet from the famous "Yellow Dog Mine," which is the largest lead and zinc mill and mine in the world. This property is in the midst of the camp where more than $100,000,000 in mineral value has been produced and where some $18,000,000 to $20,000,000 is passing through the smelters annually. The Chicago Lead & Zinc Mining property has been developed at great expense, and is all equipped for mining and milling its ore, having a 400-ton mill per day equipped with the best machinery, including rock crushers, crushing rolls, cleaning jigs, screens, elevators, boilers, engines, air compresser and drills, and is now hoisting ore from its mines as fast as modern machinery can dump it into its bins.

The company has a solid sheet, or blanket, of rich zinc and lead ore 20 to 28 FEET THICK, UNDERLYING THE ENTIRE PROPERTY. Our engineers have carefully examined and inspected this property, testing all drillings and going down into the mine and viewing with their own eyes the solid walls of rich, valuable ore, continuous and extending every way you look in the great 20 to 28 feet faces of rock now uncovered. THEY ESTIMATE THE VALUE OF ORE IN THIS GROUND AT NOT LESS THAN FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

Read the following sworn testimonials, together with a report from an expert mining engineer who is not either in our employ nor the mining company:

EXTRACT FROM MR. MOORE'S REPORT:

I have made a careful examination of the Chicago Lead & Zinc Mining Company property, near Webb City, Mo. Briefly, the mine, or rather the property in question, is worthy of investigation. It lies in a good district, noted for having the largest known blanket vein. You can safely recommend it to any of your friends.

Yours truly, E. W. MOORE, M. E.

ENGINEER'S REPORT:

To All Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I have made a careful examination of the lead and zinc property of the Chicago Lead & Zinc Mining Company, inspecting all test drillings, mill, machinery and equipment, together with the sheet or blanket of ore formation in the mines, and find that a solid blanket of zinc and lead ore, 20 to 30 feet thick underlies the entire property of 13½ acres. I consider the property well worth from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

CHAS. A. MILLER, Expert Engineer,
United States Securities Company.

We get the following from an expert mining engineer:

The mill upon the property of the Chicago Lead & Zinc Mining Co. is of the latest construction and in first-class repair. The mine is capable of the reduction of 400 tons per day of 20 hours.

WORKINGS—The shaft, 200 feet in depth, is straight, well timbered and of ample dimensions to allow the hoisting of the above amount of ore per day. The drifts now being driven are uniform, as is the ore deposit, trackage cars, drills, and all underground equipment is ample for the satisfactory working of the property.

ORE SHOWINGS—The formation is of the regular sheet formation of the Center Valley, being sheets of zinc (blende) and lead (galena) lying between layers of chert (flint). The drifts going east and under the slight hill show evidence of increasing concentrate value, while the entire eastern portion of the mine looks about 4 to 5 per cent ore. This property has for its neighbors on the north the great Yellow Dog Mine, the greatest producer in the district; also the new plant and mine known as the Ground Floor, whose lines join this property. On the south and west by the Majestic, Providence, Conkey and Portland Mines, well known as profitable and consistent producers. A careful computation on cut ground of the characteristics shows a value of about $20,000 per month on production of 400 tons of ore per day. This computation is based upon a 4 per cent concentrate value and prices for four years, averaging about $45.00 per ton. The ground on this lease is about the same value, with an increasing tendency as the workings are extended eastward. No question exists as to the continuance of the ore body over the entire tract embraced in this lease. Difference in ore value must be expected, and this ground has been estimated as high as 5 to 7 per cent, but a 4 per cent net proposition is considered a profitable and extremely valuable property.

Respectfully submitted,
GEO. E. WHEATON, M. E., Joplin, Mo.

More fortunes have been made in mines by people of limited means by buying stock at the proper time and selling it at a big price than in any other enterprise or industry. If you can buy stock at 25c per share in a mine which is developed, honestly managed by responsible men, and known to have an inexhaustible supply of ore, with all necessary facilities for marketing the same, YOU CAN STAKE YOUR LIFE ON THE INVESTMENT BEING A GOOD ONE.

The banker, business or professional man, mechanic or employe who overlooks this opportunity, or who fails to see the real value and future possibilities of this stock will miss a valuable opportunity. $25.00 invested in the "Isabell Mine" in 1893 is now worth $1240; $25.00 invested in the "Jack Pot Mine" in 1894 is now worth $1500; $100.00 invested in the "Elkton Mine" in 60 days realized $5500; $100.00 invested in the "Green Consolidated" less than 10 years is worth $8700; $100.00 invested in the "United Verde" 12 years ago is now worth $30,000.

There are no bonds on this property nor its stock. The floating indebtedness is but a few hundred dollars, and a few hundred for machinery. About $20,000 has been advanced to the company, which is to be returned out of the production of the mine.

SOUTHPAW KILLIAN WINS FOR DETROIT

Browns Lose in an Exciting Game in Which Each Club Was at Times Ahead.

SCHAEFER MAKES HOMERUN

Sudhoff Pitched Well Until the Ninth, When He Made His Usual Balloon Ascension.

The Detroit Tigers defeated the Browns yesterday in the third game of the series by a score of 5 to 4. The game was an unusually exciting and close contest for supremacy, first one club and then the other holding the lead for a short period.

Sudhoff and Killian, Armour's star boxman, were the opposing pitchers. Killian is a southpaw and to this fact may be ascribed the Browns' defeat.

In the ninth inning, with two men on bases and at least one run in sight, Emil Frisk, who can never hit a left-hand pitcher, plunged the fans into the slough of despond by tapping easily out to O'Leary.

McAleer, who never misses a point to win his game, had refused to send in a left-handed batter in Sudhoff's place, but in the instance of Frisk it was to take a chance on Emil.

Sudhoff pitched another of his masterly games to the ninth, but this one ended as they usually do with this unfortunate pitcher in a balloon ascension.

The Browns were one run to the good when Detroit went in for their last inning. Sam Crawford lined out his third single and scampered to first. Coughlin was hit by Sudhoff and the ropes that held the pitcher to the earth began tugging to get away and make an ascension. O'Leary sacrificed both runners a bag by a pretty tap. Lowe, who has been threatened time and time again with extinction and Oslerism, then drove out a low line single, Crawford and Coughlin scoring.

In the eighth Schaefer landed on one of Sudhoff's benders for a home run, scoring Killian ahead of him.

The fielding features of the game were a great running catch by Koehler of Crawford's long drive and a similar effort on the part of Hickman from the bat of Jones.

Sudhoff struck out the head of the batting list in the sixth, Schaefer, Cooley and Hickman all succumbing to his raise ball. St. Louis scored in the seventh on bunts of Koehler and Jones, Wallace's sacrifice and Gleason's single. They added two more to their score in the eighth on Sudhoff's walk, Stone's bunt, Moran's force out of Stone, a steal and base on balls and Jones' long single to right.

Concordia Wins Again.

For the second time this season, the Concordia Seminary nine defeated the Triple A Club Saturday afternoon on the club's diamond in Forest Park. The score was 15 to 1. The Triple A fielded much better than on the former occasion, but the teamwork of the Concordias and the pitching of Druckenmueller proved the winning features. Concordia has won all of its 12 games this year and has proved to be probably the strongest amateur team around the city. The score:

DREYFUSS MAY QUIT NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pittsburger Is Mad and Admits He Is Thinking of Changing Affiliations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 3.—Barney Dreyfuss is so mad that it is no good bet that he will not apply for admission to the American League, now that he has been turned down by the National League board. It has been known for two years that the directors and stockholders of the Pittsburg Club have been in favor of the American League, but it was not until today that Dreyfuss admitted this.

Urged to reply to a rumor that he would likely leave the National League at the end of this season, Dreyfuss said: "Many of my best friends have urged me to get out of the National League. Stockholders and directors of the club who have their money invested have urged me to make such a move, but I do not know yet what will be done."

Dreyfuss laughed when asked how it came that the decision had gone against him at Boston. "If I had been sitting on my own case and had been presented with the testimony which those witnesses of McGraw handed in I would have been compelled to decide against myself," he said. "I have no kick against the members of that board."

BURKE WON GAME FOR HIS CARDINALS

New Player-Captain-Manager the Real Hero of the One-Run Game.

CINCINNATI WHITEWASHED

Arndt Pleases Local Crowd in His First Appearance in St. Louis Uniform.

One James Burke was the hero of a real baseball encounter that was fought on the grounds at Vandeventer avenue and Natural Bridge road yesterday afternoon, which the Cardinals won.

It was a great day for the friends and admirers of the doughty third-sacker for the Cardinals. They were out in numbers to witness a home team play under the command of one whose home has always been St. Louis. It was Burke's first appearance at home in the role of player-captain-manager, and the hyphenated title did not seem to at all interfere with his playing.

Mr. Burke was in the game at every angle. It was the captain-manager who scored the only run of the game, and that was the result of some daring base running. The official score shows that he was at bat twice and twice did he score stinging clean singles. Once he faced the pitcher and was caught with a pitched ball in the ribs. On the defensive, Burke's showing was equally brilliant. Eight chances came his way and he accepted them all without an error.

Arndt Does Good Work.

Arndt, a new-comer, also made his first appearance on the local grounds wearing a St. Louis uniform. Arndt covered second base, and while he did not have so many chances as did Burke, he handled everything that came his way neatly and at bat he bagged one of the five hits that the Cardinals got from Overall.

New life was infused into all of the members of Mr. Robison's team apparently, and Burke's warriors fought every foot of the way. Danny Shay was back at shortfield. He had five chances in the field and whizzed out a timely single, permitting Burke to score.

Jack Taylor pitched a splendid game. Though the Cincinnati's are credited with one more hit than the Cardinals, Taylor held them safe at every point, and they were never in danger. Taylor was steady as a rock, and issued no free transportation of any sort.

Cincinnati, too, played a good game. Overall pitched well, but the free pass he issued to Burke proved his undoing, as it developed into a tally, and that one run was sufficient.

Shay Cuts Off Run.

Cincinnati came near scoring only once, and that was in the fourth inning. In fact that was the only inning when they got a man so far as third base. In that inning Seymour, first up, caught one of Taylor's shoots and smashed it to right for a ripping single. Odwell sacrificed him to second. Barry then reached for a slow curve and caught it on the end of his bat. It went between third and short. Shay darted for the ball. It appeared impossible to get it. Seymour had already reached third before Shay got the sphere. It was impossible to get Barry at first, and Seymour was coached home. But Shay's perfect pass to the plate nailed him ten feet.

St. Louis had trouble in locating Overall's offerings, and were retired with great regularity until the seventh when Jimmy Burke won the game. First up, the captain was caught in the ribs by one of Overall's slow ones. Warner helped to the second sack by laying down a most acceptable sacrifice. Overall took his time about making the throw to Barry, and Bridwell walked down toward the box to see the toss well made. This left third bag unguarded, and Burke, quick to see the opening, made a dash for the third station. Bridwell saw the audacious movement, and it was a race between Burke, Bridwell and the ball. Burke won the race. At least Umpire Johnstone said so, even if it was disputed by Capt. Kelley and the entire Cincinnati team. Taylor was given a base on balls, and then Danny Shay made his only hit of the game and Burke did not have to make haste to score the run that proved the winner.

The crowd that witnessed the game was a large one. It filled the grandstand comfortably and the bleachers contained several thousand.

Today will witness two games between the same teams. The first game will be called at 2 o'clock. Thielman will officiate in the box in one of the games.

CLEVELAND DEFEATS CHICAGO--5 TO 4

Turner Knocked Senseless by Thrown Ball While on Second Base.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Cleveland today defeated the Chicago Americans, 5 to 4, in a hard fought game. In the second, Turner made a two-base hit. While leading off the base, Sullivan tried to catch him, the ball striking Turner behind the ear, knocking him senseless. Attendance 13,525. Score:

PRINCETON 18, YALE 2.

Baseball Game at New Haven Became Farce in Sixth Inning.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 3.—The colors of Old Eli were trailed in the dust to the disgust and surprise of 5000 Yale enthusiasts today at the opening of the championship contest with Princeton at baseball. The Yale team was not only defeated but disgraced. The lusty-lunged rooters and fair supporters, who had made their way to the field expecting to see a victory, were sadly disappointed, but kept up the cheers until the last man was out. The game was a farce from the sixth inning, when the Tigers opened a bombardment on Jackson, Yale's favorite and only hope as a twirler.

Score: Princeton 18, Yale 2.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

BOSTON BEAT THEN LOST TO NEW YORK

Clubs Split Even in Double-Header, With Errors Plentiful.

BOSTON, June 3.—Honors were even in the National League in the double-header today between Boston and New York, the local team winning the first game, 2 to 0, and the visitors the second, 8 to 3. In the first game Young held New York to three singles, while Boston bunched hits and New York contributed errors in the sixth and seventh, which gave Boston two runs. New York won the second game on a succession of battery and fielding errors in the third and fourth innings. The scores:

LIFELONG CURES BY A TRUE SPECIALIST.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Everyone who is accepted for treatment at my office receives courteous attention, having no incompetent, uncivil, hired doctors to unskillfully attend my patients, and every man who places himself under treatment gets the benefit of the efficiency that has marked my unequaled success in the past.

CHAS. A. DUFF, M. D.,
St. Louis' Only Pelvic Specialist.

Dr. Duff's Pelvic Methods are your greatest hope for a complete cure, if you are afflicted with either BLOOD POISON, SKIN DISEASES, SORES, ULCERS, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DECLINE, SEXUAL WEAKNESS, "LOST MANHOOD," PILES, FISTULA, RUPTURE or any affection of the Kidneys, Bladder and Prostate. You are wasting money and endangering your health by being treated with the antiquated methods of so-called specialists. My systems of treatment have established their reliability by permanently curing cases that have been unsuccessfully treated by dozens of other physicians.

A SURE CURE

is what I will give you beyond a doubt if your case is curable; if not, I will not accept your money and promise to do anything for you.

My Pelvic Methods have proven that they are safe, quick, reliable and superior to others by having restored many who had given up all hopes of ever being cured after having been treated for years, with but little benefit, by would-be specialists, and taking almost every remedy recommended for their troubles.

CURE OR NO CHARGE—I am the only specialist in St. Louis who Guarantees to Completely and Permanently Cure in a Specified Length of Time or Refund Money. Absolutely no charge unless satisfaction is given. All patients receive an instrument of writing insuring them of every dollar paid for services refunded in case of failure to completely cure so that the disease will never return and render entire satisfaction, and my well-known financial standing is sufficient evidence to anyone that I am entirely responsible for any guarantee that is not fulfilled.

THE ONLY DISEASES I TREAT, OF WHICH I HAVE CURED MANY A MAN AFTER HE THOUGHT HIMSELF INCURABLE, FROM THE FACT THAT OTHER SPECIALISTS HAD FAILED.

BLOOD POISON manifests itself by stages known as primary, secondary and tertiary. Any form of this destructive disease makes itself known by such evidences as ulcers of the mucous membrane in the mouth and throat, sores on any part of the body, aching of the bones, spots and all discolorations of the skin, which signify decay and premature death.

My treatment for blood poison is a specific serum composition that completely reorganizes the blood corpuscles, by which means every particle of poisonous matter is eliminated. Under my system of treatment it is utterly impossible for poison to remain in the blood, and purity and health are the results in every case. My specific serum treatment removes all manifestations of disease soon after beginning treatment, and by increasing the albuminous portion of the blood after removing the poison, a normal state of health is resumed.

STRICTURE is a very annoying and injurious disease, and is important because of its harmful effects upon the whole urinary system. I treat each case according to its requirements, first satisfying myself as to the exact condition by careful examination and inquiry. Stricture in any form is not difficult to cure, and by my method of irrigation and digestion I am able to cure the most severe cases. I do not cut or dilate, and when I have dismissed a case the canal is sound and healthy and perfectly natural.

VARICOCELE is simply veins filled with curdled or stagnant blood, the same as varicose veins occurring in any other part of the body. Every man afflicted with Varicocele of long standing knows that it has blighted his life and that he has made a great mistake in not having himself cured.

My method of curing Varicocele is by acupuncture, or, if home treatment, by Pasmine, a powerful combination which contracts the enlarged veins, thus expelling the clotted blood, so that circulation is resumed and Varicocele is no more. The nerves and male system are restored by the administration of a tonic and a complete cure is certain in every case.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS Often caused by male excesses, alcoholic liquors and severe sickness, the usual symptoms being highly colored urine with strong odor, chilly and feverish spells, wornout feeling, puffiness under eyes, and swellings. My long study and extensive practice in treating Kidney diseases insures success in all cases not past the curative stage. I determine the condition by analysis of urine, and many severe kidney troubles I have cured, after they had been given up by other doctors, gives me great confidence in my method.

NERVOUS DECLINE OR MALE WEAKNESS means weakness of the nerves and nerve centers, or general debility of the whole nervous and sexual systems. No man can be strong and manly if his nervous system is impaired, because the nerves propel the blood, and when the proper circulation to any organ ceases disease is bound to result.

In treating pelvic diseases, from which nearly all nervous disorders and male weakness originate, I have particular advantage over other physicians because I have thorough knowledge of the seat and causes of the disease, which is always necessary to insure success in treating any affliction. My thorough course of treatment immediately stops nervousness, exhausting dreams, strains, relieves backache, all effects of youthful folly, and by adding flesh and muscle the patient is restored to health, strength and complete sexual manhood.

PILES are small vascular tumors, and they have a most degrading influence on the general health. I cure Piles without cutting, nor do I use any ligature or carbolic acid injections, which treatment has ruined many. My treatment is safe and painless, causing no detention from business, and when you are dismissed by me you are cured for life.

RUPTURE is an escape of the bowel from the lower part of the abdominal cavity. Rupture sometimes results in strangulation and death. Trusses should not be continuously worn, as they only aggravate the trouble. I have a sure, safe method of curing Rupture. Besides being absolutely reliable, it is painless and harmless. It makes no difference how many times you have been treated, I can cure you and will guarantee entire satisfaction.

HYDROCELE results from injury and is sometimes difficult to distinguish from rupture or varicocele. The remedy I use for curing hydrocele completely obliterates the tumor at once, and by the use of an internal preparation for a few days not a sign or symptom of the disease ever reappears.

BLADDER TROUBLE—Usually Cystitis. By my modern method of illumination I medicate directly and scientifically, and I accomplish remarkably quick and permanent cures.

PROSTATIC ENLARGEMENT Results from inflammation, obstructs the canal, produces constipation. My special treatment removes the inflammation, reduces the enlargement, a normal condition is resumed and 90 per cent of the cases I treat are entirely cured.

Consultation Free, Confidential and Invited, both at office and by correspondence. Terms are always made to suit the convenience of anyone applying for treatment, and very reasonable charges. Do not treat elsewhere until you have investigated my methods and terms. Office hours during week: 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., Sundays 9 to 1.

COUNTRY CLUB BEATS TRIPLE A AT TENNIS

The Country Club Tennis Team put up one of the finest exhibitions of the great racket game that has been seen in St. Louis in many a day, when they defeated the Triple A experts yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Triple A, taking each of the five doubles matches played.

The players of the Triple A put up a good game, but adherence to their old and characteristic method of continually trying to place the ball was the main cause of their defeat.

The Country Club men made a point of returning every ball, not giving so much attention as to whether it was well placed or not, and as a consequence after the balls had been sent across the net three or four times the Triple A players would generally try to smash the ball or place it in an inaccessible corner and in a majority of times the ball would be out.

The match between Gleason and Montgomery, the doubles champions of the Triple A, and McKittrick and Jones of the Country Club, was the best game of the day. Gleason made some brilliant plays, which brought much applause from the gallery, which covered the veranda of the clubhouse and overflowed on the club lawn. Many of the spectators were disappointed when Ralph McKittrick did not appear to play with his old partner, Joe Wear. McKittrick played in the city golf championship at the Country Club yesterday afternoon and so Wear played with Harry Wallace.

The matches resulted as follows: West and Kaufman, County Club, defeated Fischel and Fischel, Triple A, 6-2, 6-4; Gamble and Arthur Wear, Country Club, defeated Sample and Macdonald, Triple A, 6-4, 7-5; Jim Wear and Brownlee, Country Club, defeated McPheeters and Smithers, Triple A, 2-6, 8-6, 7-5; Joe Wear and Wallace, Country Club, defeated Ham and Bergfeld, Triple A, 6-3, 6-4; McKittrick and Jones, Country Club, defeated Montgomery and Gleason, Triple A, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4.

32 QUALIFY FOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Preliminary Contests for City Tournament Held at Country Club.

The qualifying round for the city golf championship was played yesterday afternoon on the links of the Country Club. Of the 68 golfers entered, 32 qualified, 8 for the first flight and 8 for the second flight. These players will be paired off, and next week the tournament will be played in regular match play fashion.

There were some very good scores made in the qualifying round. Jesse Carleton of the Glen Echo won the cup for the best score, making the 18 holes in 79. Stewart Stickney made an 81, while his brother, Arthur, made an 85. Ralph McKittrick could not do better than 88, although he played some very brilliant golf at spasmodic intervals. Edward S. Moore, a recent importation from the East, and one of the new players at the Country Club, did unexpectedly well in making 88 in the qualifying round. Frank Canter, the star player of the Triple A, fell down in his usually clever game, owing to his unfamiliarity with the links, and came out with a 94.

The driving contest was won by Arthur Stickney, who sent the little gutta percha spheroid a good distance over 200 yards with excellent direction.

The members of the Country Club and their wives and daughters were out in full force, and each of the pairs that made the trip around the links had an enthusiastic gallery that followed them and applauded generously whenever a good play was made. After the golfers had all come in from their matches dinner was served on the club veranda, which was followed by a dance that lasted until midnight.

MISSOURI ATHLETIC CAPTURES THE POINT TROPHY IN A. A. A. MEET

The Profits From Contests at Forest Park Will Add $1000 to Vacation Playgrounds Fund—Ideal Conditions for Spectators.

Ideal conditions surrounded the annual track and field meet given Saturday afternoon by the Amateur Athletic Association for the benefit of the Vacation Playgrounds Association. The little clubhouse in Forest Park was gayly decorated with flags and bunting and the large gathering of society folk that filled all available space around the field formed a spectacle that was not the least interesting feature of the afternoon.

A bright sun tanned the athletes and warmed them up to their best efforts, while the brisk breeze that blew over the hill on which the clubhouse is situated made it pleasant for the spectators. The elevated portion of the grounds on the south, sheltered by trees, formed an ideal location for the benches that were arranged for those who witnessed the events.

The meet was a successful one in every way. The large number of entries and the fact that the contestants were the pick of the local athletes, made the events among the most interesting of any ever held at a similar meet. The meet was also remarkable from a financial standpoint, it being announced by the management that the proceeds to be contributed to the playgrounds funds amounted to $1000.

Missouri Athletic Club Wins.

All the events were handicaps, and, with one or two exceptions, so evenly handicapped, that the finishes were close and exciting. As was generally expected, the Missouri Athletic Club, with its large field of entries, captured the point trophy. The wearers of the cherry daimond earned a total of 45 points.

Probably the closest finish of the day was in the half-mile race. An unusually good field of starters left the mark when the gun was fired. The runners remained well bunched the entire distance and a blanket would have covered the first three men when the tape was broken. Weber Minges, with a handicap of 29 yards, finished first, all but exhausted. Drehman, with an equal handicap, was the second man, while Kiener, the scratch man, was close behind. The time was 2:03 4-5.

A unique feature of the program was the mile team race participated in by the M. A. C. and St. Louis University. Four men from each team started together, and the order of the finish was tabulated for his team, thus making the team scoring the lesser number of points the winner. This event also furnished the surprise of the meet in the person of J. H. Jenkins, a new miler recently annexed by the M. A. C. He and Joe Forshaw, who has been the favorite in all mile races in this city for the past year, were well ahead of the field when the stretch was reached. Jenkins led all the way and Forshaw had managed to keep close to him, but in the last 100 yards Jenkins unwound a sprint that soon left Forshaw yards in the rear. Weir finished third in the race, clinching the event for the M. A. C.

The absence of the Smith Academy team detracted somewhat from the interscholastic relay, but Central and Manual, the only entries, fought out a nice race. Central had the lead on the last relay, and Weber, the Central boy, beat Lewis, Manual's captain, to the tape, thus reversing the order of finish in the recent interscholastic field day relay race.

The jumps furnished some splendid contests, the pole-vault and broad jump being especially close. A. J. Bechistobell, with a handicap of 15 inches, won the latter event, his distance including handicap being 22 feet 3 inches. The pole vault went to Gwyne Evans, who cleared 10 feet 10 inches, vaulting from scratch.

The high jump was won by Mitchell, the young Central High School athlete. With his handicap of 4½ inches he cleared 72½ inches. Knapp also scored at that distance, but as his handicap was 5 inches, the first place went to Mitchell.

The officials of the meet were as follows: Referee, C. J. O'Brien; judges at finish, R. J. Leacock, George S. Rhodes, H. T. Ferriss, F. P. Crunden; field judges, Benn Fell, Theodoric R. Bland, C. W. Bassett; timers, Charles F. Stephens, Charles P. Senter, Martin Delaney; clerks of course, E. W. Lee, W. A. Murphy; scorers, Wallace McCargo, A. R. Skinker; starter, Tom Aitken; marshal, Jerome Karst; inspectors, F. W. Everhardt, Dr. J. L. Boogher, S. C. cabanne; announcer, Dick Baldwin.

GET-AWAY DAY AT ELM RIDGE TRACK.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 3.—Get-away day and a card of seven races attracted a large crowd at Elm Ridge today. Flora King, burdened with 120 pounds, captured the handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth, easily from Bondage. The distance was made in 1:45½, equaling the track record made by Bear Catcher last year. Weather clear, track fast. Summary.

First race, seven furlongs—Loretta M. 92 (J. McIntyre), first, Helgerson 105 (Larsen), second; Stumpton 106 (J. Hart), third. Time, 1:27¼.

Second race, five furlongs—Wasteful 104 (Buchanan), first; Delta 107 (Morrison), second; Reuben 107 (Larsen), third. Time, 1:01.

Third race, four and one-half furlongs—Draco 110 (Larsen), first; Polly Forest 115 (Morrison), second, Alma Gardia 115 (Stevens), third. Time, :55½.

Fourth race, mile and a sixteenth, handicap—Floral King 120 (Morrison), first; Bondage 100 (McIntyre), second; Glassful 106 (Larsen), third. Time, 1:45½.

Fifth race, mile and a quarter—Liddon 98 (McIntyre), first; Falernian 102 (Morris), second; Rian 101 (Wood), third. Time, 2:08¼.

Sixth race, six furlongs—Royal Legend 106 (Morrison), first; Cloverhampton 89 (Morris), second; Sid Silver 108 (Post), third. Time, 1:13¼.

SIX NEW RECORDS; CHICAGO VICTORS

President Harper Sees School Athletes Win From Best of Western Collegiates.

CHICAGO, June 3.—The intercollegiate conference track and field meet on Marshall Field today not only turned out a brilliant victory for Chicago, but set six new records for conference events and added several feet to the world's best previous discus throw.

Lightbody of Chicago was the star of the occasion. He won the one-mile event easily, incidentally lowering the conference record from 4:31 2-5 to 4:27. Then, without apparent exertion, he clipped 1 2-5 seconds from the half-mile record, making it in 1:57 2-5.

In the two-mile there was another sensation, F. A. Rowe, hotly and closely pursued by his schoolmate, Stone, and by Lyon of Chicago, winning out in 9:50. This time is 12 2-5 seconds faster than the previous record made by Kellogg of Michigan two years ago.

E. C. Glover of Purdue and R. V. Norris of Illinois lacked three-eighths of an inch of Dvorak's record-breaking performance in the pole vault, clearing the bar at 11 feet 9¾ inches.

J. C. Garrels of Michigan, besides doing yeoman duty on the track, threw the discus 140 feet 2⅝ inches, beating the previous world's record of 133 feet 6½ inches, held by Sheridan of the New York Athletic Club. Captain Friend of Chicago on his first attempt shattered the running broad jump record. When the tape showed that he had made a leap of 23 feet ¾ inches an attendant began digging up more turf to give the captain room according to his strength. Friend was a foot ahead of his runner-up, French of Michigan.

The day was somewhat warm, even for the spectators, but 5000 of them—the largest number ever gathered here to see a track meet braved the heat and applauded the contestants. Among the spectators was President Harper of the University of Chicago. He saw his school triumph with apparent satisfaction and showed no signs of ill-health. A rather stiff breeze from the southwest adds to the triumph of the fast time that was made on the track as the wind was almost squarely in the faces of the sprinters.

Chicago at all times had victory within her grasp and little surprise was evidenced when the final reckoning showed a score of 56 points compared with 38 for Michigan. Iowa and Purdue were tied for third place with 7 1-3 points each. Illinois and Wisconsin came next with 5 points; Missouri had 3; Nebraska 1 1-3 and Indiana and Minnesota 1 point each.

EXPLOSION COSTS MAN'S LIFE

Unknown Stranger Torn to Pieces on Street in Dixon, Ill.

DIXON, Ill., June 3.—A man yet unidentified, was blown to pieces by an explosion which shook the country for miles and damaged many houses. The explosion occurred in one of the principal streets and is supposed to have been an accidental discharge of nitro-glycerin which the victim is believed to have been carrying, with the intention of murdering some one or blowing open a safe.

GAME FINISH IN LATONIA DERBY

Miss Roosevelt Among Those Who Cheered Jockey Truebel for Victory on The Foreman.

CINCINNATI, June 3.—Before the largest crowd ever seen at the Latonia racetrack and in a finish that looked like a dead heat, The Foreman, a maiden colt from George Hendrie's stable, won the Latonia Derby from Hambright, wearing the colors of Talbot Bros. The first two finished 10 lengths in front of McClellan, the favorite. The feature of the race was Jockey Truebel's great ride on the winner.

There were five starters, Retort being withdrawn. The race was at a mile and a half and of a value of $5850.

Freebooter, representing the stable of Joseph Pugh, was the pacemaker and looked like a sure winnner for a mile and a quarter. Then he tired and Truebel, on The Foreman, who had been holding his mount in reserve, sent The Foreman to the front. The colt responded gamely, and appeared to be winning at the last eighth pole, when Hambright came from behind and challenged him for the prize. Then began an exciting struggle.

A few yards from the wire Truebel, with rare judgment, sat still on his mount, while Austin's efforts with the whip prevented him from making a strong finish and as a result the Foreman crossed the wire a scant nose to the good. For a few seconds the spectators were held spellbound until the numbers were hung out. When the Foreman was announced as the winner, a mighty cheer rent the air. The race was run over a fast track in 2:38 flat.

The attraction today outside of the derby was the presence of Miss Alice Roosevelt. She was the guest of Congressman Longworth of Cincinnati and society turned out en masse to greet her. She was among these who cheered the derby winner when he passed the clubhouse encircled in a floral wreath. Gov. Beckham of Kentucky and his staff, beside many other notables were in attendance.

First race, six furlongs—Rusk 103 (Treubel), first; Wainamoinen 103 (D. Austin), second; The Thrall 103 (Wishard), third. Time, 1:14¼. Buttinskie, Glad, Twenty Shot and Dunmore ran.

Second race, one mile—Fonsoluca 103 (Treubel), first; Florizel 102 (Foy), second; Omesica 93 (Noonan), third. Time, 1:42⅗. Bell, The Cat, Evelyn Kinney, Little Emmy and Scotch Thistle ran.

Third race, five furlongs—Lady Toddington 103 (D. Austin), first; Minnie Adams 103 (Tooman), second; Helena C 106 (Treubel), third. Time, 1:01. Lady Carol, Sister Frances, Foiitta and Limavady ran.

Fourth race, mile and one-half, the Latonia Derby—The Foreman 110 (Treubel), first; Hambright 119 (D. Austin), second; McClellan 117 (Nicolack), third. Time, 2:38. Full Sway and Freebooter ran.

Fifth race, four and one-half furlongs—Maplehurst 106 (Vanderbout), first; Agnolo 112 (Kunz), second; Hyperion II 112 (Treubel), third. Time, :55. Henry Hendricks, Prince Glenn, Mandator, Malabon and Stoessel ran.

Sixth race, seven furlongs—Copperfield 112 (Knight), first; Fleuron 101 (Austin), second; Two Penny 101 (Noonan), third. Time, 1:28⅘. Belletoone, Bill Knight, J. J. T., Gold Bell, Leota, Van Hope, Bernice, Mint Leaf, Ravensberry ran.

The newly-organized Reporters would like to arrange games with all in and out of town teams. Address R. McDerby, 4050 Cottage avenue.

BROADWAY STAKE FOR M'LAUGHLIN ENTRY

Oiseau, James Brady's $30,000 Colt, Scored Only as an Also Ran.

NEW YORK, June 3.—James McLaughlin's Oxford, with O'Neil up, today won the Broadway stake for 3-year-olds, one and one-sixteenth miles, at Gravesend. S. S. Brown's Agile, the Tennessee and Kentucky Derby winner, was second and James R. Keene's Von Tromp third. James Brady's Oiseau, for whom he paid $30,000 last year finished absolutely last, beaten off.

Ideal racing weather prevailed and a crowd of 20,000 persons were on hand and some excellent racing was seen. Summaries:

First race, about six furlongs—King Pepper 96 (J. Walsh), first; Old England 106 (Burns), second; Tommy Waddell 97 (Diggins), third. Time, 1:11 3-5. Cannonball, Phoebus, Saccharometer, Orloff, Montreson, Orfeo, Consideration, Toi San, Blessing's Last, Observer, Water Mirror, Fair Calypso, Julia M. and Emergency also ran.

EIGHT MEN OVER 70 IN WALKING MATCH

Contest Undertaken to Settle the Osler Age Theory Won by Contestant 81 Years Old.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., June 3.—To refute beyond further cavil the Osler age theory, eight men, all above 70, competed in a four-mile walking race today. H. M. Dumston, aged 81, won the match in 59 minutes. One minute and 40 seconds later the waving whiskers of Milo Rand, the infant of the bunch, hove in sight.

James Graham, 92 years old, was fourth in the race. He was ahead at first, but at Wilson avenue a corn of some 30 years' standing began to pain him and he was forced to let up in his stride.

The racers combined ages are something like 650 years, and their combined whiskers would stuff a leaping tick for the Barnum circus.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

JOCKEY AUBUCHON DISPLEASED CROWD

He Is Left at the Post in Two Races and Rides Badly in a Third.

Jockey Aubuchon ought to have heard some of the things said about him in the grandstand at the Fair Grounds yesterday. Master Aubuchon is a fashionable race rider. Yesterday he got left at the post on both Ala Russell and Gregor K., and failed to finish one, two, three on Joe Lesser in the seventh race. As the result of such an unusual streak of hard luck or incompetency the jockey came in for the worst dose of criticism ever heard against a race rider on a local racecourse.

Hisses and jeers greeted both Jockey Aubuchon and Starter Dade after the fourth race in which Aubuchon was left at the post on the favorite, Ala Russell. The filly seemed to be moving when the starter sprung the barrier, but she suddenly wheeled as the gate went up and failed to get away with the field. Hundreds made known their dissatisfaction in no uncertain terms when Aubuchon returned to the judges' stand with Ala Russell.

In the very next race Aubuchon got left at the post again with Gregor K.. The horse, Gregor K., wheeled and turned sideways as the starting gate was released. He was 10, 15 or 20 lengths out of the race when Aubuchon sent him after his field. It seemed folly to start the horse after the trio which were so far in front of him, but Aubuchon thought otherwise and the way Gregor K. made up his lost ground left no doubt as to what the result would have been had the horse succeeded in getting off on even terms with his field.

The jockey came in for more hisses and cat-calls from the spectators in the grand stand when he dismounted from Gregor K. The Cook won the race after an argument with High Chancellor.

Aubuchon escaped open censure from the stand for his ride on Joe Lesser in the seventh but the judges took up the matter and the owner of the horse was sent for by Judge Maginn. The presiding official was satisfied that the horse had not run to his best form. No ruling was handed out concerning the matter and nothing will be done until Mr. Maginn has had a chance to investigate every angle in connection with the race. The summaries:

FIRST RACE, six furlongs—Mamie Lynch 100 (L. Williams), first; Mrs. Annie 100 (J. Russell), second; Jucora 108 (Harris), third. Time, 1:16 1-5.

Pirelia, My Eleanor, Auroceiver, Lady Sellers, Voltage, Sweet Kitty Bellairs, Intrigue and Integrity also ran.

SECOND RACE, five furlongs—Macy Jr. 106 (McBride), first; Marpessa 94 (W. Walker), second; Tom McGrath 97 (W. Fischer), third. Time, 1:02 3-5.

Bitter Brown, Dr. McCarthy, Jack Kircheville and Pretty Nellie also ran.

THIRD RACE, six furlongs—Lady Vashti 101 (Sewell), first; Lucian 96 (Persinger), second; Howling Dervish 102 (Schaffner), third. Time, 1:14 2-5.

Theodore, Sea Voyage, Andrew Mack, St. Flour and Van Ness also ran.

FOURTH RACE, $3155 net, six furlongs—Dr. Gardner 118 (McBride), first; Holscher 113 (Schaffner), second; Watchful 108 (W. Watson), third. Time, 1:15 3-5.

Loyal Front, Ala Russell, Fargo, Oze and Horseradish also ran.

FIFTH RACE, one mile—The Cook 95 (Seder), first; High Chancellor 114 (Dominick), second; Gregor K. 114 (Aubuchon), third. Time, 1:41.

Caronal also ran.

SIXTH RACE, one mile and three-sixteenths—Little Scout 117 (Dominick), first; Uncle Charley 98 (Aubuchon), second; Jack Young 100 (Schaffner), third. Time, 2:01 3-5.

Ed Sheridan also ran.

Seventh race, mile and three-sixteenths—Red Leaf 97 (Seder), first; Docile 98 (Sewell), second; Bavarian 87 (W. Walker), third. Time, 1:48.

Joe Lesser, Tartan, Broodler, Sincerity Belle and Miss Betty also ran.

SAFE OPENED BY BURGLARS.

Crooks Use "Come-Along" and Get $60 in Cash From Second Street Office.

A safe in the office of the Proctor-Connell Fish Co., 510 North Second street, was opened by burglars sometime between 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the thieves using a "come-along," and pulling out the combination. They got $60 in cash.

It is said that a duplicate key was used in opening the office door, which had been locked at the close of business at 5 o'clock as the night watchman who came on duty at 7 o'clock found the door locked and the safe opened and rifled.

CLEVER SPARRING IN W. A. A. CONTEST

William Gruppe Surprises Spectators by Defeating Joe Leydon at 135 Pounds.

Winners of Western Amateur Athletic Union Boxing Championships.

Class.	Name.	Club.
105-pound,	R. E. Gresham,	Superior A. C.
115-pound,	Oliver Kirk,	Missouri A. C.
125-pound,	Arthur Williams,	Missouri A.C.
135-pound,	W. Gruppe,	S. Broadway A. C.
145-pound,	Fred Hussman,	Missouri A. C.
158-pound,	Rudolph Krieder,	unattached.
Heavyweight,	John Sauter,	unattached.

The finals in the first Western Amateur Athletic boxing championships were decided last night at the Missouri Athletic Club.

The feature of the finals was the defeat of Joe Leydon of the M. A. C. by William Gruppe of the South Broadway Athletic Club. Leydon has been deemed invincible in the 135-pound class, but Gruppe easily bested him in last night's tournament. Gruppe is about 6 feet 2 inches in height and has a reach in proportion. He is a clever sparer and Leydon found it almost impossible to reach him during the first two rounds.

In the third Leydon, on advice of his seconds, bored in and fought Gruppe viciously at close quarters. For two minutes it was all Leydon, but then Gruppe closed in himself and adopted the infighting tactics and succeeded in besting Leydon at his own game.

The Arthur Williams-Charles Stevens contest at 125 pounds resulted in a splendid bout. The boys were evenly matched and fought each other from the tap of the gong. Williams was the sturdier built than his shifty opponent, but he found it hard to score on account of Stevens' clever foot work. The judges were unable to agree on a winner and Referee Sharpe gave the decision to Williams.

In the 105-pound class, R. E. Gresham showed himself to be a clever boxer. He worked a left upper-cut on Harry Carter with great success and his left jab usually found a lodging place on the latter's nose.

Oliver Kirk, the Olympic champion, won easily from William Hogan. The latter, although beaten from the time both men shook hands, gamely kept after his more skilled antagonist and gave back blow for blow. Sharpe stopped the bout in the third round to save Hogan from punishment.

The fiercest bout of the evening was the encounter at 145 pounds between Fred Hussman of the M. A. C. and George Gruppe of the South Broadway Athletic Club. Beaten to a standstill in the first two rounds, Gruppe came back in the third and fought Hussman about the ring. Using straight rights and lefts he soon had Hussman tired, but the beating Gruppe had received in the first two rounds began to affect him and he slowed up when the decision was almost in his hands. A short uppercut to the stomach almost sent him to the floor when the bell rang.

John Sauter, who bested William Michaels in the heavyweight class Friday night, was unable to go on in the 158-pound finals. Sauter has been suffering from a boil on his left hand the past week and entered the tournament against the orders of his physician. Friday night he fell during the Michaels bout and burst the boil. Blood poisoning set in and he was unable to compete last night.

The judges of the finals were Joe Stewart and John C. Meyers, the bouts being refereed by Harry Sharpe.

CLUBS FIGHT ON A BOAT.

President of Organization Voted the Most Popular Beaten by Rivals.

Members of four social clubs, the Panama, Enterprise, Central and Rosebud Clubs, engaged in a free-for-all fight on the steamer City of Providence last night. The clubs had given an excursion and as a mode of entertainment had a voting contest to see which was the most popular. The Enterprise Club won. This caused jealousy and just as the boat was coming to anchor at the foot of Olive street a fight was started and Harry Tieman, president of the successful club, was painfully beaten. Several shots were fired, but there were no injuries other than black eyes and minor contusions.

People's United States Bank

The following is the announcement by the Secretary of State of Missouri in regard to this Bank—

To the Board of Directors of the People's United States Bank. ST. LOUIS, June 2, 1905.

Gentlemen—The steps you have taken in the reorganization of the Directory of the People's United States Bank by the election of Mr. Theodore F. Meyer and Mr. James F. Coyle as members of the Board gives me assurance that the Directory of this bank will be composed of men who will be a guarantee for the safe conduct of its business, and are satisfactory to this Department. Your agreement to conform to all of the requirements of the Department justifies me in withdrawing any objection to the Bank's operation at this time, and I am glad to state that the bank is now in operation for the conduct of all of its business and that I have full confidence that the suggestions of the Department will be fully complied with.

JOHN E. SWANGER, Secretary of State.

Announcement by the President of the Bank

To the Public— ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 3, 1905.

I wish to thank the many friends of our bank, whether known or unknown to me, for their loyalty, courage and confidence, expressed in many ways during the embarrassing incidents of the past week. There has not been the slightest indication of a "run", or of any fear or want of confidence among even the humblest of our depositors. The expressions of encouragement which have been received give us assurance that our efforts to establish this new enterprise have met with cordial approval in a great many quarters of the United States. The extraordinary scrutiny to which all of our affairs have been subjected have resulted in demonstrating the absolute soundness of our assets, and the statement finally made by the Secretary of State is the best evidence that our management intends not merely to comply with the law but to go far beyond that requirement in endeavoring to secure the most conservative management. My efforts to build up the most complete publishing plant in the world, here in St. Louis, employing nearly 1000 people, and to establish a bank here, which has attracted millions of dollars to St. Louis for investment, should be sufficient guarantees to all impartial minds, of my conservative purposes, and of my intention to stand by the project to which my friends throughout the United States have invested.

The People's United States Bank is still open for business and solicits accounts by mail, with the confident assurance that it is storm-proof, attack-proof, malice-proof and always open to any one's fair investigation. Further than this, we shall hold no post mortems over the recent unpleasantness, and its chief utility has been to enable us to distinguish our real friends from the spurious and to demonstrate our ability to meet every emergency, and to do even more than the law demands to guarantee the safety of every interest entrusted to our charge.

The fact that the bank's receipts today have been the heaviest for a month past is an additional demonstration of the confidence of our patrons.

What we want in St. Louis is 1,000,000 population, more business, greater charity and tolerance to new ideas, to make the greatest city in the world. We shall work overtime to do our little part toward those results.

E. G. LEWIS, President,
PEOPLE'S UNITED STATES BANK.

$50,000 JOKE ON HOUSE OF DELEGATES

Passed Emergency Garbage Bill Which Had Slumbered Beyond Its Usefulness.

NOBODY WANTS THE MONEY

Amount Included in the General Appropriation, but Delegates Didn't Know or Care.

It was discovered Saturday that the reorganized House of Delegates signalized its first session by playing a $50,000 joke on itself.

The House Friday evening, in a mood of unexampled liberality, appropriated $50,000 which nobody needs an dnobody wants.

The reorganized Ways and Means Committee, composed of Nash, Meehan, Williams, Gevers and Simmons, found in the committee pigeonhole a bill providing for an appropriation of $50,000 for the temporary collection and disposition of garbage, refuse and dead animals, with an emergency clause attached. The committeemen thought that was a good cause and as the emergency clause suggested urgency, they decided to push the thing along.

Accordingly they reported it favorably at Friday evening's meeting. The members were feeling prosperous and beyond taking languid notice that the amount appropriated by the bill was only $50,000, treated it with polite indifference. Nobody asked a question about it and without discussion it was placed on passage.

There were 24 members present and between yawns they all voted for the bill.

To be sure, the general appropriation bill, carrying an item of $276,000 for these purposes, had been passed just a week or so ago, but this was only $50,000 more and no doubt it was needed.

The explanations of the action offered by the wise ones who were studying the form of the new House were multiple. Many different kinds of significance were read into it Saturday.

It was found that the action was significant of nothing except a readiness to appropriate $50,000 for a purpose which did not exist.

The bill originally was introduced before the general appropriation bill was introduced, in the expectation that there would be delay in the passage of the latter. In that event the $50,000 appropriated by the temporary bill was to be deducted from the gross appropriation in the general bill. The temporary bill was passed by the Council. While it slumbered in a House pigeonhole the general bill got by it and was passed, rendering the passage of the temporary bill unnecessary. Comptroller Player sent a notice to the chairman of the old Ways and Means Committee that the temporary bill was no longer necessary. The House reorganized and the new committee found the bill in the pigeonhole. The letter from Mr. Player was not noticed. The bill was reported favorably and passed.

The members said Saturday they didn't know the passage of the bill was unnecessary.

Besides, it was only $50,000.

The discovery having been made that the $50,000 is not needed nor wanted, the House will reconsider the passage of the bill at the next meeting.

WILL DOMINICANS "BE GOOD?"

American Warships to Be Withdrawn From Waters of Black Republic, on Trial.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3.—All but one of the nine warships that have been patrolling Santo Domingan waters to preserve order and prevent the overthrow of the Morales Government will be withdrawn in accordance with a decision reached today.

United States Minister Dawson has reported that there is no longer any serious opposition to the American supervision of the island's finances, and that the presence of so many warships, which is construed by some of the natives as a needless threat, is likely to produce friction.

On his recommendation Santo Domingo will be left pretty well to itself for awhile, to see if it will "be good."

JILTS GIRL--WANTS HIS PRESENTS BACK

He Says They Are Loans, but She Asserts They Are Engagement Tokens.

The Jewels in the Case.

One solitaire diamond engagement ring.
One ring, with opal surrounded by diamonds.
One diamond brooch.
One gold watch.
One gold-handled umbrella.
Hand-painted sugar and cream set.
Silver toilet set.
Gold chain and locket.
Jeweled hat pins.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 3.—Harry Bullard, a watchmaker, has brought suit to recover jewelry valued at $300 from Miss Irene Perkins, the articles being an engagement ring, a diamond brooch and a ring set with an opal and diamonds. Other articles bring the value of what Miss Perkins holds up to $500.

He says he only loaned the jewels to Miss Perkins, but she declares he asked her to be his wife, and gave them as presents for her to keep. Mr. Bullard and his wife live on Troost avenue. Miss Perkins is employed as an inspector for the Columbian Optical Co., in the New Ridge building.

"Mr. Bullard gave me those jewels to keep, and I intend to keep them," said Miss Perkins. "I met him in July, 1902, at the Vickers Hotel. I was visiting a young woman friend of mine, and she introduced me to him. He began paying attentions to me at once, and called often at our home. We were engaged to be married, and he left here saying he would return and marry me; but when he came back from the West I learned he had married a young woman in Salt Lake City."

Miss Perkins says when she met Bullard he was introduced to her by the name of Harry Gee.

"After he had been coming to see me for a few months he told me his real name was Bullard," said Miss Perkins. "He said he had been in the jewelry business in the East and had gone into bankruptcy. He also told me he had a wife back East and was going to get a divorce, when he would marry me. He gave me a diamond ring as an engagement pledge, and had it made to fit my engagement finger, and here it is—you can see for yourself. At the same time he gave this ring with the opal and diamonds, and a beautiful brooch set with diamonds. He left here in February, 1903, saying he would soon return and marry me. After he came back I did not see him for a long time, and when I met him on the street and asked why he had not been to see me, he evaded my question. Two months later I learned he had married a girl in Salt Lake City. He has never spoken to me about that and has offered no excuse for the awful treatment he gave me.

"Had he come to me like a man and asked for his jewelry back, I might have been foolish enough to return it. But instead of that he sent a lawyer to see me two weeks ago, and the attorney demanded the presents. I was so surprised I didn't know what to do at first, but after thinking over the matter and the treatment I have received, I believe it only fair for me to keep what has been given to me, and I will fight this case to the end."

OBJECT TO ANTI-CHINESE LAW

Boston Merchants Object to Indignities Put on Influential Orientals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., June 3.—A strong protest has been made to President Roosevelt by the cotton manufacturers of this section over the Chinese exclusion laws for heaping indignities on such influential Orientals as the members of the King's family of four, who arrived Thursday on the Ivernia. That they should be obliged to be photographed and to furnish bonds guaranteeing their departure from this country within twenty days, the cotton merchants feel, is an outrage, especially as the treatment is likely to be highly detrimental to the trade between this country and China.

NO CLEW TO YOUNG MAN MISSING ALMOST A YEAR.

JOHN RIELEY.

The friends of John Rieley of 720 O'Fallon street, who has been missing from home almost a year, have come across no clew to his whereabouts.

Rieley is 25 years old, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, and weighs about 140 pounds. He has light complexion and blue eyes. He left home at 12 o'clock on the night of July 16, 1904, and has not been seen since.

A reward of $25 has been offered by Mrs. Mary Rieley to anyone locating her son.

HOCH TO BE HANGED JUNE 23.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 3.—Johann Hoch was today sentenced to hang June 23. Judge Kersten asked him: "Have you anything to say?" The prisoner replied: "If you think I am guilty I am willing to die tonight, but I am innocent of murder." Hoch was found guilty of poisoning Marie Welcker-Hoch, whom he married Dec. 12, 1904.

WOULD NOT DESTROY, BUT CLEANSE UNIONS

President Post of National Citizens' Industrial Association Tells Society's Plans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., June 3.—"So long as organizations of capital exist, organizations of labor should exist, too," is the opinion of C. W. Post, newly elected president of the National Citizens' Industrial Association, just back from the organization's Chicago meeting.

"The unions must be cleansed, however," he continued, "and the bad men driven from power, before the average labor union can win its way back to the people's esteem. I am opposed to the average union, as conducted today.

"Our association is for the open shop, no restrictions as to the use of tools, machinery or material except such as are dictated by requirements of safety, no limitation on output, no restriction on the number of apprentices, no boycott, no sympathetic strike, no compulsory use of the union label.

"It is most unfortunate that the present union spirit seems to turn otherwise peaceable men into demons."

Rowing Club's Anniversary.

The thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the St. Louis Rowing Club will be celebrated at the foot of Chouteau avenue with a fish fry this afternoon, given for the members of the club, their wives and sweethearts. There will be singing, dancing and exhibitions of life-saving by the club members beside several boat races.

FIREMEN RESCUE HORSE FROM DEATH

Hurriedly Constructed Block and Tackle Used to Pull Animal From Brink of Chasm.

A horse owned by James H. Donohue climbed over the iron railing along the west side of the City Hall in East St. Louis yesterday afternoon, and but for the timely arrival of several firemen would have plunged to death into the passageway six feet below which extends along the side of the building.

The horse was hitched to a buggy and had been tied to the railing in the alley between Fire Department No. 1 and the City Hall. In some manner the horse reared and in falling both front feet reached over the railing, and in the struggle to recover the horse's body slipped over the fence until the horse was hanging head downward into the passageway.

Philip Thomas, a fireman, grabbed a large rope and called to other firemen, who ran and assisted in tying the rope around the body of the horse. An improvised block and tackle was made and the struggling horse lifted to the level. A large crowd had gathered and onlookers unharnessed the horse and found that no harm had been done except that the buggy shafts were broken.

Driver Falls From Wagon.

James Higgins, a teamster living at 611 Hogan street, St. Louis, fell from a wagon between East St. Louis and Brooklyn, Ill., yesterday afternoon and broke both legs. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where his condition is considered critical.

Fruit Growers Special Train To Texas.

Will leave St. Louis over Cotton Belt Route, Tuesday, June 20th, at 8:00 p. m., for a trip through the wonderful fruit and truck district of Eastern Texas.

The party will be headed by many eminent horticulturists, from the states of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin and Kansas. Object will be to study fruit and truck conditions in the East Texas country at the height of the picking and shipping season.

This will be the biggest event of the kind ever undertaken—an invasion of the Texas fruit and truck country by Northern growers, who will be roundly entertained.

Reduced rates from St. Louis and from points on all railroads with connections for St. Louis. Special train will run on fast schedule and carry standard and tourist sleepers and chair cars. Everybody interested in fruit or truck growing will be welcomed. Make your arrangements at once and don't miss the great trip. Call or write for itinerary, cost of trip and other particulars.

QUAKER CITY RING YIELDS ONE MORE FORTRESS TO FOE

Removal of Civil Service Secretary Places Selection of City's Employes Entirely Under Control of Mayor John Weaver.

MUNICIPAL GANG'S FALL MAY CRUSH STATE GANG

Senator Penrose Apprehensive Lest Entire Pennsylvania Machine May Be Demolished—Reform Campaign Widens.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—As relentlessly as the passage of time Mayor John Weaver is terminating the official existence of the last survivors of the corrupt Philadelphia machine.

Secretary Rolla M. Dance of the civil service board resigned today. The secretary retired at Mayor Weaver's order. When the executive issued his first command for the resignation of machine officials, the latter declined to obey.

An attempt was made to fight the mayor in the courts. The hopelessness of the struggle was soon made clear to them and they yielded. Secretary Dance resigned without the shadow of resistance.

The spirit of the organization is broken.

In little more than a fortnight Mr. Weaver has demolished the most perfect municipal political machine in the world.

What the politicians most fear is that the Philadelphia campaign may also prove the undoing of the state organization— an organization which has ejoyed an uninterrupted period of prosperity since the days of Cameron.

The removal of Secretary Dance gives Mayor Weaver full control of the selection of city employes and will impose upon every candidate for a municipal position the necessity of passing a creditable examination. That these examinations have been farcical in the past to a degree bordering on the ridiculous the mayor is plain in expressing his opinion.

In addition to what Mr. Weaver has done thus far it is rumored that still more radical reforms are contemplated. Here are a few of them:

A reduction in trolley fares from 5 to 3 cents.

The dismissal of Chief Sutliff of the street cleaning department.

War to the death against John M. Mack of asphalt fame.

The members of the ring, at first disposed to fight to the last ditch—confident, indeed of ultimate victory—are completely disorganized. There is no further talk of resistance to the mayor, who asserts that the last organization office holder will have lost his position within the next few weeks.

AMERICANS FIGHT DEPORTATION

Railroad Men of the Pere Marquette Object to Being Sent Back to United States.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TORONTO, Ontario, June 3.—Judge Anglin this afternoon heard application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of Trainmaster Cain and Chief Dispatcher Gilhule of the Pere Marquette, who have been ordered deported under the alien contract law.

Among the points asserted were that the Canadian Parliament had no jurisdiction to pass such an act, which was a matter for the British Parliament only, and that Gilhule is a British subject and that his being naturalized as an American did not disqualify him from rights of a British subject.

Judge Anglin will probably give his decision on Monday.

BLAST FATAL TO QUARRYMAN

Paul Banac Killed by Premature Explosion in the Skrainka Quarry.

Paul Banac, aged 45, 248 Papin street, blown 50 feet in the air by the premature explosion of a charge of powder at the Skrainka quarry, Montrose and Scott streets, yesterday afternoon, came down over the ledge of the quarry, falling 130 feet. He is supposed to have been dead long before he reached the earth, being almost torn to pieces.

Banac was ramming a charge of powder home, and it is thought that it became ignited from a spark. The body was taken to the Morgue.

DEAF MUTE KILLED BY TRAIN.

Stein Wrote His Name and Address While Conscious

J. E. Stein, 621 Morgan street, a deaf mute, was run down by a Wabash train at Main street and Ashland avenue yesterday afternoon and died within a short time at City Hospital. During the brief time that he was conscious, Stein was asked to tell his name. He could not talk, but by signs made it known that he wished a pencil and paper. Then he wrote:

"J. E. Stein, 621"—

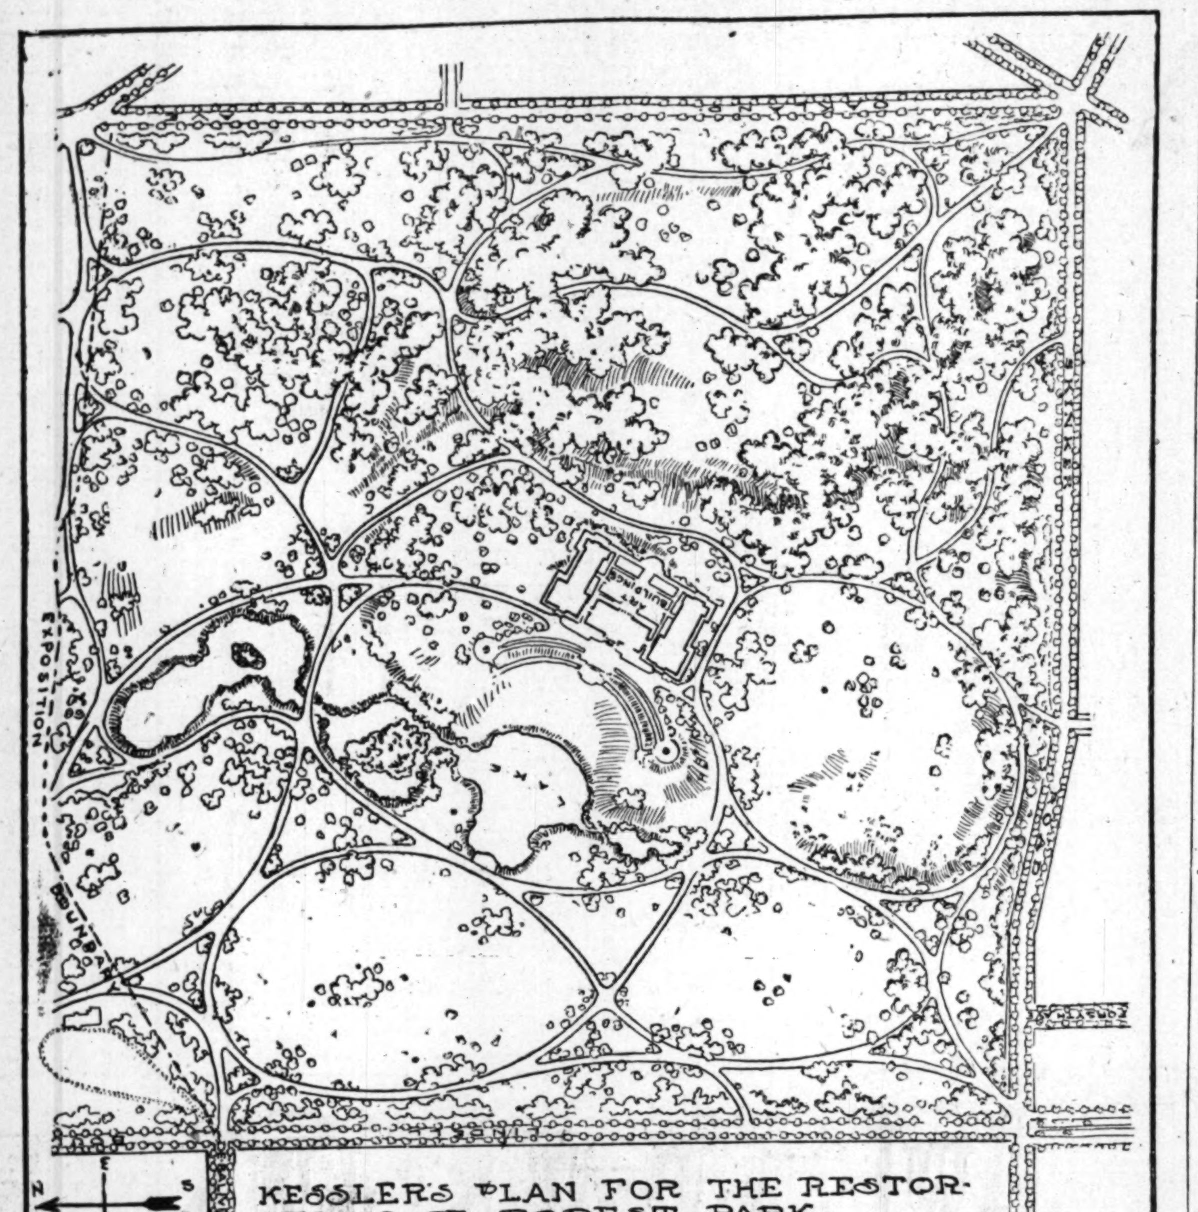
Before he completed his address he became unconscious. Rousing himself after a while, he added the word "Morgan."

He died before his wife and daughter, who were notified as soon as the address was known, reached the hospital.

Courthouse Clerks Entertained.

A delightful evening was spent by attaches f the curthouse, including the Circuit clerks and their crps of assistants, last evening, at the home of Louis Kuna, 3722 South Grand avenue. Only recently Mr. Kuna, who was deputy clerk in Judge McDonald's division of Circuit Court, resigned his position at the courthouse to accept the position of chief deputy clerk in the Collector's office.

Post-Dispatch Lake to Form Basis of System of Waterways in Kessler's Plan for Restoration of Forest Park



KESSLER'S PLAN FOR THE RESTORATION OF FOREST PARK

Director, in Charge of Rebeautifying Park, Outlines Magnificent Picture With Chain of Lagoons, Adding to Impressive Scene of Which Art Hill, Crowned by Art Palace, Will Be Basis of Scheme.

George E. Kessler, director of restoration under the World's Fair Co.s contract with the city for the restoration of Forest Park, has his work advanced to the stage, where he is able to indicate by definite drawings just what will be the appearance of the park, its roadways, lake system, etc., when restored.

It is Mr. Kessler's opinion that the work of restoration could best be done by the city itself, and that the cost would not greatly, if at all, exceed $100,000.

"As matters stand now," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "the World's Fair Co. is largely a superfluous intermediary between the city and those who do the actual work. The city would save time and money and get better results by itself taking over the task of restoration and prosecuting it to the finish.

"I can illustrate this, as bearing upon the question of expense, by giving one instance of what is possible to the city. The roads existing in that part of the park used by the World's Fair were dirt roads, and the restoration plan contemplates only the making of dirt roads in restoring the park. Yet, if the city has charge of this work, it will be able to utilize all the road material used in the making of World's Fair roads, and which, otherwise, must either be covered over with earth, where low, or torn up and destroyed where the elevation makes this impracticable. The saving to the city on this one item would amount to fully $50,000.

"As to the saving of time, the city will be able to push the work to completion much more effectively than can the World's Fair Co., standing between the city and the contractors. The city should also be able to get lower bids and to compel a stricter compliance with contract for India or from Russian designs in any stipulations than can the World's Fair Co.

Art Hill to Be Main Picture.

"Art Hill, crowned by the Fine Arts Building, will be the main picture, the center of the restored scene, under the restoration plan. In my drawing I have included the pavilions on either side of the main Arts Building, as it is optional with the city to retain them along with the Arts Building itself. Whether or not this is done, however, has no bearing on the merits of the plan.

"Where once was the semicircular sweep of the Cascades coming down from the crest of Art Hill, the natural hillside will be restored, a beautiful grassy slope leading down unbroken in contour to the margin of the lake. This will produce a most pleasing effect and constitutes the consistent approach to the Art Building, pleasing to the eye and conforming to the standards of artistic landscaping.

"In the restoration plans the Post-Dispatch Lake will play an important part by being made the foundation for the establishment of a lake system which will add materially to the beauty of the restored park. It will be fully restored and connected by the World's Fair lagoon system with the other smaller lakes. The River des Peres, which in the past ran between the lake and the foot of the park hills when, for the best artistic effect, the lake itself should have extended to meet this natural hill termination, will be eliminated from the picture in the near future, I hope.

"I say this for the same reason that I have omitted the River des Peres entirely from my drawing of the restored park. It is conceded that this river is the natural drainage outlet for a large part of the residence section of the West End, that it must in time be recognized as a sewer and covered over, therefore the River Des Peres must not be considered as a factor in the situation. The Forest Park of the near future should be a park in which this river has no visible existence.

Work Rapidly Done.

"On my drawing of the restored park, showing that portion occupied by the World's Fair, the wooded portion to the left of the picture, which is the south in direction, exists as shown. But little injury was done to the natural growth of trees in this section of the park, as visitors to the Terrace of States will remember. Already, too, following the prompt wrecking and removal of State buildings, the ground has been cleared and freshly sown with grass and it now presents much the same appearance as before the World's Fair period; that of a natural forest area with lawn surface.

"To the right of the picture, north in direction, I have drawn numerous little plantations. The trees for these plantations must be planted, and they will be, under the restoration plan. The wilderness, of course, will not be replaced, as that is a physical impossibility, but this area will be made attractive by sweeps of lawn, the slopes from the north to the lower levels being planted with small trees, the hillsides covered with rich grass, and an attractive road system established.

"This road system, as shown in the restoration plan illustrated by my drawing, will consist of dirt roads, as I have already pointed out, but I have also shown how these roads can be paved with first-class paving material at practically no cost to the city beyond that of labor.

"My plan for the restoration of the park has been carefully formulated with a view to making the best use of every natural advantage. The task as now outlined is not a great one. The immediate problem now confronting us is to get rid of the World's Fair wreckage and have clear ground on which to work. When this is done, the people of St. Louis will be astonished by the rapidity with which the remainder of the work can be pushed to completion, and by the attractiveness of the picture that will be presented by the park when the work of restoration is completed."

PRESIDENT FRANCIS ON FOREST PARK RESTORATION

President Francis of the World's Fair, in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, on the restoration of Forest Park, made the first official announcement of the World's Fair Co.'s willingness to pay $100,000 into the city treasury and transfer to the municipality the task of restoring the park in compliance with the provisions of a proposed new ordinance to that effect.

"The suggestion," said President Francis, "to pay into the city treasury $100,000 and to furnish to the city free of cost the services of the Exposition's landscape architect, George E. Kessler, is in my judgment a very liberal one which the sentiment of the community would approve. If such a contract is consummated in the form of an ordinance before the Municipal Assembly adjourns for its summer vacation, I shall see that the sum mentioned is paid into the city treasury, even if the directors of the World's Fair Co. should have to be called upon to make up any possible deficiency."

President Francis explains the apparent slowness of the work of park restoration by pointing out that the ordinance limiting the time for removal of buildings to six months following the close of the Fair was passed when none appreciated the scope and magnitude of the World's Fair.

It is absurd to think, he says, that exhibit palaces, covering an area of 128 acres, 30 or more State buildings, 20 or more foreign pavilions, and scores of other structures that required an average of two years' work for 10,000 persons a day to complete, can be removed within six months' time.

Ordinance Not Disregarded.

It is also explained by President Francis that the World's Fair contract with the Chicago Wrecking Co. in charge of the work of removing the buildings covers only this six months' period stipulated by the original ordinance, and he suggests that in the proposed ordinance this time be extended, fixing a fair consideration for the wrecking company's further occupancy of the grounds.

Of the 668 acres in Forest Park granted for the use of the World's Fair, President Francis says that 400 acres have already been cleared and returned to the city for park uses. The 225 acres within the enclosure of the Exposition fence, he points out, comprise what was known as the main picture and, originally, constituted a jungle and a marsh, upon which the city had not expended as much as $25,000 since the establishment of Forest Park.

$75,000 Already Spent.

The Exposition Co. has already expended $75,000 in grading Skinker road, the betterment of the channel of the River des Peres east of De Baliviere avenue, and the restoration of the 400 acres already alluded to, and has also placed within the limits of the park grant to the Fair road material to the value of $50,000 which can be used for park roadways by the city authorities in addition to the $100,000 which will be paid into the city treasury in the event of the new project for municipal restoration of the park going into effect.

"What I am very desirous to see brought about," says President Francis in conclusion, "is a prompt and equitable adjustment of the relations between the city and the Exposition Co., and the satisfaction of the obligations of the latter to the former by the payment into the city treasury of a sum of money adequate, as $100,000 would certainly be, for the restoration of the park to a condition far superior to that which existed at the time the Exposition Co. took possession."

LIVE-SHELL GUNNERY BY NIGHT NEAR PORTSMOUTH.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 3.—A touch of realism seldom experienced even in Portsmouth accompanied experiments which have taken place off Southsea Beach, when live shells were fired from the fortifications lining the Portsmouth side of the harbor mouth.

Never before have such experiments taken place, and thousands crowded the beach to witness the remarkable spectacle. The very necessary precaution of warning ship owners had been taken some days ago and though it was not until after 9 o'clock that operations were to begin, long before that hour no sailing vessel or steamer was to be seen in Spithead.

About 9 o'clock searchlights from Spit Fort, Southsea Beach, and Gilkicker Point illuminated the water like day. Immediately every eye was strained towards Spit Fort, but it was not for some time that curiosity was rewarded. Presently from the darkness, the War Office launch, with three headlights, suddenly came into the beams of the searchlights.

When well opposite Clarence Pier the powerful searchlight at the harbor mouth was turned upon the vessel, and revealed a curious-shaped target towed in the rear, close to the water line.

The bugle to prepare had already sounded from King's Bastion Battery, and immediately the boom of 12-pounders firing in quick succession shook the air. The water around the targets was churned into foam, looking extremely picturesque against the inky background. Again and again the target was hit, each projectile bursting as it did so. The target could scarcely have been 600 yards from the shore, and was clearly visible to the crowds of spectators.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

IN MEMORIAM.

As the return of the month of June, we children are reminded of all the sadness that it brought to our family circle, for four years ago we had to bury our beloved mother, Mary Loesch (nee Schmidt), and one year ago our dear father, John Loesch Sr., was interred in Old St. Mark's Cemetery. Remembering these sad facts, the feelings of love and respect with regard to our parents are renewed in our hearts. May their memory never die away in our relationship with the flight of the rolling years. THE MOURNING CHILDREN.

CLAIRVOYANTS.

14 Words, 30c

PROF. W. J. MARTIN, CLAIRVOYANT,

2728—LOCUST STREET—2728

The above is a cut of Prof. Martin's new and elegant home.

$1000 FORFEIT

Will forfeit $1000 cash if I cannot prove to everyone calling at my office that I have read for more prominent and well-known people than any other three clairvoyants in St. Louis. This evidence, in the form of personal letters of indorsement, autographs, photos and hand prints with personal signatures attached, including King Edward VII, Queen Alexandra, Camille D'Arville, Lillian Russell, Grover Cleveland, Mrs. Cleveland, prominent statesmen, monarchs, governors and professional men and women from various parts of the world, being of a character that money cannot buy.

I DO HEREBY AGREE AND GUARANTEE TO make no charge if I fail to tell your name, occupation and what you called for.

I PROMISE TO TELL YOU whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false; tell you whom or when you will marry; in fact, I will tell you every hope, fear or ambition better than you can tell yourself, or make no charge.

NO FEE IN ADVANCE, AND YOU PAY NOTHING UNLESS PERFECTLY SATISFIED. Advice on business, speculation, investment, law, love, marriage, divorce, reunite the separated and cause speedy marriage with one of your choice.

THE SECRET OF POWER and Personal Influence. How to WIN in business, love, health and all affairs.

MAKE NO MISTAKE when seeking the advice of a clairvoyant. It pays to consult the best. AS A SEER and interpreter of things hidden to man, he has no equal. Hundreds of others have been put on the road to fortune by him. Why not you? Many profess the gift of clairvoyancy and necromancy; few, indeed, are so gifted. ONE VISIT TO A GENUINE OCCULT SCIENTIST WILL REPAY YOU FOR MANY DISAPPOINTMENTS.

Hours: 10 a. m. to 7 p. m.; Sundays, 11 to 4. Both phones—Kinloch, B 1533; Bell, Beaumont 308A. PROF. MARTIN, 2728 Locust St.

SHAW'S GARDEN OPEN TODAY
LOOK AT FLORA BOULEVARD
The most desirable residence tract in the city.

WHY?
It is situated in a district bounded on the west by the Missouri Botanical Garden, south by Tower Grove Park, east by Compton Heights and Reservoir Park and north, a distance of about 2000 feet, by a tract of land which will be devoted to residence purposes, and consequently exempt from factories.

The entrance on Grand avenue is through a magnificent stone gateway, and is practically the Grand avenue entrance to Shaw's Garden.

ADVANTAGES
The streets and sidewalks are made and properly supplied with sewers, water and gas, beautifully graded and planted with trees.

Each lot is connected with sewer and fronts on a beautiful park 50 feet wide by 4000 feet long, ornamented with trees, shrubs and flowers.

The lots range in size from 50 to 70 feet, and are 174 feet in depth to a 15-foot alley, and convenient to four car lines and a fine public school.

RESTRICTIONS
All lots fronting on both sides of Flora boulevard are restricted forever for residences (no flats or stores), to cost not less than $4000, and not more than one house can be built to each 50 feet.

PRICE
Prices range from $60 to $85 per front foot, and if you want to build a home, make an inspection at once and apply for prices and terms to

A. D. CUNNINGHAM, Sec'y.
Room 507, 421 Olive St.

SALE OF LOTS
Beautiful Oak Grove Heights
BUY A HOME UNDER THE BIG OLD OAKS!
BEST OF TERMS.

Less than a year ago we were attracted by the magnificent high location and the grand old oak trees of the property, which we afterwards purchased and laid off as Oak Grove Heights. It was in close touch with the heart of the city, lying only ONE BLOCK WEST OF SUBURBAN GARDEN and but a short two blocks from school, stores of all kinds and the Wellston Bank. In addition, it overlooked all the surrounding territory and was crowned by the grand old oaks so well known to old St. Louisians. It was no surprise to us that all of the lots were sold in such short order, and that in the short space of one year 44 homes have been built in this most beautiful subdivision. We have now secured the ground lying immediately west of Oak Grove and extended Wellsmar and Myrtle avenues to the railroad. We have only 42 lots to offer you, and a few of these have been spoken for by parties who were too late for the sale in the old subdivision. We will offer the new lots on SUNDAY, JUNE 4th, and we can say most conservatively that there will not be a lot left on the evening of that day. We have not raised the prices, we have not changed the terms.

$20.00 CASH AND $5.00 A MONTH
Leaves it still within the reach of all the savers who can appreciate the beauties and advantages we offer. In addition, we offer something never heretofore known on payment of the FIRST $20.00. We give a CLEAN, CLEAR WARRANTY DEED; NO CONTRACTS, NO BOOKS, NO BOTHER and with the deed we furnish free a certificate of title to your lot. Take the Suburban cars to North Market street and walk two blocks west, or Easton avenue or Olive street cars to Wellston. You will find our salesmen on the ground. But do not come later than Sunday, as if any lots should remain after our sale on that day we propose to keep them ourselves and build on them.

Where buyers always find the best offerings of the week.

Cates Av. Home.

Just listed 5566 Cates av., a handsome looking 2½-story brick and rock residence of 12 rooms. The first story front and the porch are of carved and cut brownstone. Hall, stairs, dining room and practically all of the first floor are of carved oak and heavily wainscoted, making a very rich interior effect. Floors are oak; decorations all in fresco; good bathroom; furnace; extra summer kitchen; combination fixtures; fine basement and laundry, with stationary tubs; good frame stable, with rooms above. There are two rows of fine shade trees on the sidewalk and the street is one of the nicest in town. House needs some repairing, but owner will make liberal allowance to put it in perfect order. Lot 60x185.
Price $12,000

The N. W. Cor. King' Highway and Westminster.

This fine piece of ground is only a block from the new Washington Hotel and in the very center of the great West End development. It fronts 200 feet on Westminster place and 155 feet on King's highway. As a choice West End vacant lot there is nothing to compare with it at the price offered.
Price for the whole piece..$26,000

THE CHEAPEST VACANT PROPERTY IN SOUTH ST. LOUIS.
West side of Virginia av., 148 feet north of Osage st., 152x125; high ground, about two feet above grade; to insure a quick sale we have cut this [illegible] to $15 per foot and will give long time to pay.

THE BIGGEST BARGAIN OF THE SEASON.
We have a two-room, attic and cellar frame residence, with lot 50x125, for sale at $900. If you are earnestly wanting to buy, call on us and we will give you the location. Just think—$900 for a home. Do you mean business?

Men will pass many a real bargain in the real estate market without appreciating its value and by the time they discover its qualities the other fellow got ahead of them and they are just too late.

Is it not an awful feeling, that feeling of disappointment? The same thing might happen to you.

Chances are like so many birds flying by; you must catch them quick, otherwise they are gone. There are many real bargains and many chances in our bargain list, but you must take your chances while you have it offered.

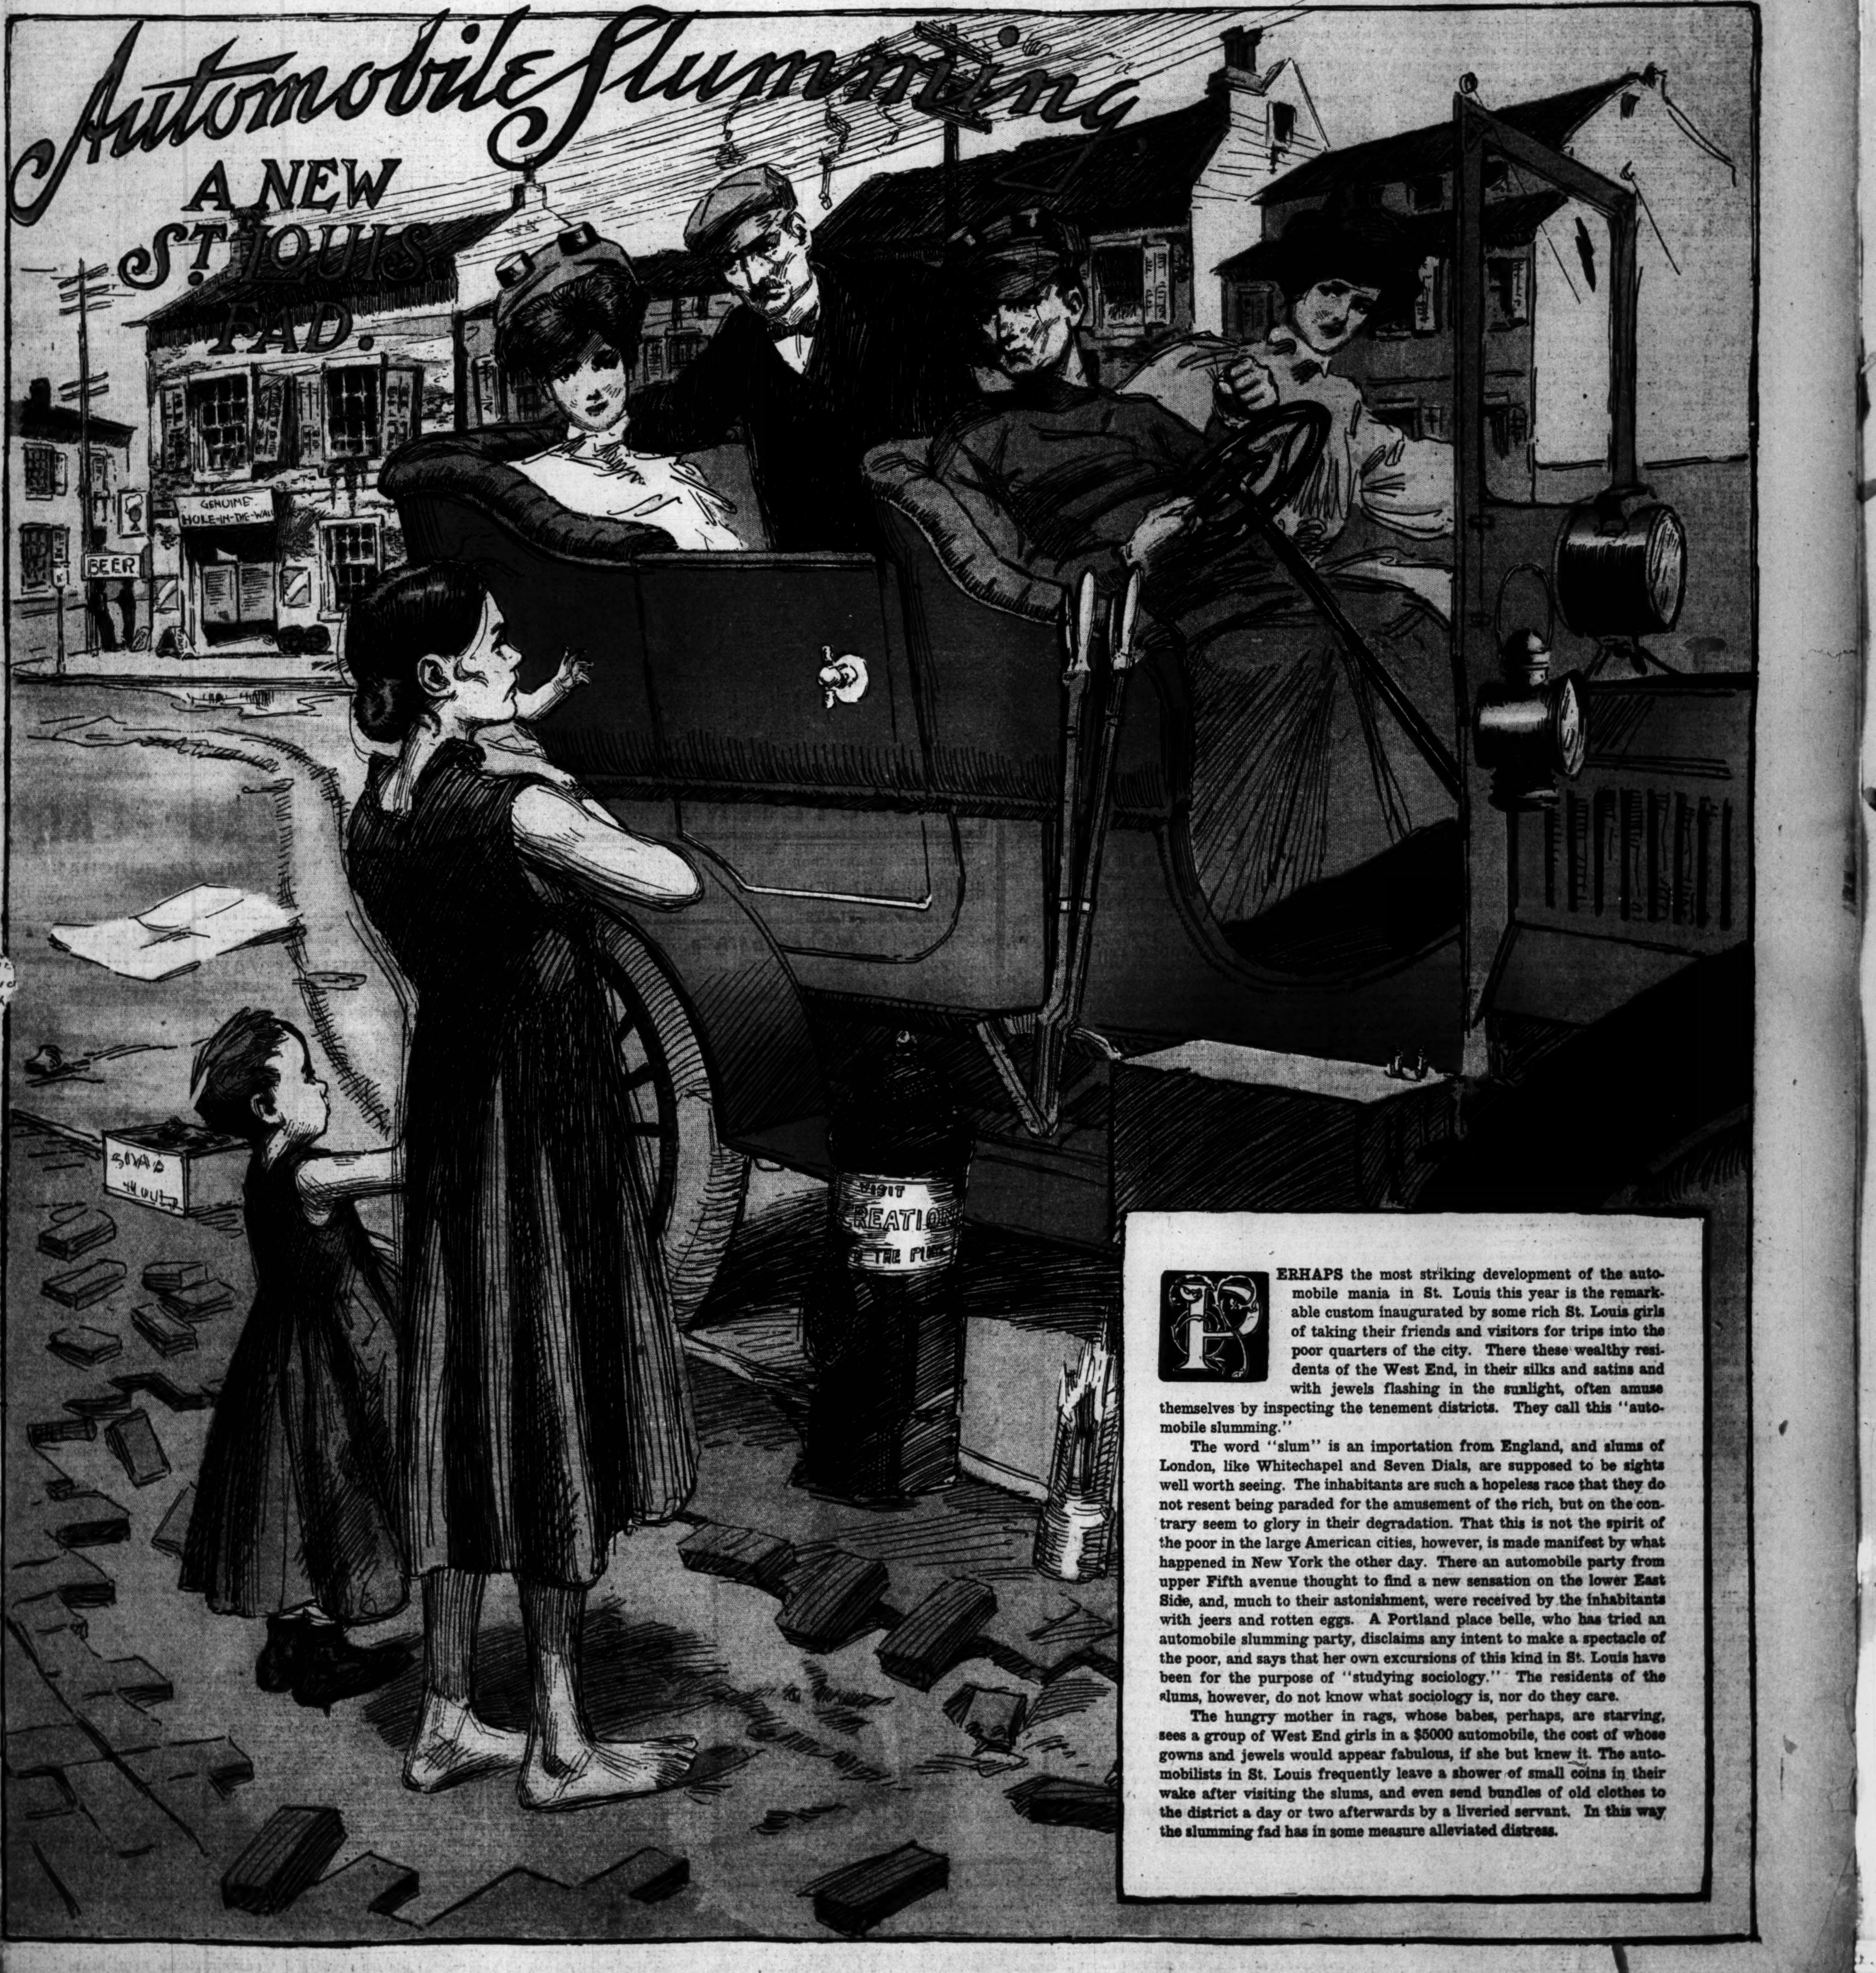
Automobile Slumming

A NEW ST. LOUIS FAD.



PERHAPS the most striking development of the automobile mania in St. Louis this year is the remarkable custom inaugurated by some rich St. Louis girls of taking their friends and visitors for trips into the poor quarters of the city. There these wealthy residents of the West End, in their silks and satins and with jewels flashing in the sunlight, often amuse themselves by inspecting the tenement districts. They call this "automobile slumming."

The word "slum" is an importation from England, and slums of London, like Whitechapel and Seven Dials, are supposed to be sights well worth seeing. The inhabitants are such a hopeless race that they do not resent being paraded for the amusement of the rich, but on the contrary seem to glory in their degradation. That this is not the spirit of the poor in the large American cities, however, is made manifest by what happened in New York the other day. There an automobile party from upper Fifth avenue thought to find a new sensation on the lower East Side, and, much to their astonishment, were received by the inhabitants with jeers and rotten eggs. A Portland place belle, who has tried an automobile slumming party, disclaims any intent to make a spectacle of the poor, and says that her own excursions of this kind in St. Louis have been for the purpose of "studying sociology." The residents of the slums, however, do not know what sociology is, nor do they care.

The hungry mother in rags, whose babes, perhaps, are starving, sees a group of West End girls in a $5000 automobile, the cost of whose gowns and jewels would appear fabulous, if she but knew it. The automobilists in St. Louis frequently leave a shower of small coins in their wake after visiting the slums, and even send bundles of old clothes to the district a day or two afterwards by a liveried servant. In this way the slumming fad has in some measure alleviated distress.

THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN

RAFFLES

BY E.W. HORNUNG.

ADVENTURE No. 4 = WILFUL MURDER

JCB

(Copyright, 1899, by Charles Scribner's Sons.)

OF THE various robberies in which we were both concerned, it is but the few, I find, that will bear telling at any length. Not that the others contained details which even I would hesitate to recount; it is, rather, the very absence of untoward incident which renders them useless for my present purpose. In point of fact, our plans were so craftily laid (by Raffles) that the chances of a hitch were invariably reduced to a minimum before we went to work. We might be disappointed in the market value of our haul; but it was quite the exception for us to find ourselves confronted by unforeseen impediments or involved in a really dramatic dilemma. There was a sameness even in our spoil; for, of course, only the most precious stones are worth the trouble we took and the risks we ran. In short, our most successful escapades would prove the greatest weariness of all in narrative form; and none more so than the dull affair of the Ardagh emeralds, some eight or nine weeks after the Milchester cricket week. The former, however, had a sequel that I would rather forget than all our burglaries put together.

It was the evening after our return from Ireland, and I was waiting at my rooms for Raffles, who had gone off as usual to dispose of the plunder. Raffles had his own method of conducting this very vital branch of our business, which I was well content to leave entirely in his hands. He drove the bargains, I believe, in a thin but subtle disguise of the flashy-seedy order, and always in the Cockney dialect, of which he had made himself a master. Moreover, he invariably employed the same "fence," who was ostensibly a money-lender in a small (but yet notorious) way, and in reality a rascal as remarkable as Raffles himself. Only lately I also had been to the man, but in my proper person. We had needed capital for the getting of these very emeralds, and I had raised a hundred pounds on the terms you would expect from a soft-spoken graybeard with an ingratiating smile, an incessant bow, and the shiftiest old eyes that ever flew from rim to rim of a pair of spectacles. So the original sinews and the final spoils of war came in this case from the self-same source—a circumstance which appealed to us both

But these same final spoils I was still to see, and I waited and waited with an impatience that grew upon me with the growing dusk. At my open window I had played Sister Ann until the faces in the street below were no longer distinguishable. And now I was tearing to and fro in the grip of horrible hypotheses—a grip that tightened when at last the left-gates opened with a clatter outside—that held me breathless until a well-known tattoo followed on my door.

"In the dark!" said Raffles, as I dragged him in. "Why, Bunny, what's wrong?"

"Nothing—now you've come," said I, shutting the door behind him in a fever of relief and anxiety. "Well? Well? What did they fetch?"

"Five hundred."

"Down?"

"Got it in my pocket."

"Good man!" I cried. "You don't know what a stew I've been in. I'll switch on the light. I've been thinking of you and nothing else for the last hour. I—I was ass enough to think something had gone wrong!"

Raffles was smiling when the white light filled the room. But for the moment I did not perceive the peculiarity of his smile. I was fatuously full of my own late tremors and present relief; and my first idiotic act was to spill some whisky and squirt the soda water all over in my anxiety to do instant justice to the occasion.

"So you thought something had happened?" said Raffles, leaning back in my chair as he lit a cigarette, and looking much amused. "What should you say if something had? Sit tight, my dear chap! It was nothing of the slightest consequence, and it's all over now. A stern chase and a long one, Bunny, but I think I'm well to windward this time."

And suddenly I saw that his collar was limp, his hair matted, his boots thick with dust.

"The police?" I whispered, aghast.

"O, dear, no; only old Baird."

"Baird! But wasn't it Baird who took the emeralds?"

"It was."

"Then how came he to chase you?"

"My dear fellow, I'll tell you if you give me a chance; it's really nothing to get in the least excited about. Old Baird has at last spotted that I'm not quite the common cracksman I would have him think me. And he's been doing his best to run me to my burrow."

"And you call that nothing!"

"It would be something if he had succeeded; but he has still to do that. I admit, however, that he made me sit up for the time being. It all comes of going on the job so far from home. There was the old brute with the whole thing in his morning paper. He knew it must have been done by some fellow who could pass himself off for a gentleman, and I saw his eyebrows go up the moment I told him I was the man, with the same old twang that you could cut with a paper knife. I did my best to get out of it—swore I had a pal who was a real swell—but I saw very plainly that I had given myself away. He gave up haggling. He paid my price as though he enjoyed doing it. But I felt him following me when I made tracks; though, of course, I didn't turn around to see."

"Why not?"

"My dear Bunny, it's the very worst thing you can do. As long as you look unsuspecting they'll keep their distance, and so long as they keep their distance you stand a chance. Once show that you know you're being followed, and it's flight or fight for all you're worth. I never even looked round; and mind you never do in the same hole. I just hurried up to Blackfriars and booked for Hight street, Kensington, at the top of my voice; and as the train was leaving Sloane Square, out I hopped, and up all those stairs like a lamplighter, and round to the studio by the back streets. Well, to be on the safe side, I lay low there all the afternoon, hearing nothing in the least suspicious, and only wishing I had a window to look through instead of that beastly skylight. However, the coast seemed clear enough, and thus far it was my mere idea that he would follow me; there was nothing to show he had. So at last I marched out in my proper rig—almost straight into old Baird's arms!"

"What on earth did you do?"

"Walked past him as though I had never set eyes on him in my life, and didn't then; took a hansom in the King's road, and drove like the deuce to Clapham Junction; rushed on to the nearest platform, without a ticket, jumped into the first train I saw, got out at Twickenham, walked full tilt back to Richmond, took the district to Charing Cross, and here I am! Ready for a tub and a change, and the best dinner the club can give us. I came to you first, because I thought you might be getting anxious. Come around with me, and I won't keep you long."

"You're certain you've given him the slip?" I said, as we put on our hats.

"Certain enough; but we can make assurance doubly sure," said Raffles, and went to my window, where he stood for a minute or two looking down into the street.

"All right?" I asked him.

"All right," said he; and we went downstairs forthwith, and so to the Albany, arm-in-arm.

But we were both rather silent on the way. I, for my part, was wondering what Raffles would do about the studio in Chelsea, whither, at all events, he had been successfully dogged. To me the point seemed one of immediate importance. When I mentioned it he said there was time enough to think about that. His one other remark was made after we had nodded (in Bond street) to a young blood of our acquaintance who happened to be getting himself a bad name.

"Poor Jack Rutter!" said Raffles, with a sigh. "Nothing's sadder than to see a fellow going to the bad like that. He's about mad with drink and debt, poor devil! Did you see his eye? Odd that we should have met him tonight, by the way, it's old Baird who's said to have skinned him. By God, but I'd like to skin old Baird!"

And his tone took a sudden low fury, made the more noticeable by another long silence, which lasted, indeed, throughout an admirable dinner at the club, and for some time after we had settled down in a quiet corner of the smoking room with our coffee and cigars. Then at last I saw Raffles looking at me with a lazy smile, and I knew that the morose fit was at an end.

"I daresay you wonder what I've been thinking about all this time?" said he. "I've been thinking what rot it is to go doing things by halves!"

"Well," said I, returning his smile, "that's not a charge that you can bring against yourself, is it?"

"I'm not so sure," said Raffles, blowing a meditative puff; "as a matter of fact, I was thinking less of myself than of that poor devil of a Jack Rutter. There's a fellow who does things by halves; he's only half gone to the bad; and look at the difference between him and us! He's under the thumb of a villainous money lender; we are solvent citizens. He's taken to drink; we're as sober as we are solvent. His pals are beginning to cut him; our difficulty is to keep the pal from the door. Enfin, he begs or borrows, which is stealing by halves; and we steal outright and are done with it. Obviously ours is the more honest course. Yet, I'm not sure, Bunny, but we're doing the thing by halves ourselves!"

"Why? What more could we do?" I exclaimed, in soft derision, looking round, however, to make sure that we were not overheard.

"What more?" said Raffles. "Well, murder, for one thing."

"Rot!"

"A mere matter of opinion, my dear Bunny; I don't mean it for rot. I've told you before that the biggest man alive is the man who's committed a murder, and not yet been found out; at least, he ought to be, but he so very seldom has the soul to appreciate himself. Just think of it! Think of coming in here and talking to the men, very likely about the murder itself; and knowing you've done it; and wondering how they'd look if THEY knew! O, it would be great, simply great! But, besides all that, when you were caught there'd be a merciful and dramatic end of you. You'd fill the bill for a few weeks, and then snuff out with a flourish of extra specials; you wouldn't rust with a vile repose for seven to fourteen years."

"Good old Raffles!" I chuckled. "I begin to forgive you for being in bad form at dinner."

"But I was never more earnest in my life."

"Go on!"

"I mean it."

"You know very well that you wouldn't commit a murder, whatever else you might do."

"I know very well I'm going to commit one tonight!"

He had been leaning back in the saddle-bag chair, watching me with keen eyes sheathed by languid lids; now he started forward, and his eyes leapt to mine like cold steel from the scabbard. They struck home to my slow wits; their meaning was no longer in doubt. I, who knew the man, read murder in his clenched hands, and murder in his locked lips, but a hundred murders in those hard blue eyes.

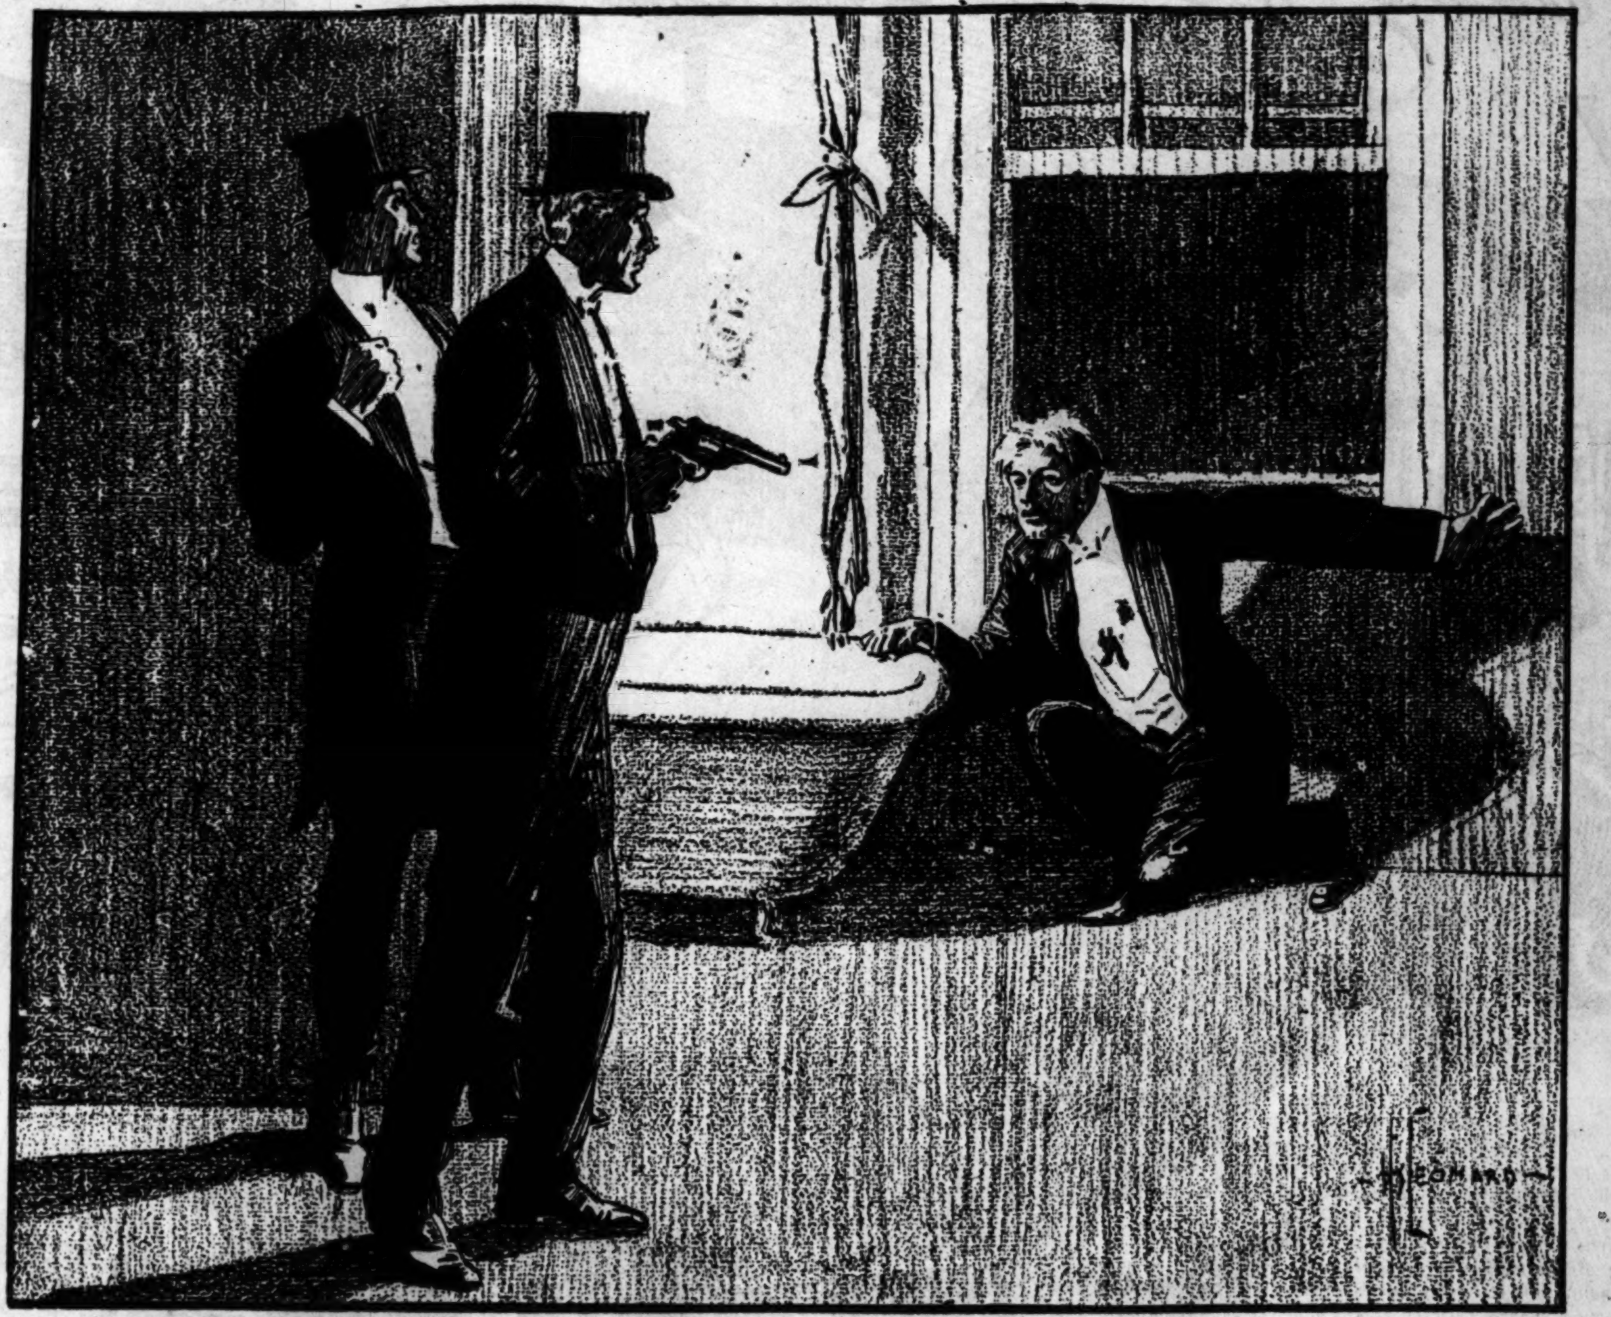
"Baird?" I faltered, moistening my lips with my tongue.

"Of course."

"But you said it didn't matter about the room in Chelsea?"

"I told a lie."

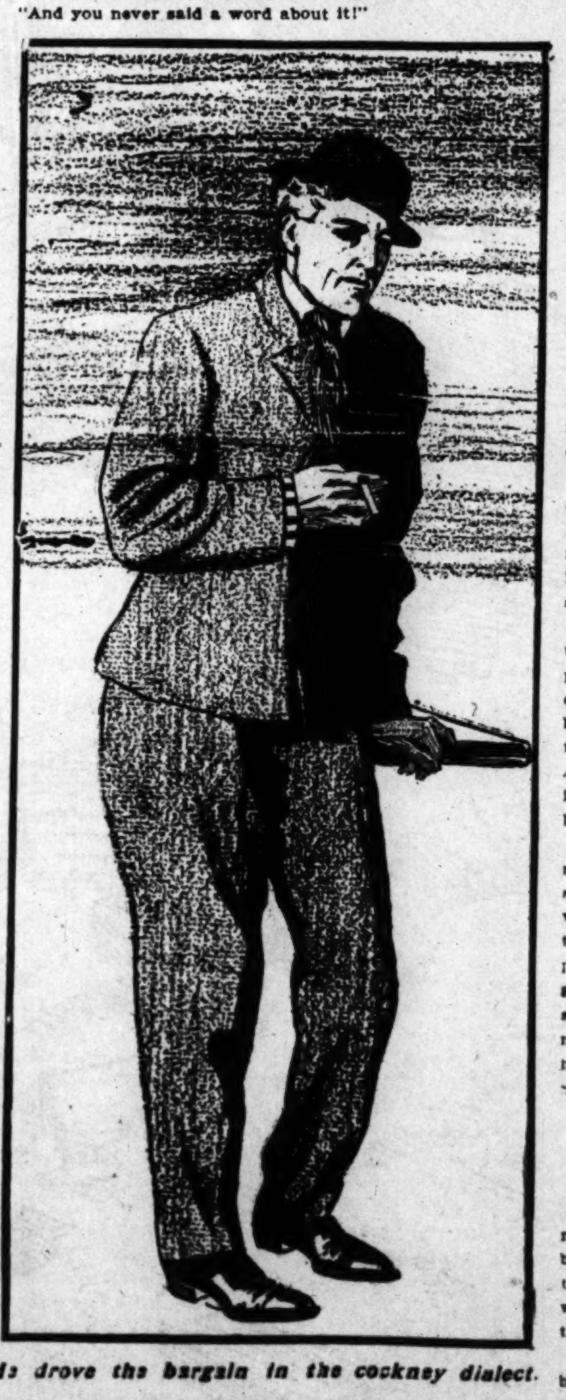
"Anyway, you gave him the slip afterwards!"



"The cowering figure rose gradually erect."

"That was another. I didn't. I thought I had when I came up to you this evening; but when I looked out of your window—you remember? to make assurance doubly sure—there he was on the opposite pavement down below."

"And you never said a word about it!"



He drove the bargain in the cockney dialect.

"I wasn't going to spoil your dinner, Bunny, and I wasn't going to let you spoil mine. But there he was as large as life, and, of course, he followed us to the Albany. A fine game for him to play, a game after his mean old heart; blackmail from me, bribes from the police, the one bidding against the other, but he [illegible] live to, and the world will have an extortioner the less. Waiter! Two Scotch whiskies and sodas. I'm off at 11, Bunny; it's the only thing to be done."

"You know where he lives, then?"

"Yes, out Willesden way, and alone; the fellow's a miser among other things. I long ago found out all about him."

Again I looked round the room; it was a young man's club, and young men were laughing, chatting, smoking, drinking, on every hand. One nodded to me through the smoke. Like a machine I nodded to him, and turned back to Raffles with a groan.

"Surely you will give him a chance!" I urged. "The very sight of your pistol should bring him to terms."

"It wouldn't make him keep them."

"But you might try the effect?"

"I probably shall. Here's a drink for you, Bunny. Wish me luck."

"I'm coming too."

"I don't want you."

"But I must come!"

An ugly gleam shot from the steel-blue eyes.

"To interfere?" said Raffles.

"Not I."

"You give me your word?"

"I do."

"Bunny, if you break it"—

"You may shoot me, too!"

"I most certainly should," said Raffles, solemnly. "So you come at your own peril, my dear man; but, if you are coming—well, the sooner the better, for I must stop at my rooms on the way."

Five minutes later I was waiting for him at the Piccadilly entrance to the Albany. I had reason for remaining outside. It was the feeling—half hope, half fear—that Angus Baird might still be on our trail—that some more immediate and less cold-blooded way of dealing with him might result from a sudden encounter between the money lender and myself. I would not warn him of his danger; but I would avert tragedy at all costs. And when no such encounter had taken place, and Raffles and I were fairly on our way to Willesden, that, I think, was still my honest resolve. I would not break my word if I could help it, but it was a comfort to feel that I could break it if I liked, on an understood penalty. Alas! I fear my good intentions were tainted with a devouring curiosity, and overlaid by the fascination which goes hand in hand with horror.

I have a poignant recollection of the hour it took us to reach the house. We walked across St. James' Park (I can see the lights now, bright on the bridge and blurred in the water), and we had some minutes to wait for the last train to Willesden. It left at 11:21, I remember, and Raffles was put out to find it did not go on to Kensal Rise. We had to get out at Willesden Junction and walk on through the streets into fairly open country that happened to be quite new to me. I could never find the house again. I remember, however, that we were on a dark footpath between woods and fields when the clocks began striking 12.

"Surely," said I, "we shall find him in bed and asleep?"

"I hope we do," said Raffles, grimly.

"Then you mean to break in?"

"What else did you think?"

I had not thought about it at all; the ultimate crime had monopolised my mind. Beside it burglary was a bagatelle, but one to deprecate none the less. I saw obvious objections; the man was au fait with cracksmen and their ways; he would certainly have firearms, and might be the first to use them.

"I could wish nothing better," said Raffles. "When it will be man to man, and devil take the worst shot. You don't suppose I prefer foul play to fair, do you? But die he must, by one way or the other, or it's a long stretch for you and me."

"Better that than this!"

"Then stay where you are, my good fellow. I told you I [illegible] want you, [illegible] is the house. So [illegible]"

I could see no house at all, only the angle of a high wall, rising solitary in the night, with the starlight glittering on battlements of broken glass; and in the wall a tall green gate, bristling with spikes, and showing a front for battering rams in the feeble rays an outlying lamp-post cast across the new-made road. It seemed to me a road of building sites, with but this one house built, all by itself, at one end; but the night was too dark for more than a mere impression.

Raffles, however, had seen the place by daylight, and had come prepared for the special obstacles; already he was reaching up and putting champagne corks on the spikes, and in another moment he had his folded covert coat across the corks. I stepped back as he raised himself, and saw a little pyramid of slates snip the sky above the gate; as he squirmed over I ran forward, and had my own weight on the spikes and corks and covert coat when he gave the latter a tug.

Coming after all?"

"Rather!"

"Take care, then; the place is all bell wires and springs. It's no soft thing, this! There—stand still while I take off the corks."

The garden was very small and new, with a grass plot still in separate sods, but a quantity of full-grown laurels stuck into the raw clay beds. "Bells in themselves," as Raffles whispered; "there's nothing else rustles so—cunning old beast!" And we gave them a wide berth as we crept across the grass.

"He's gone to bed!"

"I don't think so, Bunny. I believe he's seen us."

"Why?"

"I saw a light."

"Where?"

"Downstairs, for an instant, when I —

His whisper died away; he had seen the light again; and so had I.

It lay like a golden rod under the front door—and vanished. It reappeared like a gold thread under the lintel—and vanished for good. We heard the stairs creak, creak, and cease, also for good. We neither saw nor heard any more, though we stood waiting on the grass till our feet were soaked with the dew."

We trod gingerly on the path, but the gravel stuck to our wet soles, and grated horribly in a little tiled veranda with a glass door leading within. It was through this glass that Raffles had first seen the light; and he now proceeded to take out a pane, with the diamond, the pot of treacle and the sheet of brown paper which were seldom omitted from his impedimenta. Nor did he dispense with my own assistance, though he may have accepted it as instinctively as it was proffered. In any case, it was these fingers that helped to spread the treacle on the brown paper, and pressed the latter to the glass until the diamond had completed its circuit and the pane fell gently into our hands.

Raffles now inserted his hand, turned the key in the lock, and, by making a long arm, succeeded in drawing the bolt at the bottom of the door; it proved to be the only one, and the door opened, though not very wide.

"What's that?" said Raffles, as something crunched beneath his feet on the very threshold.

"A pair of spectacles," I whispered, picking them up. I was still fingering the broken lenses and the bent rims when Raffles tripped and almost fell, with a gasping cry that he made no effort to restrain.

"Hush, man, hush!" I entreated, under my breath. "H hear you!"

For answer his teeth chattered—even his—and I heard fumbling with his matches. "No, Bunny; he won't hear u whispered Raffles, presently; and he rose from his kne and lit a gas as the match burned down.

Angus Baird was lying on his own floor, dead, with his gray hairs glued together by his blood; near him a poker with the black end glistening; in a corner his desk, ransacked, littered. A clock ticked noisily on the chimney-piece; for perhaps a hundred seconds there was no other sound.

Raffles stood very still, staring down at the dead, as a man might stare into an abyss after striding blindly to its brink. His breath came audibly through wide nostrils; he made no other sign, and his lips seemed sealed.

"That light!" said I, hoarsely; "the light we saw under the door!"

With a start he turned to me.

"It's true! I had forgotten it. It was in here I saw it first!"

"He must be upstairs still!"

"If he is we'll soon rout him out. Come on!"

Instead, I laid a hand upon his arm, imploring him to reflect—that his enemy was dead now—that we should certainly be involved—that now or never was our own time to escape. He shook me off in a sudden fury of impatience, a reckless contempt in his eyes, and, bidding me save my own skin if I liked, he once more turned his back upon me, and this time left me half resolved to take him at his word. Had he forgotten on what errand he himself was here? Was he determined that this night should end in black disaster? As I asked myself these questions, his match flared in the hall; in another moment the stairs were creaking under his feet, even as they had creaked under those of the murderer; and the humane instinct that inspired him in defiance of his risk was borne in also upon my slower sensibilities. Could we let the murderer go? My answer was to bound up the creaking stairs and to overhaul Raffles on the landing

But three doors presented themselves; the first opened into a bedroom with the bed turned down but undisturbed; the second room was empty in every sense; the third door was locked.

Raffles lit the landing gas.

"He's in there," said he, cocking his revolver. "Do you remember how we used to break into the studies at school? Here goes!"

His flat foot crashed over the keyhole, the lock gave, the door flew open, and in the sudden draft the landing gas heeled over like a cobble in a squall; as the flame righted itself I saw a fixed bath, two bath towels knotted together—an open window—a cowering figure—and Raffles struck aghast on the threshold.

"Jack—Rutter?"

The words came thick and slow with horror, and in horror I heard myself repeating them, while the cowering figure by the bathroom window rose gradually erect.

"It's you!" he whispered, in amazement no less than our own; "It's you two! What's it mean, Raffles? I saw you get over the gate; a bell rang, the place is full of them. Then you broke in. What's it all mean?"

"We may tell you that, when you tell us what in God's name you've done, Rutter?"

"Done? What have I done?" The unhappy wretch came

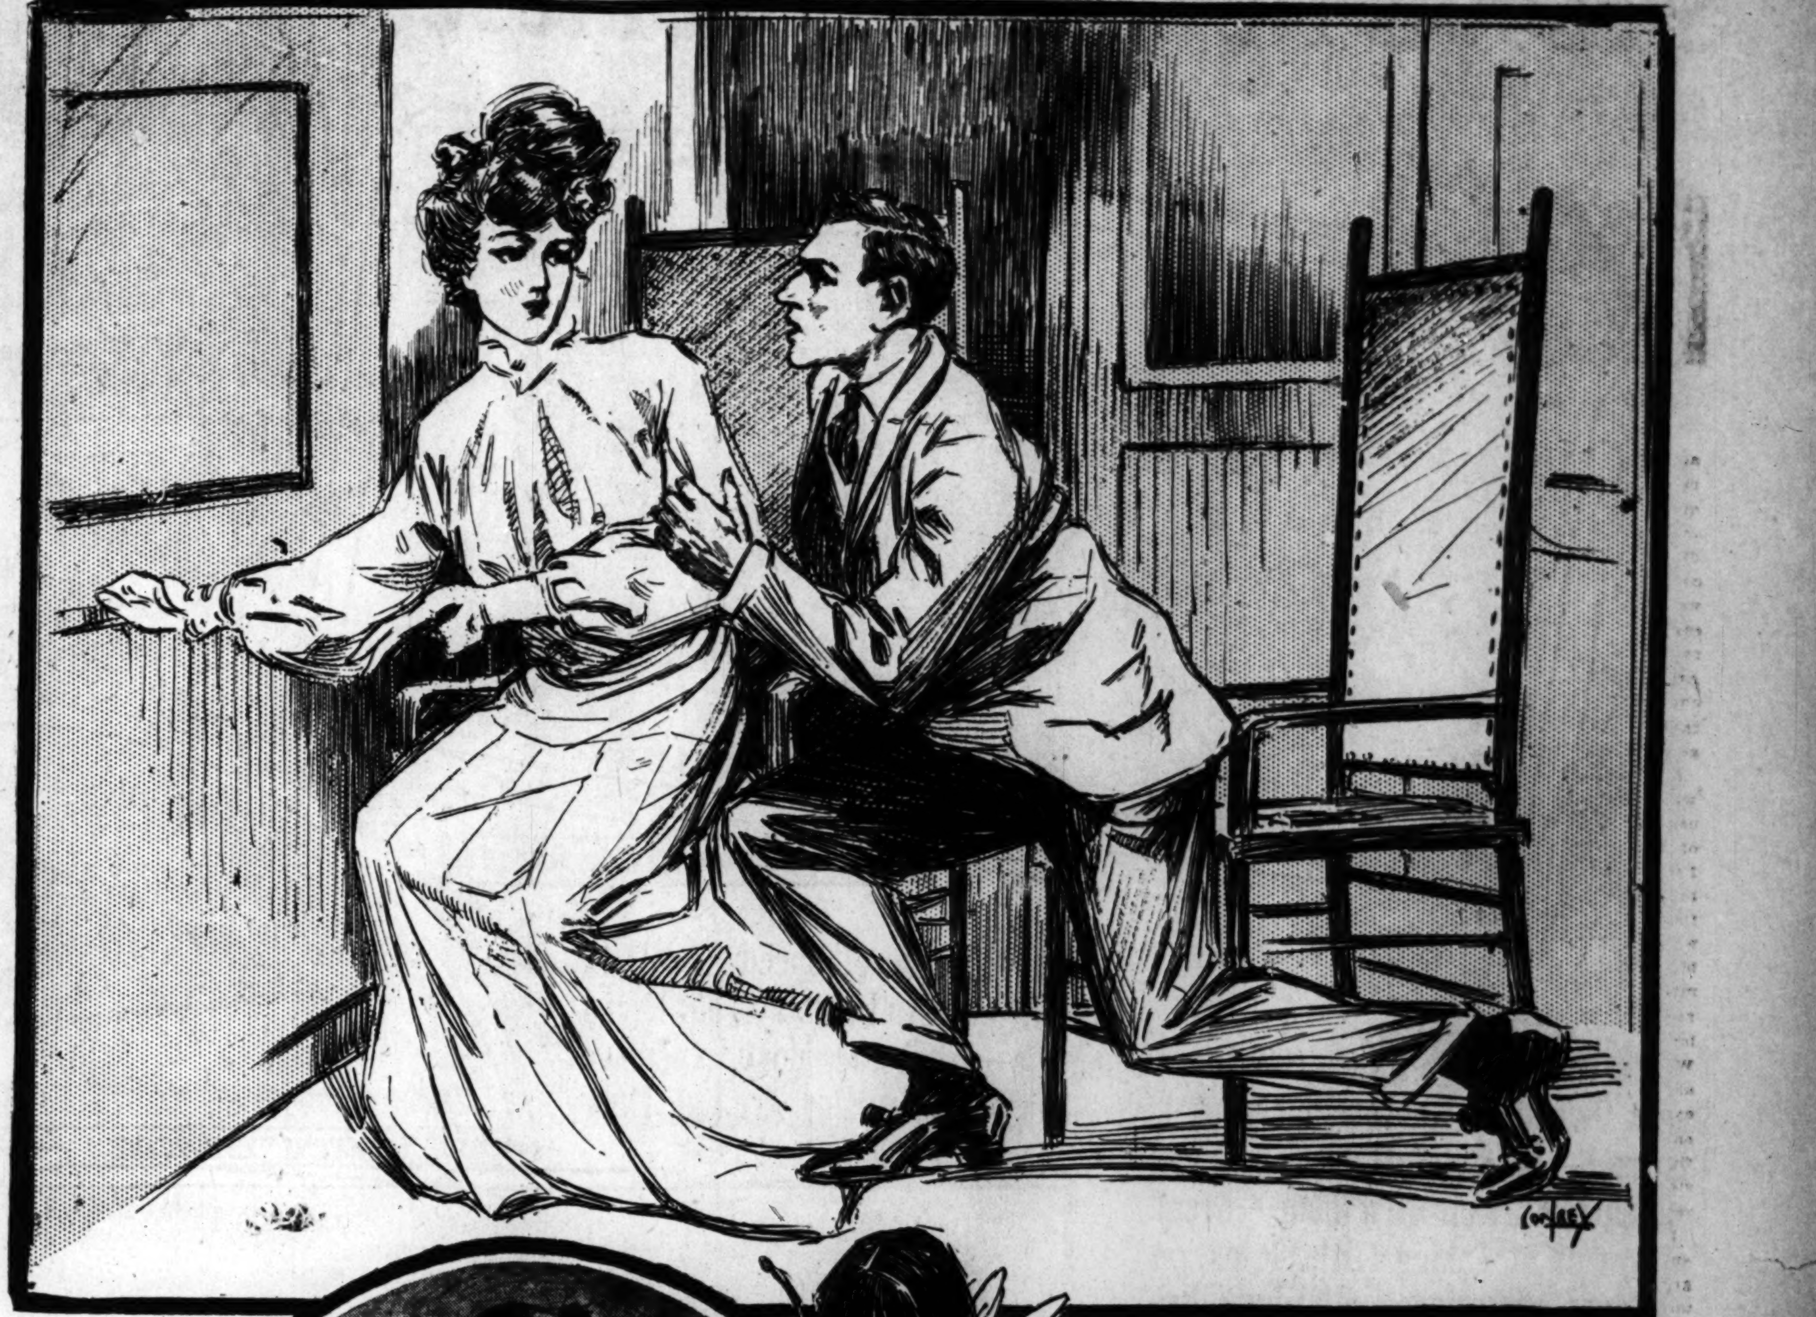
THE ROMANCE OF A BOOK-WORM

The Curious Manner in Which a Librarian's Love Story Has Been Hidden Away in the Shelves of His Own Library—The Mystery of "An Old Man's Idyl" Explained at Last—Strange Bibelot Which Excites Curiosity of Iowa Scholars—Heart Revelations in a Public Institution—How a Scholar Makes Love, as Told by Himself—He Describes the Green-Eyed Monster and Relates the Story of His Wooing.



PROPOSAL AS DESCRIBED IN THE BOOK:

THE most interesting romance in the world may have been lived by the man or woman next door. In the lives of even the most commonplace there are whole chapters of romance, were they known. Beyond that high-board fence which separates you from your neighbor may lie a romance which would thrill the world did a Dumas or a Hugo or a Weyman but know it. That man who rubbed elbows with you on the crowded street, the man carrying a bundle of books, seemingly a bibliophile enwrapped in the contemplation of Marcus Aurelius, of Shakspeare, of Materlinck, who knows but that in his heart of hearts, his innermost holy of holies, there lies a romance as sweet as any which lies packed in the lavender-scented box of the most romantic maiden? This is the love story of a bookman, a romance unguessed until the hero, now considerably past middle age, told it himself that his children and his children's children might know it and treasure it in memory.

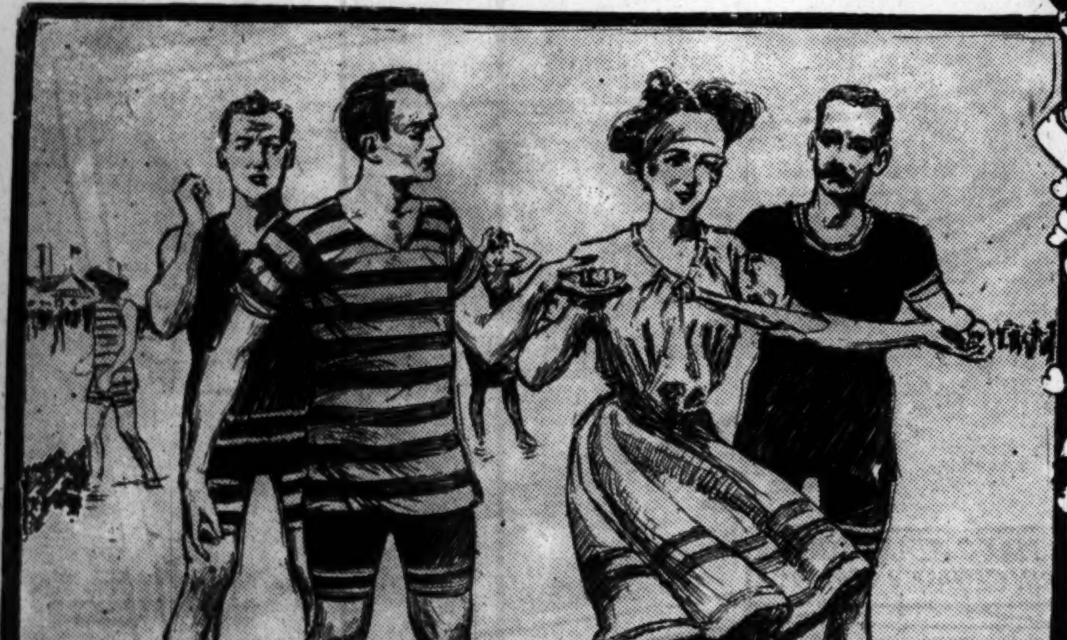
ROMANCES by the hundred and thousand lie upon the shelves of every great library the world over; many a romance has been enacted in some cozy nook or corner where affinities have been met seeking each for the same beloved volume; and yet it is hard to associate romance such as was lived in the days of old when knighthood was in flower, with the dusty tomes to be found on library shelves.

This is the love story of a librarian, one of the best-known bookmen in the Mississippi Valley, a man honored by his home State and by the nation, a man who has lived a love story as sweet as any ever told by novelist and poet, and yet a man among the last to be chosen as the teller or the liver of romance. Day after day he is to be found in the magnificent State House of a great Missisippi Valley State. High above his head tower row after row, stack after stack, tier after tier of books, massive State documents, ponderous legal tomes, here and there a stray volume of romance.

This is the love story of that librarian.

Primarily intended to apprise his children when they grow to womanhood of the romance in the lives of their parents, Johnson Brigham, State Librarian of Iowa, formerly United States Consul at Aix-la-Chappelle, Switzer- a bookman of note, has written the story of how kman woos and how a certain bookman won. One er is all that need be taken from this story. It is romance of the man next door, the bibliophile whose bows you rubbed as he hurried along clutching his beloved volumes to his breast.

The Trip On Which They "Found Themselves."



THE SALT LAKE SCENE DESCRIBED IN THE BOOK

A romance in that man? Read and see:

"But how did it come about, this wedding of which I have been writing? Here was a lone man of 47, who had had his day in court and been somewhat worsted, and yet he was apparently free from ambition to move for a new trial; there in her home almost across the way from my suite of rooms was a woman who long had passed her thirtieth birthday and yet, to all appearances, was fancy-free, though rumor had persistently gabbled about an old engagement, which had preserved her from ardent wooers during the susceptible years.

"This man—that is, myself—and this woman—Mary—had often met, and as it afterwards turned out, had dreamed each of the other; but in waking hours neither one had given the other a serious thought. To the young woman the middle-aged man had been a sort of hero—a hero with weak spots in his armor—at best unattainable and at worst undesirable. To the middle-aged man the maiden of 30 seemed reserved for some better fate than he could offer, and yet she strangely held possession of his thoughts. Her smile as she looked up from her flower bed or book, her voice as she sang to him from the church choir on Sundays, or as her laugh rang in his ears on his way past her home—these were among his pleasantest memories. And yet it had never occurred to her that she could be anything to him, nor to him that he could ever win her from her maiden meditation.

"It seemed to be one of those gentle decrees of fate which keep the world loyal to the fickle dame, despite the apparent fact that the law of averages proves her more cruel than kind, that we two should, each unknown to the other, join an excursion party which was to spend nearly a month traveling in the far West. When the two met at the rendezvous in a great hotel in a western metropolis, there was only a faint stirring of the masculine heart, the superconscious thought being, 'Now I know I shall have a good time.'

"Our first real awakening was in Colorado. We had planned a drive through the Garden of the Gods, and somehow I missed my opportunity to obtain a seat in the carriage beside her. Her regretful smile told me her story and my drawn face revealed to her my disappointment. I was about to say or do something silly when I caught her restraining eye, which said to me, as if in so many words, 'I am as sorry as you are, but we have no mutual rights which others are bound to respect.'

"I went away sorrowing, joining another party, to which I vainly tried to make myself agreeable.

"By a happy circumstance, which I felt sure was Fate, we met again near the entrance to the Garden of the Gods and a gentleman of her party asked me if I would exchange seats with him. Would I? I looked into his eyes, thinking he might have guessed my heart's desire, but they gave no hint of indirection. I eagerly accommodated him.

"Ah, that ride! It was through a veritable garden of the gods. To me it was also a glorious garden of sleep, for a new and delightful dream had taken possession of my bewildered brain. While others with curious interest commented on the strange likenesses to animals which the red rocks presented, I was watching the varying expressions on the face opposite me and wondering what it all meant to me.

"This is in no sense a diary. I therefore omit the details of the long ride by rail over gray-white sands; through stunted forests where trees grow from crevices in rocks and from between great boulders; past Indian villages where human beings swarm like ants but lack the ant's intelligent purpose and mind-directed industry; past homes and whole cities, pink and red with roses, past miles of irrigated small fruit ranches and other miles of land where the orange blossoms bloom.

"My recollections of San Diego are grouped about one supreme moment, or was it a half hour? We stood on the bayward side of Coronado Beach. The crescent moon, all too rapidly descending, had made for itself a glorious pathway of gold across the rough waters of the bay. Faint notes of music reached our ears from a small steamer far out on the bay, and, nearer, at irregular intervals, the thunderous boom of the surf against the rocks, followed by the angry swish of the defeated and retreating waves, gave to the scene of beauty a solemn grandeur, awing us to silence. Tears came to my eyes, illogical tears, the meaning of which I could not even guess. I turned my head far enough to see that Mary, too, was deeply moved. Her arm, firmly held in mine, began to tremble. I pressed it still more tightly and we resumed our walk. No word had been spoken and yet our hearts had held solemn conclave.

JOHNSON BRIGHAM.

"Later we found ourselves seated in a ballroom watching the dancers; but a strange silence had come upon us. It was, as I now clearly see, the silence following the full awakening of two hearts to the call of destiny.

"At Monterey there was another moment worth recalling. Seated in the midst of one of nature's most gorgeous flower gardens, under the far-spreading branches of a giant live oak, we vainly tried to hide our hearts behind feeble questions and answers as to the names and habits of flowers and trees and birds. Nothing but the shortness of the time since the beginning of our journey deterred me from then and there pouring into her ear the story she waited to hear, yet dared not anticipate.

"Our party occupied adjoining rooms in the great hotel at San Francisco. By another of those seeming accidents which govern our lives, we two met in one of the corridors late one evening, each waiting for the other members of the party to return from the theater. While we sat looking over the railing into the court below, recounting the experiences of the day, a bellboy interrupted us with the embarrassing inquiry, 'Are you the gentleman and lady in 347?' That was the room in front of which we chanced to be seated. I greatly admired the womanly dignity with which Mary turned on the boy and observed 'No'; nor did I fail to observe the faint blush on her face as we resumed our broken conversation.

"At Sacramento our party visited the Capitol, where all went well with us until a gentleman who piloted us about the building stopped to relate to Mary and a few others the history of some portrait on the wall. Seeing me standing near, he turned to Mary and said, 'Perhaps your husband would be interested,' pointing to me. This was too much. Her self-possession deserted her. Blushing and hysterically laughing, she stammered, 'He is not my husband.'

"The stranger's apology was spoiled by his too knowing smile and matters were not helped by the rest of the party, who called to me and explained the unintentional joke at our expense.

"At Nevada City, Cal., we took seats in the narrow chute that took us down many hundred feet into a gold mine. I have a faint recollection that the air was hot and the walls and floors were dripping, and that we were glad to return to the upper world; but I distinctly recall the thrill of delight with which I felt Mary's hands grasp my arms as we dropped into that seemingly bottomless pit. For a moment the plain, unpicturesque man of affairs felt himself a knight of high degree, and, like the knight of old romance, enjoyed himself immensely.

"I recall the sandy beach near Salt Lake City as the scene of the only attack of jealousy ever caused by my Mary's conduct. I had counted on the afternoon with her, and when I found her seated in the carriage on the way to the beach with a gentleman she had known in the East and when she passed me in her bathing suit and gave one hand to a relative and the other to this friend, I became supremely wretched. After a few moments spent in the water I dressed myself and took a seat on the wharf, vainly striving the while to divert my mind from this new cause of woe.

"Thereafter I was continually made conscious of an omnipresent uncle, tardily aroused to the duty and necessity of asserting himself and protecting his charge.

"The condition became unbearable. I determined to know the worst. Resuming our Eastward journey I watched my opportunity. The conscientious relative lay snoring in his stateroom. Mary and a friend sat on the platform, watching the majestic scenery of the Sierras and chatting gayly, as though scenery were little or nothing to them. They invited me to sit and made a place for me at their feet. Soon the friend found it convenient to go into the car, promising to return in a moment. The moment lengthened into hours.

"Whether it was the altitude or some injunction put upon her by her uncle I know not, but I found Mary strangely nervous, sensitively alert, timidly evasive, and, now that she was alone with me, abnormally observant of every detail of the scenery. Concluding that nothing could be gained by siege I nerved myself for an assault and when a sharp turn threw her slightly forward I caught her hand in mine and uttered the words:

"'Mary, do you think you could ever love me well enough to become my wife?'

"Our eyes met. She gave me a startled look, such as the deer gives when the wind brings suggestions of danger, and, her voice trembling with suppressed emotion, said:

"'Can it be you really want me—me—to become your wife?'

"I assured her that was my heart's desire. Her handgrasp tightened, and in low voice, close to my ear, she gave me the coveted answer:

"'I dare not trust myself to say more now than that I do not guess, I know, I love you, love you now, have loved you ever since we looked out on the bay that moonlight night on Coronado Beach.'

"And so we were wedded, heart to heart, for all time, and, as we trust, for all eternity, too. Most men are able to name the time and place when and where the fateful words were spoken. Most wives take a sentimental interest in the locality, the identical spot where 'he proposed.' But Mary and I are denied that satisfaction. We can only tell our friends that at some time in the afternoon of a certain May day in that year of grace, 18—, somewhere on the heights between Ogden and Denver, our perturbed spirits found repose.

"We mean to make the trip again some day and point out to our daughters, as nearly as we can, the spot where the words were said which meant so much to us."

To so charmingly told and so sweetly enacted a love story there remains no sequel, only this explanatory note.

The story is absolutely true and without exaggeration. It is the love story, heretofore unknown, of a noted man. A few years ago the National Editorial Association went, on its annual excursion, to the Pacific Coast. Crossing the great State of Iowa a special car of Iowa editors and newspaper men was attached. Through the Garden of the Gods, on to San Diego, to Los Angeles, to Monterey, to Sacramento, to San Francisco the party went.

In this Iowa car were two score of the leading editors of the State. Among them was Johnson Brigham and the lady who now bears his name. Today Johnson Brigham is State Librarian. As much as he has added to the shelves of the great library over which he presides, a modest little volume, entitled "An Old Man's Idyl," which discloses for the first time the romance of that memorable excursion, the love story of a bookman, a bookman so modest that he has sought to escape detection by giving to his little volume an assumed name, so that the man and woman next door may be cheated of their romance after all.

"SHIP ahoy!" cries old St. Louis these summer days to many a speeding motor boat dancing merrily by. The river has come again to its own. St. Louisans are going to it instead of away, as has been the drift for many a day. Once in the stately steamboat days the river was the center of interest, of fashion. Beaux and belles sought its shores to wait and watch for the steamboat's coming. The levee then was as popular as the boardwalk of Atlantic City. That day passed.

Fashion drifted westward. Drifted to the call of the greenwood, to the delight of shaded drives and lofty trees, to nooks where birds made music all the day. Sullen and silent the river, the river waited—biding its time, certain that the time would come. It has begun to come. The very instrument which threatened two years ago to woo all sport-loving folks from the river has worked paradoxically and brought the river into fashion.

The development of the automobile has worked the wonder. When the big touring cars, with their immense power concentrated in a small engine, became popular, the first impulse was to draw away from the river. Long trips through the forests, over rural ways, deep dives into nature were the thing. Then genius saw that the small engine with its great power would be the very thing for propelling a light swift boat. The autoboat was built. The autoboat, or motor boat, has become the fad. Half a hundred of them are now on the river, and more are being built.

The same type of engine which runs an automobile can be used on the motor boat. Its extreme lightness when contrasted to its power makes a light swift boat a possibility. While as yet there are no boats on the river whose speed can compare with the autoboats used in the races at Nice and in Florida, it is only a question of time until they appear. The river offers an ideal course, and the means of many of the younger St. Louisans enable them to introduce the racing boat. Time is not distant when autoboat races will be common on the river.

At present the St. Louis motor boats are used for pleasure. No finer, healthier way was ever devised. Cruising in your own motor boat up and down the Mississippi is the sanest of sports. The comforts of home are at the command of the pleasure seeker. In the larger boats, one such as Charles W. Nugent's "Theotiste," the occupants can eat, sleep, and even dance. Long river trips can be indulged without making a landing.

It is possible to go nearly across the continent in a boat of this type. The river route to New York is open. During the World's Fair several motor boats came from New York city to St. Louis. The route was up the Hudson river, through the Erie canal and across the lakes to the Chicago canal, thence through the Illinois river and Mississippi to St. Louis. The same trip can be reversed. St. Louisians can go to Chicago across the lakes and gain the Hudson river via the Erie canal. Or a more extended trip can be made from the lakes through the Welland canal into the St. Lawrence river. Then one can go into the heart of Canada to historic Quebec or down the river past the Thousand Islands to the Atlantic. Another trip that the hunting element among the St. Louis motor boatmen intend to make will take them almost to the Pacific coast. That is a voyage up the Missouri river to its source, until there are only a few hundred miles between the adventurers and the Western ocean.

CHARACTER OF THE RIVER ABOVE ST. LOUIS.

The great utility of the motor boat is in making short cruises in and about St. Louis. Within a half day's run of the city there is as fine scenery as one may find in a journey of a thousand miles. Historic interest, too, attaches to many localities within a few hours' trip. In about three hours the motor boatmen may reach Piasa, and there on the white Illinois cliffs see the fragments of the famous Piasa bird, painted hundreds of years ago by the Indians and known to the tribes throughout the West. Scientists have come from Europe to study the Piasa bird, seeking to find in it a symbol of a forgotten belief.

A little farther on up the Mississippi is Lover's Leap, where tradition tells how an Indian princess of the Illinois and her Osage chieftain lover jumped to death when their union was forbidden because of the hostility of the tribes.

Not far away is the mouth of Wood river, where Lewis and Clark camped the year they set out to give a Western empire to the United States. Alton, with the crumbling ruins of the famous military prison and the tall shaft of the Lovejoy monument on the hill, tells of the troublous times of the Civil War.

Down the river from St. Louis the scenery and historic interest are as fine. Jefferson Barracks, Kenneth Castle, the islands where the fire-eaters of the old regime fared to fight their duels are all within a half day's run. In fact a run up or down the river front, without leaving the city limits, will teach the motor boat tourist to view St. Louis from a new perspective. He will see lumber yards, factories, giant elevators and miles of railroad yards where set the tides of trade. In contrast to this incessant industry he will see the happiest, idlest people on earth—the shanty boat men of "Little Oklahoma" and "Chicken Town." They pay no rent, and the river brings them about all they want—food and driftwood for fuel.

A few motor boats have been on the river for several years, but it was seldom that one could see more than two or three out. Since the organization of the St. Louis Motor Boat Club, which was recently formed with 50 charter members, the river has been alive with the light fleet craft. More boats are now being built, and before the summer has reached its meridian there will be a fleet which in number, if not in size, will remind mariners of the good old steamboat days.

The boats now being used by members of the club are of various dimensions. They range from the 80-foot, $25,000 "Albermath," owned by Charles C. Johnson, to the trim, dainty little launches which cost $600. There are many boats in commission which are worth over $2000. The "Albermatla" has a beam of 20 feet, a draught of 2 feet and has 100 horse-power derived from four 25-horse-power motors. She has two stern wheels and can go 12 miles an hour. She is one of the finest craft of her kind on the Mississippi. Gasoline is used for fuel. The boat is finished in white enamel, and has sleeping accommodations for 24 guests beside the crew. Her cabin is equipped with a piano and a pianola, and the boat throughout is lighted by electricity.

Charles W. Nugent's "Theotiste" and John C. Meyer's "Anna Belle" are two handsome cabin cruisers, of nearly the same type, but with distinct variations in their decks. The "Theotiste" is 52 feet long, with a 10½-foot beam. She has 60 horse-power, and can maintain a speed of 12 miles an hour. She cost $10,000. The "Anna Belle" is 45 feet long, beam 8 feet 6 inches, 40 horse-power and has a speed of 15 miles per hour.

Among the smaller craft there are the gasoline launches "Lorena II," owned by J. H. Schwieg and R. H. Combs, and the "Blanche," owned by Orr & Von Behren. They are of the same type, being 21 feet in length, 5½-foot beam and driven by 7 horse-power at a speed of 9 miles an hour. They cost $700. The little "Zipp" is another motor boat of the same class.

In the view showing three launches the center boat is V. T. Combs' cabin cruiser, "Lorena III," 32 feet long, 7-foot beam, 14-horsepower. She cost $1500 and has a speed of 14 miles. The launch on the ways is the "Vivian," 25 feet long, with an 8 horse-power engine. In the water is the little launch "Adele," of the same type as the "Lorena II."

Dr. Max Starkloff's houseboat forms a background for the fleeter craft. The Doctor, however, has a cabin cruiser, the "Irma," which classes with the best of them. She is 43 feet long, with an 8-foot beam, and has a speed of 14 miles an hour. Horace Rumsey's yacht, "Louise Rumsey," is about the same dimensions, and cost $3700. The "Duchess," C. E. Curby's steam yacht, is slightly larger than the "Louise Rumsey." She is 55 feet in length and cost $8500. Frank Bowman of East St. Louis is now owner of one of the latest model motor boats. It has just recently been launched at St. Joseph, Mich., and has made its trial trip from Chicago via the Illinois River to St. Louis. Mr. Bowman has called her the "Mary B. Franklin." She cost over $10,000. She is 64 feet in length, 13 feet 6 inches beam, draws 3 feet and has a speed of over 15 miles an hour. The draught makes her suitable for deep-water cruising. The engine is 64 horse-power. Gasoline is the fuel us

Fred Medart also has one of the trimmest launch the river, 35 feet long with 6 feet beam and of 20 h power.

Food in Its Relation to Muscular Development—Athletes Who Eat Too Much—Normal Weight in the Army About Five Pounds Higher Than the Raw-Food Normal.

IN DIETETICS a new idea has generated a new cult in St Louis—the Raw Food Cult. Although the idea took formal shape in the East only a few years ago, the devotees in St. Louis already number between twenty-five and thirty. The fundamental tenet of the cult is that fire or heat applied to food vitiates it so as to make it unfit for man's consumption. The devotees insist that man must eat his food in the condition in which nature supplies it to him and that therefore it consists best of fruits, nuts and grains without condiments, sugar, flavoring, cooking or baking.

THE raw food idea is a development or extension of the vegetarian idea that the flesh of animals is unfit for human food. The new cult accordingly draws its principal adherents from the vegetarians. President H. Reichard and Secretary Edgar G. Perkins of the St. Louis Vegetarian Society are leading exponents of the cult in St. Louis. They are the outspoken members of a circle, made up of a score or more of men and women, the rest of whom practice the raw food idea with entire conviction, but with a minimum of publicity. Among the women who follow the diet is Miss Anna Reichard, daughter of Mr. H. Reichard.

One of the foremost adherents of the raw food cult in St. Louis is George A. Grenier, a man of remarkable physical development, foreman in a St. Louis furniture factory, and who has studied foods and their values for a decade and a half in experiments conducted upon himself. He knows off-hand the classification—whether "proteid," "fat," "hydro-carbon" water or "mineral salt"—of all the ordinary foods, and can give from memory the "fuel value" per pound of most of the foods.

"I have tried practically every system that has been devised in recent years for the preservation of health," says Mr. Grenier. "I have taken several expensive trips to New York and conferred at length with McFadden and others who have given thought to the subject. I have tested on myself every system of diet which came to me by reading or observation. As a result I have come to use uncooked foods entirely. Most of the great athletes I have studied pursue a wrong diet. I have taken meals with the greatest athletes of St. Louis and other cities, and found that they eat meat and cooked foods with a wonderful disregard for results.

"The desideratum of diet is not the production of great, knotty, hard muscles, standing out like whipcords all over the body, but rather the production of nervous force. I have come to the conclusion that an undue increase in muscular equipment results in a diminution of vital and nerve force. Many of the great athletes at whose muscular development the world wonders, have overdone exercise to such an extent that their heart is enlarged and their vital organs—stomach, kidneys, lungs, liver, spleen, etc.—are debilitated from overwork. Their brain and nervous system, too, have suffered from the same overtax.

"Muscle can be produced from any diet, nervous and vital force can come only from a diet of raw food. Every athlete I have met over-eats and over-exercises. Over-exercise must follow over-eating. The exercise is needed to work off the unnecessary food. This makes all the vital organs, especially the organs of excretion, work unduly, and results in ultimate debility.

"A raw food diet is likely to be a disappointment to the beginner. It tends to bring the body up or down to its normal weight. Accordingly most persons when they begin the diet lose weight. I weighed nearly 200 pounds, and was in what seemed to me good physical condition when I began the diet. My weight has diminished to about 160 pounds, but my vital energy and my nervous force has increased. The weight I lost was 'beef,' muscular or adipose tissue, that served no useful purpose, and had to be carried around and maintained at the expense of vital and nervous force.

"Persons who are below their normal weight are made heavier by a diet of raw food. The army weight is five to ten pounds higher than the real normal weight. The army tables, to which the soldier must conform before he is accepted for enlistment, allow for 'beef.'

"I eat but two meals a day, and those are made up entirely of fruits, nuts and grains. I do not take exercise simply for the sake of exercise. I have a pair of dumbbells, but I have not used them for a long time. Ordinary avocations and amusements supply all the exercise I need. I find I am absolutely tireless. During the World's Fair I was able to walk about sight-seeing from early morning to late night, and at the end be almost as fresh as when I started.

"Anything which differs from popularly accepted notions is apt to excite ridicule. This is especially true in matters of personal habit. The word 'crank' is always on the lips of men who have neither the sense to solve questions for themselves nor the strength of will to carry out conclusions which others have reached by experiment or observation. I have nothing to gain except ridicule by relating my experiences."

President Reichard of the St. Louis Vegetarian Society has made even more curious dietary experiments than Mr. Grenier.

"I have, in my experiments, eaten the flesh of practically every animal available to a city civilization," he says, "and I have come to the raw food diet as the best for man. I have even experimented on others to determine the effect of diet on the mind. My brother-in-law was living at my home. We were there alone, and I was doing the cooking. I killed a young kitten, cleaned it and stewed it as if it had been a spring chicken.

"'I've got some nice spring chicken for dinner tonight,' I told my brother-in-law when he came home that night. It looked tempting, and we both ate it with gusto. By the taste it is impossible to distinguish between spring chicken and kitten, and, as my brother-in-law was not enough of an anatomist to distinguish by the bones, the meal was a perfect success.

"Next morning, when my brother-in-law came down to breakfast, I opened the ice-box and told him, 'I have some more of that nice spring chicken we had last night. Would you like to have some fried this morning?' I held up the platter containing the remains of the kitten. As it lay there it looked, not like spring chicken, but like kitten. He examined it suspiciously. He knew I had been making experiments in the palatability of the meat of various animals.

"'My——,' he said, 'what is it?'

"'It's rabbit,' I said. 'Nice young rabbit.'

"He sank down on a chair, pale and deathly sick. 'What have you given me, cat or dog?' he asked.

"He was practically inconsolable, and he could not have been induced to touch another mouthful of the meat for anything.

"The incident showed me how much we are slaves of custom. I cannot understand why a man should eat roast pork with enjoyment and refuse a horse steak with loathing; why he should smack his lips over a spring chicken and be nauseated by a dish of stewed kitten. The same custom which makes these invidious distinctions between different kinds of meat has made a meat eater of man, who by nature is a gramnivorous animal. I have been living almost exclusively on raw food for months. My weight has not increased, but my health has improved. I was frequently sick before, but since I adopted this diet I have not had a sick day.

"My daughter, who works with me in my studio here, is also a raw food devotee. We do not have to go out of the studio for our midday luncheon. We always have here a supply of fruits and nuts. That is amply sufficient. We raw food disciples contend that God or nature, as you wish, has put man's food on earth ready for use. Anything that is worth eating at all is worth eating in its natural state, without cooking, baking, salting, peppering or sugaring."

"How about potatoes and peanuts?" was asked. "Don't they need fire to make them available as foods?"

"That is the point at which the raw food cult departs from the vegetarians," was the answer. "The raw food folks contend that tubers, which really are the roots of plants, are not intended to be food for man. They form the food for the animals equipped by nature to root them up—animals like hogs. Peanuts and potatoes both grow underground, and are therefore not man's food."

In the East the adherents of the raw food cult have begun to object to the use of the word "raw" and to substituting the word "uncooked" in describing their dietary habits. This point is one made in a volume on the cult, published in New York by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christian, under the title "Uncooked Foods, and How to Use Them."

The authors give, as follows, "three ideal meals for a perfectly normal person":

Breakfast.

One red Apple. Two ounces Pecan Meats.
Six or eight black dates.
One very ripe Banana, sliced with thick cream.
One glass Milk.

Lunch.

Two Bartlett Pears. One ounce Pecan Meats.
Three Turkish pulled Figs. One ounce Pignolias.
Cold Slaw with Olive Oil. One cake of Unfired Bread.
Four Prunes with thick cream. Sweet Butter.
Glass of Egg-nog.

Dinner.

Half pound of Grapes. Two ounces mixed Nut Meats.
Vegetable Salad with Hygeia Dressing.
One cake Unfired Bread. Cream Cheese.
Six or eight Black Dates.
Very ripe red Banana with thick cream.
Pint of Whole Milk.

Following are a number of recipes approved by the raw food cult:

BEESTEAK A LA TARTAR.

Steak, Salt,
Onions, Green Peppers,
Pepper, Parsley,
Eggs.

Take a porterhouse or sirloin steak of the size desired. Grind very fine. Mix with minced onion, pepper and salt. Mound up on a small platter, make a depression in the top in which put the unbroken yolk of an egg. Garnish with green pepper and parsley, and serve.

CHIPPED BEEF IN CREAM.

Shave dried beef very fine. Pour over it warm water and let stand for a few minutes. Pour this off and pour on thick cream with a little parsley chopped fine. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Midday Luncheons Made Up Entirely of Fruits, Nuts and Grains—Tubers, Such as Potatoes, Pronounced Fit Only for Rooting Animals, Like Swine—Authentic Food Values.

CLAMS AND OYSTERS.

These articles do not possess any very great food properties and when taken uncooked they are more nourishing and less harmful. They should never be eaten with catsup, vinegar, horseradish or sauces.

DRIED AND SMOKED FISH.

Herring, anchovies, smoked salmon or any dried fish can be made quite palatable by seasoning, thoroughly and soaking 5 to 10 minutes in very warm water.

HYGEIA SALAD DRESSING.

2 Eggs, 1 cup Whipped Cream,
½ Lemon, Sugar,
2 tablespoonfuls Olive Oil. Salt.

To the yolks of the eggs, beaten very stiff, add the oil and juice of the lemon very slowly, beating hard all the while, until it has all been added and is quite thick. Then add the beaten white of eggs, salt and sugar to taste, and last, one cup of whipped cream; whip all together until very stiff and set on ice until ready to serve.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS.

Cucumbers, Lettuce,
Cream Cheese, Tomato,
Dressing.

Cut an eighth or quarter from the cucumber, scoop out the inside, and cut this and tomato in small bits and mix the two with salad dressing. Return to the shell and put each cucumber on a plate, by itself, on lettuce leaf. Small round balls of cream cheese make a nice decoration and add a nice flavor to this.

STUFFED PRUNES.

Soak prunes until soft. Remove pits and stuff with nut meats.

CHERRY PIE.

Flaked Wheat, Cherries,
Milk, Whipped Cream.

Take enough flaked wheat to make the crust. Add a little salt. Put in just enough milk to moisten thoroughly. Let stand two or three hours. Butter the tin to prevent sticking, spread the wheat over the pan, the same as pie dough. Then set in a warm place—probably on the shelf over the stove—until thoroughly dry. Take out cherry pits, add sugar, spread the cherries over the crust, then (for meringue) a layer of whipped cream.

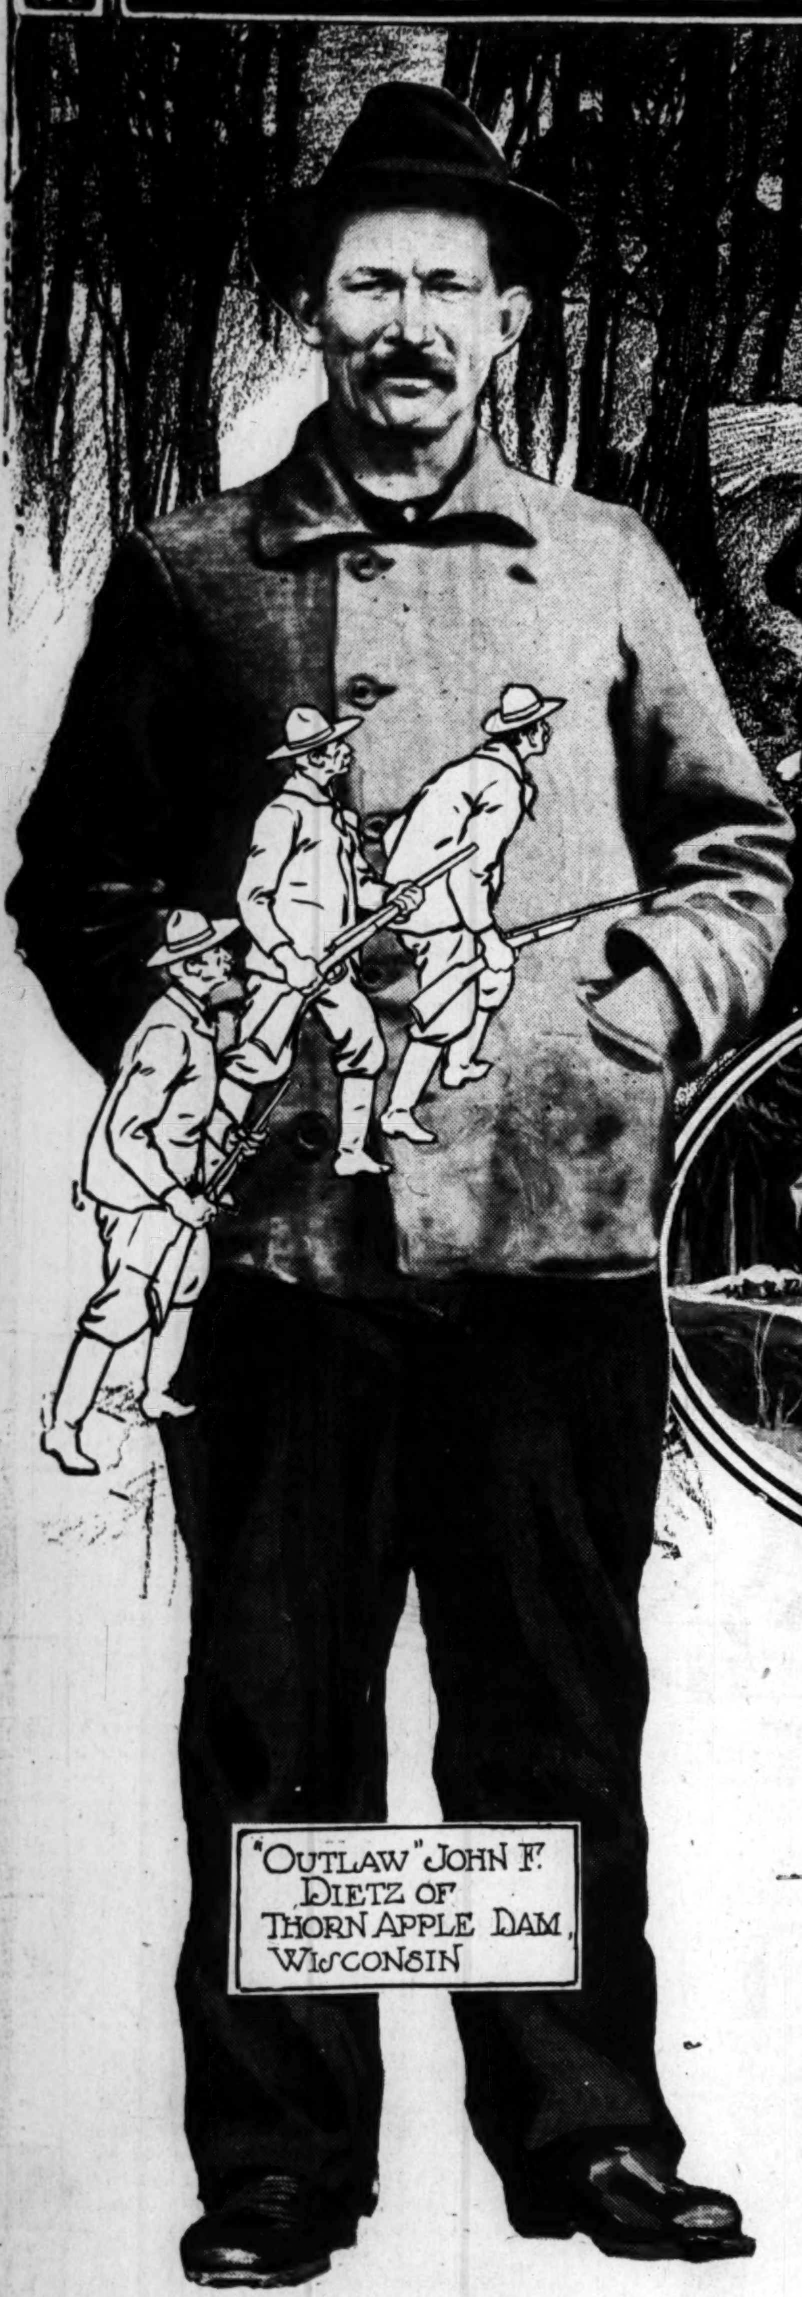
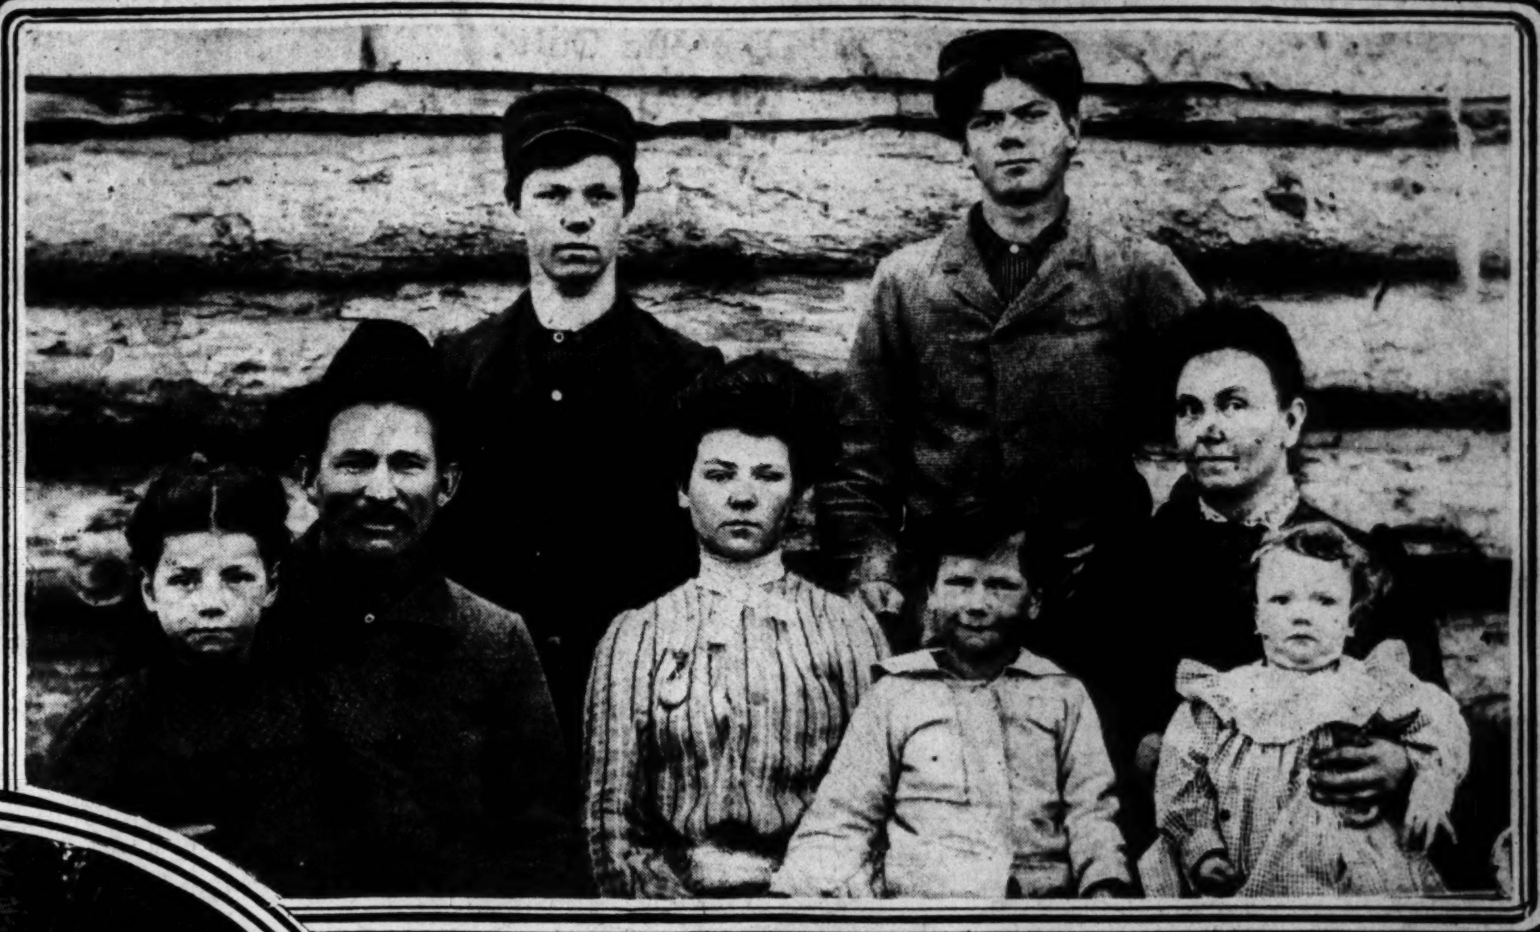
THEY CAN'T ARREST "OUTLAW" DIETZ

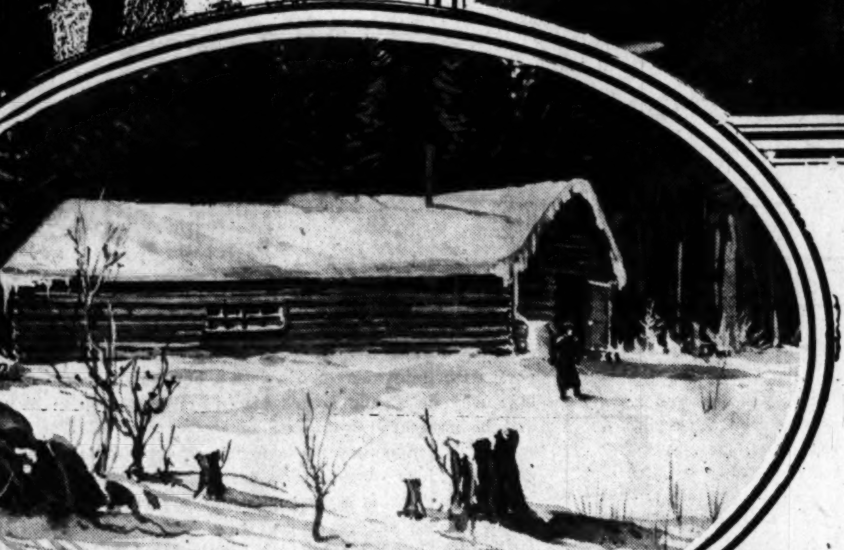
For More Than a Year He Has Successfully Resisted a State's Efforts To Oust Him From His Home



"OUTLAW" JOHN F. DIETZ OF THORN APPLE DAM, WISCONSIN



"OUTLAW" JOHN F. DIETZ, AND HIS FAMILY



HOME OF "OUTLAW" DIETZ

One Fearless, Stubborn Minnesota Lumberman Holds 20,000,000 Feet of Logs Captive Behind This Dam

IT IS up to Uncle Sam now.

John F. Deitz, single-handed and alone, defying Court and Sheriff, holds the Cameron dam, on the Thorn Apple River. For a year not a log has gone by, and now 20,000,000 feet of logs lie stalled above in the river bottoms. The lumber business on that river is at a standstill because of one man. During that time he has successfully defied the authorities, by the help of his wife and six children. He has dodged warrants and injunctions got out by the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Co. He has whipped lumber-camp bullies and the so-called "killers" with his fists and taken away their guns.

"I own the dam and the property adjacent," says he, "and I won't give it up to a single soul until I am not only paid its value, but the money that is due me for 845 days' labor for the company."

A representative from the Mississippi River Logging Co. only a few days ago offered Deitz, the fearless one, $12,500 for the Cameron, but he refused it because the sale provided that he would allow the company $6000 for trouble incurred in putting the company's logs over the dam.

Deitz offered to settle for $10,000 last summer, and his offer was refused. Then Deitz formally notified the company that it would cost $1000 for every additional month that settlement was delayed. He has kept his word. Now he says it will cost $10,000 for logs already sluiced, wages for two years and a half now due him, and extra compensation for the trouble he has undergone fighting off sheriffs, woodsmen and lumbermen, all sent by the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Co., as well as sheriffs and marshals.

Deitz lives in a rude log cabin, 12 miles from Winter, a new station on a branch of the Omaha Railroad, 157 miles northeast of Minneapolis. With his wife and six children Deitz is far removed from the wiles of courts and their officers. To reach his home it is necessary to drive 12 miles through a hardwood forest, which in winter shows tracks of deer and other large game in the heavy snow. The Deitz home stands on a hill in a clearing, a stone's throw from the Thorn Apple River. Some 80 rods south of the cabin is the famous "Cameron dam," which has brought Deitz so much notoriety.

In a nutshell, Deitz declares that the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Co. employed him to watch Price dam, on the Brunette River, some years ago, and promised to sell him land in the vicinity for $2.50 an acre. The company utterly repudiates this claim for 845 days' work in watching Price dam, and his claim for damages because of flowage from the Cameron dam.

One day Deitz discovered that the greater part of the Cameron dam was on one of his "forties," and he immediately proceded to make trouble for the lumber company. Controlling the dam, he refused to allow the company a head of water to float out its logs, and because of the company's inability to get Deitz away from the dam it has some 20,000,000 feet of logs, valued at $600,000, strung along the bottoms of the Thorn Apple River..

The matter was fought out in the courts, Deitz ignoring the entire proceedings, and Judge Parrish's ruling was entirely in favor of the lumber company. Deitz, who had aroused the indignation of the court by his refusal to appear and by his many "acts of outlawry," was roasted to a turn by the judge.

But Judge Parrish had not heard Deitz's side of the case, so a correspondent of the Sunday Post-Dispatch went to see him at his home to hear what he had to say.

In Chippewa Falls every man warned against Deitz. He was an outlaw, a "killer," a bad man, who would shoot the first man who approached his house, and countless stories of Deitz's prowess with his fists were thrown into the shade by tales of his cleverness with a gun.

Before leaving Chippewa, therefore, his brother, W. W. Deitz of Rice Lake, was asked to accompany the party. Mr. Deitz demurred at first, pleading press of business and the probable futility of the mission, but he consented to be at the train next morning and "look you over." True to his promise, he was on the platform when the train pulled in. He inspected the party carefully and did not appear particularly fearful.

"Look here, gentlemen," said Deitz. "I've made up my mind to accompany you if you're 'right.' But if you are going up there to play any tricks, my advice to you is to go back. I grew up with John Deitz and he is the last man I would select to take liberties with. You had better understand that."

Mr. Deitz, who is in the insurance business at Rice Lake, proved to be a man of wide information and a most agreeable companion. He was Sheriff of Barron County for 20 years, is thoroughly enlisted in his brother's cause and knows Northern Wisconsin like a book. It will be readily surmised that the cleverness with which his brother has eluded service of court papers is due to the thorough coaching he has received from a man who knows all about such matters.

Montgomery Wiley, a fat boy of 16 years, who was hauling flour on a bob-sled, agreed to take the party to John Deitz's farm.

Mr. Deitz stood up in the sled and gave the signal to his brother, who came out of his cabin, yelled back a welcome and in less time than it takes to tell it all were shaking hands with John Deitz, the famous "outlaw" of Sawyer County, and his wife and six children to an accompaniment of barking dogs.

There stood a man of about 5 feet 10 inches in height, of sandy complexion, clear, penetrating blue eyes, a good forehead, a large, pleasant mouth, a bald head and a countenance reflecting great good nature and animation. He looked nothing like your typical outlaw.

He is at present master of Cameron dam. No man in Wisconsin has yet had the hardihood to set foot on it since Deitz set up a sign on the line of his property, "No Trespass," a year ago. The dam is half a mile south of the house, over the hill and out of sight; but it is as safe from trespass as the ground under Deitz's window.

In discussing his case he made constant reference to telegrams and letters which he showed, received from the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Co., which, without questioning the justice of the court's findings or the contention of the lumber company, show that Deitz has some sort of a claim on the consideration of the company.

The fact that he was permitted to live in one of the company's watch houses for years and to perform, as he certainly did perform, certain services under the direction of the company's foreman, is significant.

One of the telegrams shown by Deitz is as follows:

"Watchman at Price Dam: April 10, 1901.

"Raise head of water for use of Joe Buckwheat, if it can be done with safety.

"H. G. CHICHESTER, Secretary."

Here is a letter from William Irvine, general manager of the company, dated Feb. 11, 1904:

"We have yours of the 10th inst. The matter has been referred to Mr. Mulligan, and we have asked him to make settlement with you in compliance with your request."

These and similar papers, which Deitz treasures carefully, show indisputably that the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Co. had occasional dealings with Deitz.

Deitz's own story of his connection with the company tells of his settling at Price dam on the Brunette River in 1901 at the instance of Foreman Mulligan of the lumber company.

"I agreed to take charge of the dam," said Deitz to the Sunday Post-Dispatch correspondent, "and to keep the gates up until I got orders from the office to close them. Mulligan paid me $10 for raising the water for Buckwheat before I received the telegram from the company. Thirteen months later Mulligan came back and ordered me to gravel the floor of the dam and raise a head of water for the Lower Chippewa drive.

"In 1900 I went down to see Secretary Chichester and to file a claim for damage from flowage. I asked him if he wanted to sell that land and he said 'yes.' I agreed to buy it at $2.50 per acre. He told me to go ahead and make any improvements I liked, and I went to work and pulled out stumps.

"I made several trips to Chippewa, and Chichester told me the company was being reorganized and there was no one to sign papers—this when I talked of buying the land. He finally told me that the company had reorganized and left me out of consideration, and for me to see Irvine about it.

"Irvine offered to sell me the land for $2.50 per acre, but when I asked: 'How about my wages?' he replied. 'The raise in the value of the land will more than offset your wages.'

"Deitz next received the letter from Chichester regarding a settlement with Mulligan which precipitated one of his greatest fights. Armed with Chichester's letter, he sought out Mulligan and explained his presence in the lumber camp. Deitz's own story of the fight is modest, but Attorney Connor tells it well. According to Deitz Mulligan refused to listen to him, called him vile names and ordered him out of the camp.

"I told him not to call me a liar," said Deitz, "but he kept on abusing me and wouldn't let me talk business, although I had Chichester's letter to prove that I was there on business. It ended in a fight. I gave him a 'back-hander' and handed one of his gang who came at me a stick of wood a cuff. They didn't come back and I away."

Attorney Connor's version of this battle, told afterwa is far more picturesque.

"Armed with a letter of some kind, he asked Mulligan to O. K. his bill for services. Mulligan refused, whereupon Deitz, in the presence of the whole crew, told Mulligan that he would either O. K. the bill or take a licking.

"Well, Mulligan didn't O. K. the bill, and he did take the licking. Sealer Brown, who attempted to interfere, was also given a beating by Deitz. Then the great courage of the man came out. Stepping up in front of the entire crew he invited them to tackle him singly or in groups, but although there were some husky fellows in the crowd, not a man went after him."

Deitz told at length of his interview with Thomas Sargent, who came up to survey the land for the company and found that the dam was located on one of Deitz's forties.

"I told Sargent that the company owed me for 845 days' work," said Deitz, "and also that they had run 80,000,000 feet of logs through my dam without settling for the privilege. I asked him 10 cents a thousand for this service, which is the price fixed by the statutes of Wisconsin.

"Sargent told me he thought my terms reasonable, and told me to go ahead and prepare the water for a drive. I did so, and he returned in one week with an offer of $500 if I would relinquish all my rights. I refused, and told him to let the property alone. He told me if I persisted in refusing the company the use of the dam, the company would blow out the south wing of it, which it owned. I told him to blow it until he got tired. He also threatened me with legal proceedings."

Deitz is in no sense a backwoodsman, ignorant and illiterate. He lived in Rice Lake for 20 years and held many important offices in the village. He was Town Clerk, Justice of the Peace, and has a fund of information about municipal business. He is a good talker, ready, clear-headed and convincing. No man could listen to his feeling portrayal of his wrongs, whether real or imaginary, without being impressed with the man's sincerity.

Mrs. Deitz, the devoted wife and mother, is a splendid woman who has suffered terribly.

"They say my husband was not employed to watch the dam," she said. "One day, when some dams above us had been swept away and a great head of water bore down on Price dam, I sent Myra, my oldest girl, and Leslie, my boy, to raise the gates in the hope of saving the company's property. The children waded out almost waist-deep in the rushing water and managed to raise the gates. I expected they would be swept away every minute. Do you think I would send my children on such a dangerous errand if I had not thought we were working for the company?"

"That is not all, mother, that we have to thank the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Co. for," said Myra, a tall, beautiful girl of 16, resting her hand on her mother's shoulder. "You had better tell these gentlemen of the attempt to poison us. I don't say that the company did it, but some one poisoned our spring. I went to the spring one morning for water and took a drink of it before returning to the house. I noticed a very peculiar taste to it, and it made me sick instantly. I vomited and almost had convulsions, and my limbs were numb for several days."

The rafters of the living rooms are strewn with Winchesters and every member of the family can shoot.

EXPERTS STUDY THE GREAT PREMIER DIAMOND

THE Premier, or Cullinan Diamond, the largest on earth, recently found in the Premier diamond mine in South Africa, has been taken to London, under an insurance of $1,250,000, and has been studied by diamond experts. The stone is almost perfectly pure; a few grains are present, and it contains some flaws or cleavage planes, but fortunately they are so disposed that they can be cut away without appreciably reducing the size of the cut gem.

Dr. G. A. F. Molengraaff describes the diamond as a single crystal having no twining planes or lamellae. It is perfectly transparent and looks like a piece of pure ice. He says "it is certainly the purest of all the very big stones known." Its structure shows that the stone was originally much larger. This is proved by the four flat cleavage planes, which have the regular octahedral position. Only a small portion of the natural surface of the stone remains, and the fragments broken off must each have been very large. Whether these fragments will ever be found is a question which introduces the interesting study of the formation of diamonds.

But as a diamond in the rough it comes very near being the champion. But one other stone of equal or greater size has been discovered in the world's history, and that one proved, when cut, to be of such poor quality and was so lacking in brilliancy that its estimated value was very greatly reduced.

This stone was found in Brazil in the eighteenth century and was sent to the court of Portugal, to which nation Brazil then belonged. Its weight, uncut, is given at 1680 grains, which would be equivalent to 3720 carats. Its discovery created a great sensation, and its value was estimated by experts at as high as $28,000,000. When cut it turned out to be worth but $2,000,000.

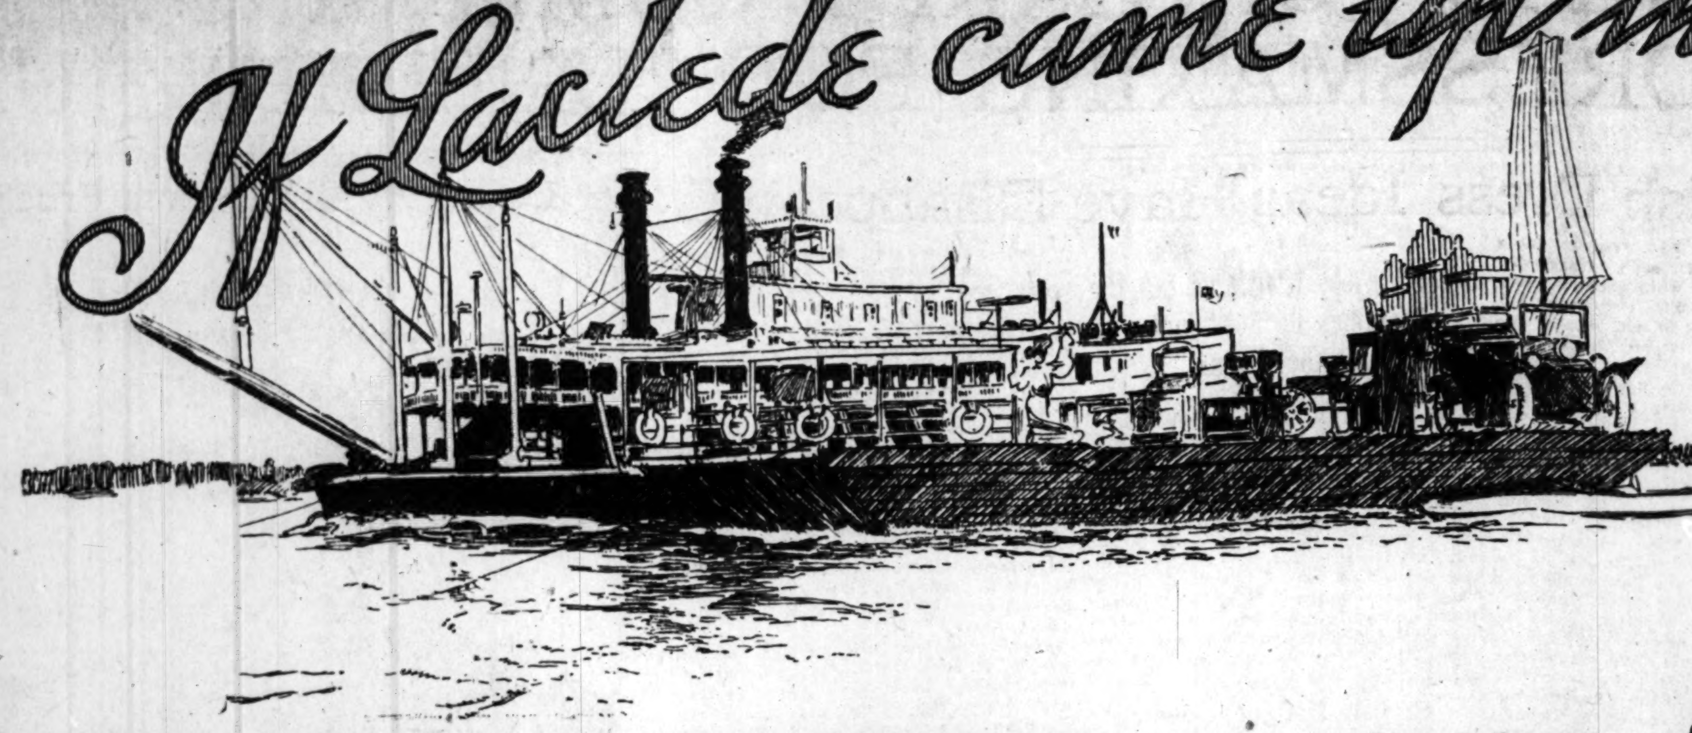
The stone found at Johannesburg may turn out to be nearer the value estimated by present-day experts, as the system of estimating values in diamonds has been greatly improved of late years. Nothing definite may be told of its real value, however, until it is cut. What per cent of its weight will be lost in cutting can only be determined by the shape of the stone. It is probable, however, that the loss will be from 40 to 60 per cent, which is about the average loss of the great stones of history. Its brilliancy is another thing which will play an important part in its actual value and this cannot be determined until the stone has been cut.

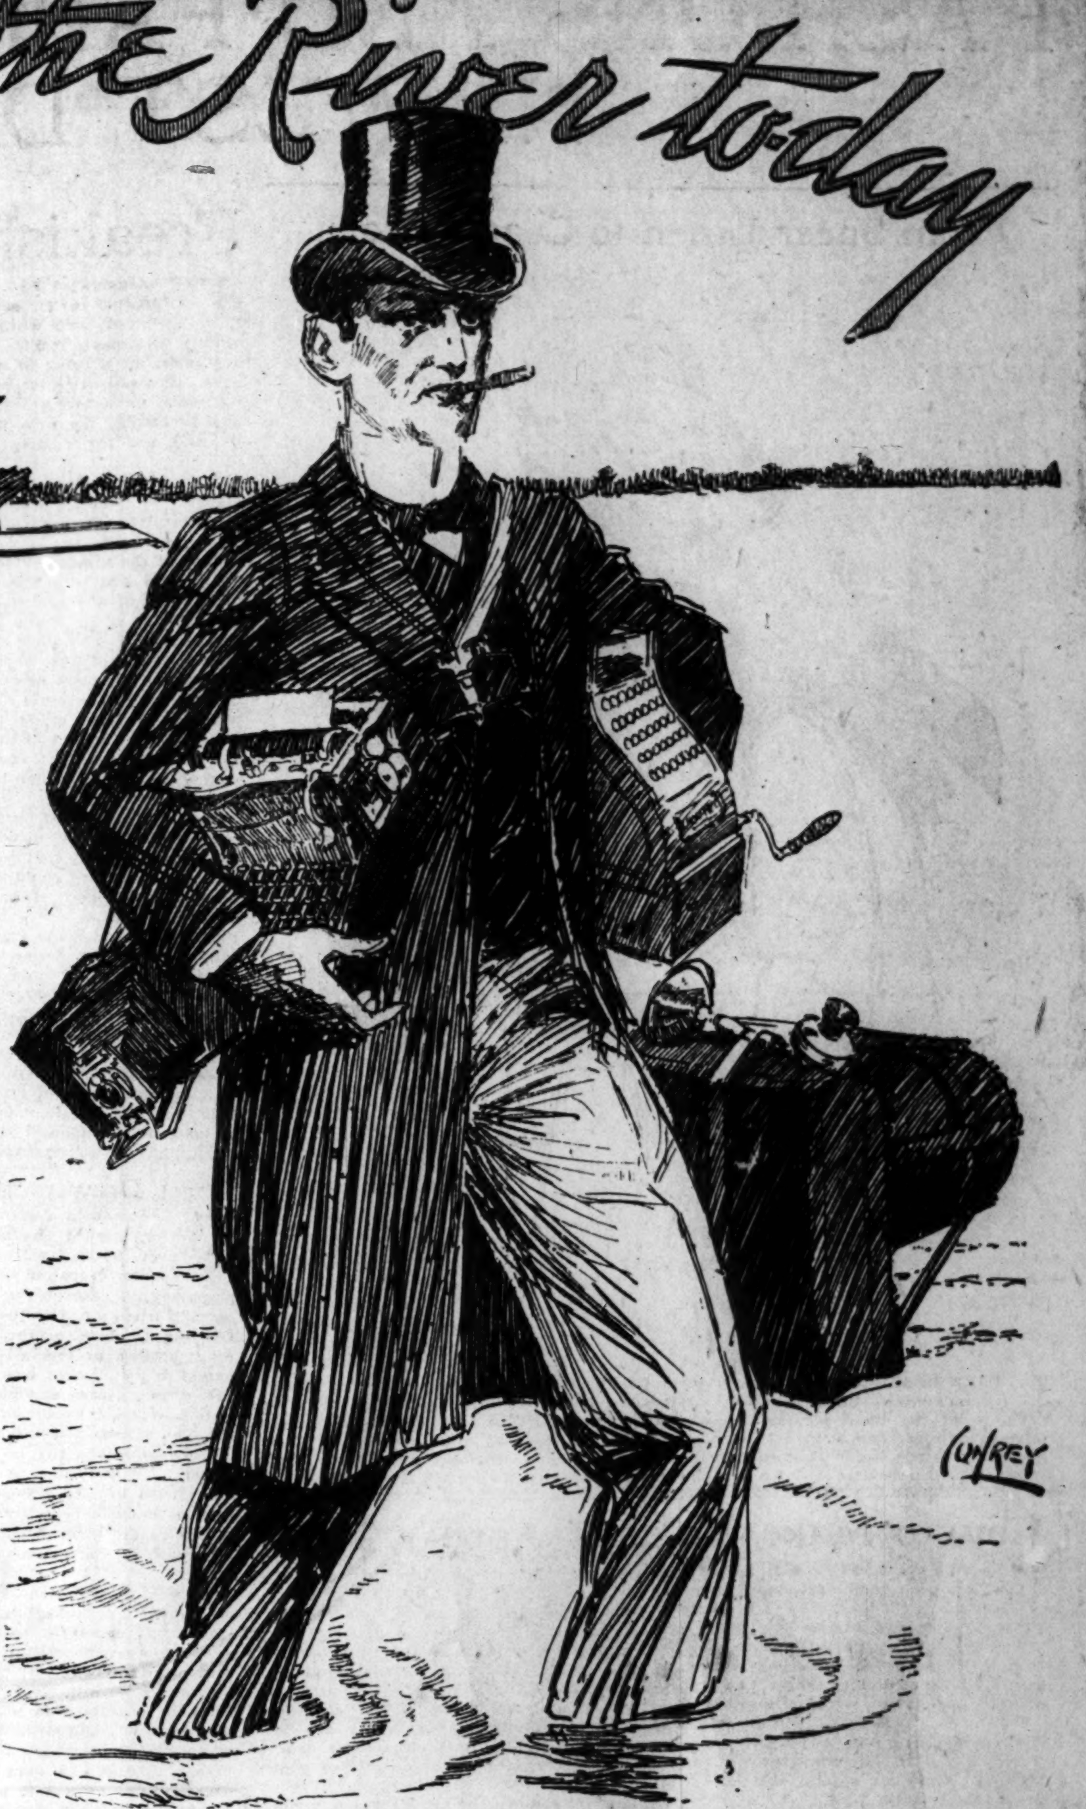
It is probable, because of its great size and weight, which will render it unwieldy as an ornament, that the stone will not be kept intact, but that it will be cut into several smaller stones. To preserve it in one would mean that it would be available only as a curiosity. Few collectors would care to place the amount which it would cost them in such a stone. The owners of the South African mines, who are accredited with being able, if they desire, to preserve the stone integrally, have little sentiment in such matters. To them diamonds have no value save a commercial one.

The size of a 3000-carat diamond would compare, as explained by the most prominent experts in the country, with a mass of putty of the size of a four-pound weight used on grocers' scales. Such a mass, fashioned roughly in a round mass, would make approximately the size of the diamond unearthed in South Africa. Approximately its weight would be 621.65 drams or about a pound and a half avoirdupois.

As compared to any diamond in recent years, the one just discovered is easily the champion. The last one to attract attention is known as the Syndicate, and was dug from the De Beers mines at Pretoria about two years ago. Before cutting it weighed 900 carats, less than a third of the present stone.

If Laclede came up the River to-day





Just What the Founder of St. Louis Would Take Along If He Were Now Starting on His Famous Voyage.

The Amazing Progress of a Century Shown at a Glance—"Discovery Made Easy"—Penetrating the Wilderness and Struggling With Savage Hordes Under Comfortable Circumstances—How Science Has Added to the White Man's Conquering Powers but Shown the Indomitable Courage of the Old Explorers.

IN order to bring home to the reader the amazing progress of invention during the past century an ingenious writer has described just how Laclede would come up the Mississippi if he were starting to found St. Louis today. The tale is one of extraordinary contrasts. It is not a century and a half since Laclede's voyage was made, yet the inventions and practical discoveries since that time are greater in number than those of the preceding thousand years.

But for these inventions, chief among which is steam, St. Louis today would be a remote country village. In fact, Jefferson expected that without steam it would take a thousand years to settle the Louisiana Purchase. But Laclede's imaginary voyage, made under modern conditions, shows that steam is only one of a large number of inventions undreamed of a century ago but important commonplaces of today. And when you think what an easy and comfortable thing discovery would be [illegible]y, you have all the more respect for Laclede [illegible] daring contemporaries, who accomplished [illegible]s in the face of obstacles that modern inventions have removed.

Here is the modern voyage of Laclede, coming up the Mississippi in a modern steamboat to found St. Louis in a modern way:

IN 1763 Laclede toiled up the great river in a batteau. In 1905 he steamed. Then it took three months for him to reach Fort Chartres, a half-way resting place. Now he was going in six days to the site of the city he had planned. For the first voyage he had loaded his batteau with all the necessities, all the luxuries, he could gather, for he was about to plunge into the wilderness and he wanted arms to fight with, goods to trade with, luxuries to amuse himself and family with. What he had, what he could gather, were all piled on a scow 30x12 feet in dimensions.

This time the great steamboat was loaded with the things which the modern explorer deems essential.

Laclede had a fine armory when he first sailed to found a town—10 flintlock muskets, as the new improved gun was called, five matchlocks and a small but highly prized cannon made of bronze in Spain. He carried a number of pikes, useful weapons for close work in Indian warfare. Starting on his second voyage of exploration, Laclede had some fifty of the new improved Japanese model rifles, which the government had issued in place of the obsolete Krag-Jorgensons. The rifles carried a long, small, nickeled steel bullet in the magazines, and were accurate up to a mile. Using the cartridge clips, some of Laclede's expert marksmen could fire accurately 20 shots a minute. Anticipating that the Indians might surprise him some day when he was exploring the canebrakes and come to close quarters before his men could unsling their rifles, Laclede had provided them with a brace of automatic pistols. Each man carried two of these in holsters. They were short, small weapons, capable of discharging 10 shots in 10 seconds from a magazine. All one had to do was to hold the trigger back and the pistol worked automatically. Useful weapons they proved to be.

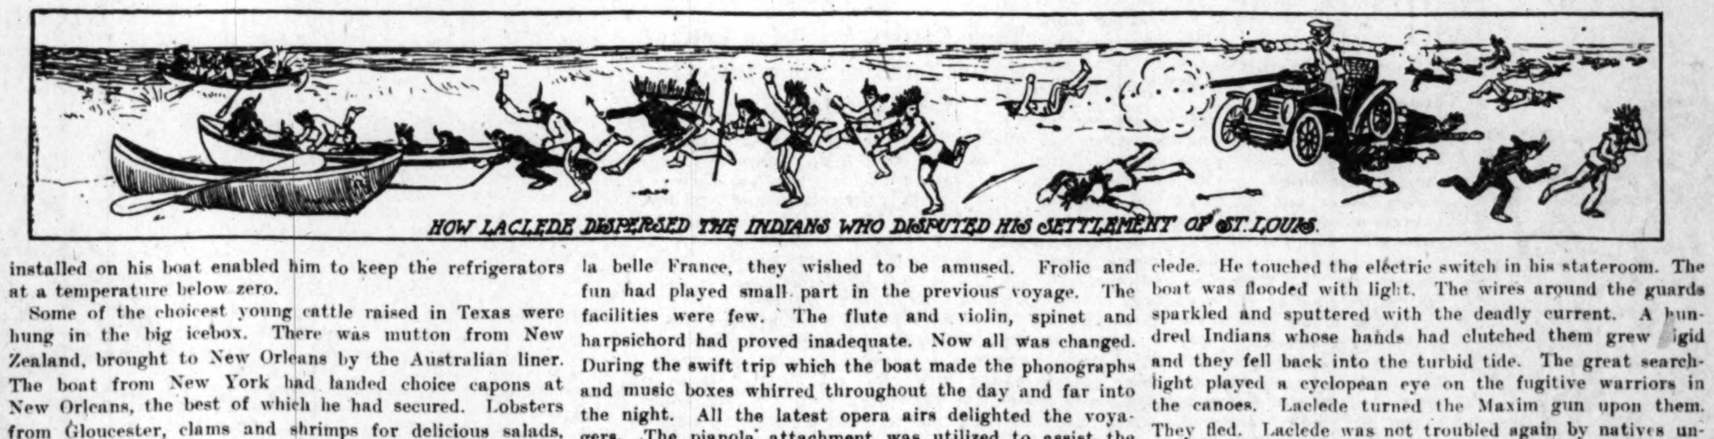
In the French and English wars which Laclede had been engaged in before he made his first voyage, he had observed that the soldiers' musketoons were quite useless when the Indians were intrenched behind palisades. The besiegers could only shoot in a direct line, while the Indians could shoot their arrows in the air and have them fall on the enemy. Laclede now took a lesson from the Japanese and equipped his ship with grenades of the same patterns used at Port Arthur. A recent invention which the United States government was testing—the rocket bomb—was included in his purchases. This was a 16-pound shell loaded with shrapnel, which could be touched off and fired from a stick, like an ordinary rocket. It would soar in the air and describe an arc, coming down in the center of an Indian fort and exploding on contact with water or ground.

Some fear had been felt by members of the first expedition because they apprehended that the hostile Indians might attack the batteau in their canoes while it was anchored in midstream. Laclede quelled the apprehension this time by wrapping wire netting about the guards of the steamboat. The wire was connected with the dynamo which supplied electric light to the boat. At night a heavy current of electricity was turned on and the explorers slept in security.

The gossip of Versailles, even two years old, news of battles fought in Canada or on the Continent, the victories of Marlborough, achieved a year before the sailing ships could carry the tidings to the new world, had satisfied the curiosity of the first voyagers. But this was a different age. Laclede's crew now insisted on knowing the latest details of the war with Russia. A naval battle which would decide the fate of an empire was imminent. The Jap advance on Vladivostok was about to begin.

Only by promising his men that he would keep them in touch with the world did Laclede now secure a crew. He carried on the boat a complete wireless telegraph system and was a subscriber to the circuit arranged by Dr. De Forrest. The tall mast which was braced by wires running to the extremities of the boat, was capped with as fine a sending and receiving instrument as the wireless company could turn out. So during their modern voyage up the Mississippi the argonauts were in constant communication with New Orleans and the World. When the hostile fleets clashed in Oriental waters, they knew the result before the cannon cooled. To men accustomed to reading newspapers, the hardship of a voyage without their daily was great. The first Sunday out the crew was restless, because they were without the news. Laclede was a resourceful man. With the help of his chief electrician he rigged up his largest phonograph with a number of telephone ear trumpets, all connected to the horn socket of the instrument. Slipping a long fresh wax cylinder into the phonograph, Laclede placed the tracing needle on the fresh wax and read quickly the story of Raffles and the latest adventure of Sherlock Holmes. He was not a moment too soon. The crew came to the cabin. Laclede met them with a smile. He gave each man one of the telephone attachments and turned on the phonograph. The incipient mutiny was quelled.

Laclede had subsisted on jerked buffalo meat and johnny cake during the weeks he had poled up the river some centuries agone. The diet gave him dyspepsia. Then the expertness of the company cook had been sorely tried by the very limited variety of food carried on the voyage. This time Laclede determined to properly stock his larder. Times had changed. The ice-making plant which he had installed on his boat enabled him to keep the refrigerators at a temperature below zero.



HOW LACLEDE DISPERSED THE INDIANS WHO DISPUTED HIS SETTLEMENT OF ST. LOUIS.

Some of the choicest young cattle raised in Texas were hung in the big icebox. There was mutton from New Zealand, brought to New Orleans by the Australian liner. The boat from New York had landed choice capons at New Orleans, the best of which he had secured. Lobsters from Gloucester, clams and shrimps for delicious salads, two dozen brace of canvasback ducks and terrapin from Chesapeake Bay, sugar-cured hams and any number of cans of tinned meats were stored on ice aboard the steamer.

As befitting the leading citizen of a new colony, Laclede determined to have vegetables and fruit in season. It took him more than half a year to get his garden going on his first landing. This time he planted the garden before he started, for such is modern scientific horticulture. In a sheltered apartment, a large roomy place, heated by steam and framed in with glass, near the stern of the boat, he planted tomatoes, lettuce, greens, onions, rhubarb, asparagus, strawberry slips, and in the rich loam which filled a dry goods box he had set the apple trees which were to form the nucleus of his future orchard. Bunches of green bananas were hung in this room, where they ripened in the warm, moist atmosphere. Here too were tropical plants to supply decorations for proposed social functions.

But Laclede didn't rely on the plants to supply the table with fruits and vegetables. He stocked the cold-storage room with a bountiful supply of oranges from the Spanish settlements of Florida, pineapples from the same source, bananas from Cuba. All the fruits of tropical seas were there. At least a dozen cases of cold-storage eggs were aboard to supplement the efforts of the poultry house which he carried with him. The cows on the lower deck supplied milk for the children.

Healthy as explorers are, illness will visit them. The absence of a physician had been keenly felt in the first voyage. Laclede determined to be his own doctor this time. Medical science had made such strides that he could carry with him into the wilderness most of the appliances of a modern hospital. Neatly arranged in his medical chest were scores of bottles, each labeled with the name of the drug and brief instructions as to its proper use. In compressed tabloids were remedies for nearly all the ills that the explorers might suffer. Here was the antitoxin for diphtheria and the hypodermic syringe to administer it. Here was the antitoxin for tetanus, useful if any of the party should be shot with poisoned Indian arrows; there the vaccine points, which might avert smallpox. Laclede even carried the toxin which the Pasteur experts pronounced a specific for cholera.

But illness and suffering were far from the thoughts of the explorers when they sailed. As befitted children of la belle France, they wished to be amused. Frolic and fun had played small part in the previous voyage. The facilities were few. The flute and violin, spinet and harpsichord had proved inadequate. Now all was changed. During the swift trip which the boat made the phonographs and music boxes whirred throughout the day and far into the night. All the latest opera airs delighted the voyagers. The pianola attachment was utilized to assist the small grand piano in interpreting the new songs.

Laclede darkened the boat cabin at night and threw on the screen moving pictures of home scenes, so that even the boatmen who had left their wives and children could see their life-like pictures and in imagination be with them. Thus the terrible homesickness which had afflicted the spirits of his men on the first trip was now overcome by the sagacity of Laclede.

The Indians did not attack the boat on the lower reaches of the river, but made their sortie, just as Laclede expected, when the boat had entered the territory of the hostile Natchez tribe. Opposite the landing Natchez Under the Hill the Indians mustered 300 canoes loaded with warriors and at midnight paddled out into midstream to capture that strange white house which they saw speeding up the river. The thunder of their war whoops aroused Laclede. He touched the electric switch in his stateroom. The boat was flooded with light. The wires around the guards sparkled and sputtered with the deadly current. A hundred Indians whose hands had clutched them grew rigid and they fell back into the turbid tide. The great searchlight played a cyclopean eye on the fugitive warriors in the canoes. Laclede turned the Maxim gun upon them. They fled. Laclede was not troubled again by natives until he had landed on a site that he had selected for the city he had planned.

That was a great day, the day that Laclede landed. The boat had anchored off the foot of what is now Olive street. Imagine a great bluff crowned with green trees and waving grass, with a few Indian tepees in a little clearing. The levee was not paved with stone, but the sandy shingle shone white with drifted mussel shells. The Indians gathered on the beach, their arrows on the bowstring. This would have been an anxious moment for Laclede if he had not been equipped with modern appliances. He had prayed abjectly for the friendship of the Indians on the previous landing. Now he went among them a conqueror.

A few blasts on the whistle, a bomb thrown in the air and some day fireworks let off, paralyzed with terror the Indians who had gathered on the shore to offer resistance to the landing of Laclede. He dropped a couple of rockets in behind them, fired a few shots into the water at their feet and they immediately took to the woods.

The coast was now clear for the landing of Laclede. As this was a historic occasion, Laclede decided that he himself would be the first of the party to step on shore, and that he would do it in a thoroughly up-to-date manner. Old-fashioned discoverers like Columbus used to perform the historic act of landing by stepping out of a boat and carrying a sword in one hand and a flag in the other. This time there was no need for either sword or flag.

While Laclede could easily have stepped ashore in this twentieth century, he decided to wade to dry land from a rowboat and thus to set his foot on the scene of his future glory carrying not weapons, but the instruments of modern civilization. He was dressed not in silken robes, nor in armor; he had neither greaves nor doublets nor helmet nor ostrich plume, but he wore a handsome ready-made suit of clothes, a silk hat of the latest pattern and celluloid collars and cuffs. Instead of making heroic poses he calmly smoked a cigar as he waded ashore carrying his typewriter and dress-suit case, well knowing that several snapshot cameras were turned upon him and that all attempts on his part to look great when landing at St. Louis might simply make him look ridiculous. He desired to show how a modern, up-to-date explorer acts in everyday life.

On a barge which he had towed up, the crew now came ashore bearing every necessity for the settlement. The automobile helped to pull several of the heavier pieces down the gangplank. By this time the hostile Indians had crept back and they fired a shower of arrows at the newcomers. Laclede in his 60-horsepower automobile, armed with a Maxim rapid-fire, gave chase along the beach, and when the bulk of the Indians fled in canoes, he ceased operations. They never returned.

Meanwhile, the boatmen had carried ashore the portable bungalow, which was made in sections and fitted together like a child's blockhouse. Within an hour it was erected, the first house in St. Louis. It was far more comfortable than the skin tent that Laclede lived in while his log cabin was being built two centuries before. Before evening it was furnished and Laclede sat in his Morris chair reading by an electric light, the electrician having carried a wire from the boat. The dinner had been cooked on the electric stove and the wireless message that Laclede sent to New Orleans saying "all comfortable here" was absolutely true. Before he retired he wrote on his typewriter the journal giving an account of his day's adventures. Next day Laclede, arrayed in a Prince Albert coat, light gloves and trousers, top hat and patent leather shoes—only one of the fashionable suits he had brought with him—called his crew and formally founded the new city. He named it St. Louis.

STRANGE WEDDINGS TO PAY WAGERS AND DEBTS

In Some Cases Cupid Resented the Trifling and Divorces Followed—How a Father Paid His Daughter's Passage and Founded Two Happy Homes.

MANY a man has found himself a benedict as the outcome of a wager. Only last year, as was revealed in recent law proceedings, a man who was taunted by an acquaintance with his inability to get a girl to marry him retorted by wagering $100 that he would not only find but would wed a wife within a month. He won his wager, but he paid a heavy price for his precipitation, for within twelve months he was compelled to petition for a divorce.

That Cupid will not be trifled with in this way with impunity has often been proved, notoriously in the case of the young sailor who later succeeded to a peerage, and who in a rash moment vowed that he would wed the first girl he met in the streets of a south-coast seaport. He fulfilled his vow to the letter, and the consequences of his rash step were shown to the world in the recent claim to the Poulett earldom.

A few years ago one Joseph Volk left his wife and two young daughters in his native Poland to seek his fortune in America. After he had been gone a year he learned that his wife was dead and his children were in danger of starving. In this dilemma Volk borrowed $50 from each of two fellow workmen to pay his daughters' passage across the sea to him, and on their arrival, as he was unable to repay the borrowed passage money, he offered, in order to satisfy the debts, to give one of his daughters to each lender for wife. The offer was accepted and Mary and Anne Volk, two beautiful girls, the elder of whom was but 16, went to the altar in payment of their father's debts.

Another remarkable way to the altar was disclosed by a recent marriage in London, England. Some time ago a gentleman of Hull, on the death of his wife, became entitled to an annuity of $4000 as long as he remained a widower; on remarriage the money was to go to his children by the deceased wife. In process of time the widower got into financial difficulties, and it was proposed to attach the bequest in the interest of his creditors.

There was one way, however, to save the situation; and, acting on it, the widower made a journey to London, induced an old lady—a pauper of 87—to marry him.

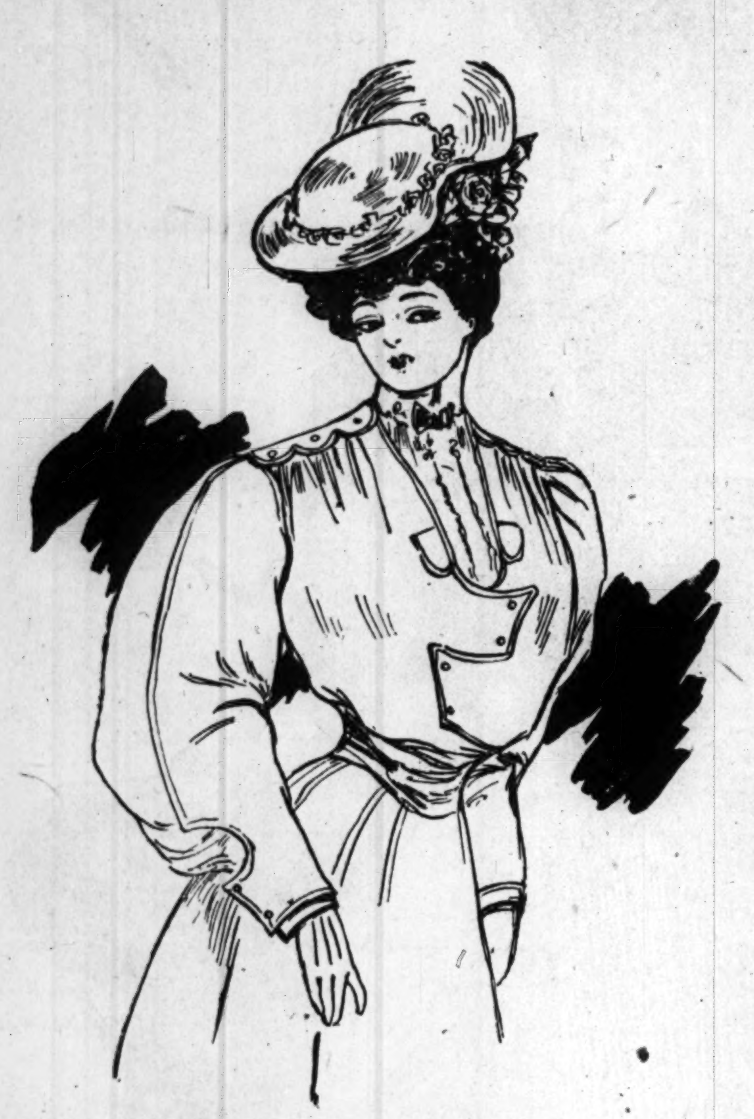
A short time ago Signor Tasino of Naples offered his hand and fortune to the lady who could best demonstrate her skill as a cooker of macaroni, his favorite delicacy. One hundred and twenty fair candidates competed, and the signor not only led the woman to the altar, but gave her a wedding present of $500.

Many a wedding has been arranged in a pure spirit of frolic, as in the case of a Mr. de Merritt and Miss Hamilton. The bride and bridegroom, with two friends, had been witnessing a ball game at Ashton, England, and when driving home it was proposed as a jest that the two should get married. "After much fun-making," the recorder of the adventure says, "the pair acted upon the suggestion and called upon Mr. Curry, the town clerk at Holderness. Mr. Curry is a justice of the peace, and before the ink was dry upon the license the couple had entered the bonds of wedlock. On the return of the party to the hotel the matter was discussed, and it developed that they had been legally married. The couple at first were dumfounded, but now are happy and will live together."

A balloon is not altogether the most comfortable place for a lady to receive an offer of marriage, as Miss Weber, a young lady of Berlin, found not long ago, to her cost. She was persuaded by Herr Schwarz, an amateur balloonist, who had long wooed her in vain, to take a trip in the air with him, an offer which she gladly and innocently accepted. No sooner, however, had the couple soared 1000 feet or so above the earth than the lover renewed his suit, and on her refusal threatened to fling himself out of the balloon. So determined did he appear to be that he climbed out of the car and was hanging by his hands ready to drop when the lady, in her horror, relented, and gave him the promise he risked so much to secure.

FASHIONS AND FABRICS FOR EARLY SUMMER; NEWEST DRESSMAKING FOR JUNE AND JULY

From Sheer Linen to Coarse Crash.



LINEN in all its forms, from sheerest handkerchief linen to coarse crash, is at the head of the fashionable summer fabrics. This design is more stylish than the regulation shirtwaist frock of linen. The blouse is cut down to show a dainty little chemisette of sheer lingerie and lace, and with slashed sleeves showing undersleeves to match the chemisette. The scalloped shoulder pieces are buttonholed with mercerized green linen thread, and the buttons are white pearl.

How to Make Yourself Appear Taller.

IF you are short and want to appear taller than you really are, learn to carry yourself well.

The woman who knows how to sit and stand correctly apparently adds to her height and impresses lookers-on with a far greater sense of dignity than a taller woman who has not mastered the secret.

Throw your chest out, keep hips and knees well back and draw your chin in. Then sway your body gently backward and forward. This is a capital exercise to improve the carriage.

Hollows in the neck may be almost concealed by a collar of lace coming well up over the shoulders, and if the black dress is cut low beneath it gives a particularly good effect. A velvet band around the throat will further help to hide imperfections and it is only by noting and counteracting little deficiencies of this kind that it is possible to make the best of one's appearance.

The condition of the skin depends almost entirely upon the care given to the general health.

The girl who is up late at night, gives no care to her diet, indulges in various stimulants, bathes but seldom and exercises less, is certain to have either a dull, muddy-looking skin or one covered with disagreeable-looking black and red spots.

One should avoid many sweets and much pastry and not allow herself to become a slave either to tea or coffee any more than she would to some vicious drug or strong stimulant. She should also remember that unless she is in good condition internally she will be anything but a pleasant object to look upon.

Miss Loie Fuller, the famous American dancer, has a fund of stories of the late P. T. Barnum. One of the best is that relating to the elephant which the great showman advertised all over the world as the sacred white elephant from Siam. Everybody flocked to see such a wonder, and Barnum netted $2,000,000. Then the elephant died. It could stand the daily whitewashing no longer!

Freakish Dress Ideas Have Disappeared

Great Variety Is Offered But the Costumes Do Not "Jump at the Eyes."

THE exaggerated and freakish ideas advocated earlier seem to have disappeared; and while there is great variety and much that is picturesque, the costumes, as a rule, do not jump at the eyes. The silhouette is graceful and not a burlesque on nature, the lines are simple and becoming, the colorings, while often unusual, are particularly harmonious and soft.

If, in many instances, there is intricate elaboration of detail, that detail is at least made to blend into a harmonious whole and only upon close scrutiny is the complex nature of the scheme evident.

The hats are eccentric. One must admit that, but the eccentricity lies in the combination of head and hat, rather than the hat itself. The unprejudiced judge who makes study of the imported models in the milliners' shops must concede that a majority of those models are exquisite in colorings and materials and coquettishly attractive in line, but he must concede, too, the fact that on the head of the average woman, the truly modish hat of this spring is not a success.

One needs masses of fluffy hair, a charming face—and youth—to wear the new hats well, and unluckily that combination is not so common as one could wish. So it is to be hoped that the rank and file of womankind will lean toward conservatism, and luckily there are many pretty hats with details that stamp them as being of this season's vintage, yet without a hint of bizarre.

Walking hats of fine straw trimmed in broad scarfs of plaited straw, supple as ribbon and combining many lovely shades, are among the French hats, and are distinctly practical, as well as pretty. One in a medium shade of bronze green horsehair was swathed in such a band, woven of lustrous straw braid in many shades of bronze green and yellow, and two bronze green wings tipped with soft yellow were set upon the left side of the turban.

The greens are prominent both in millinery and frocks and many new shades are shown, differing only enough from the old tones, in some instances, to justify the statement that they are new. All of the bronze green tones from dark to light, the almond and willow greens, a line of elder greens, a fresh springlike tint, appropriately called printania, a warm, glowing yellow moss green, which is at times charming in its millinery uses, or sparingly used in mere relieving touches upon a white or neutral frock—all these are fashionable, and there is a vivid Russian green, successful in Paris, though not yet taken up extensively here.

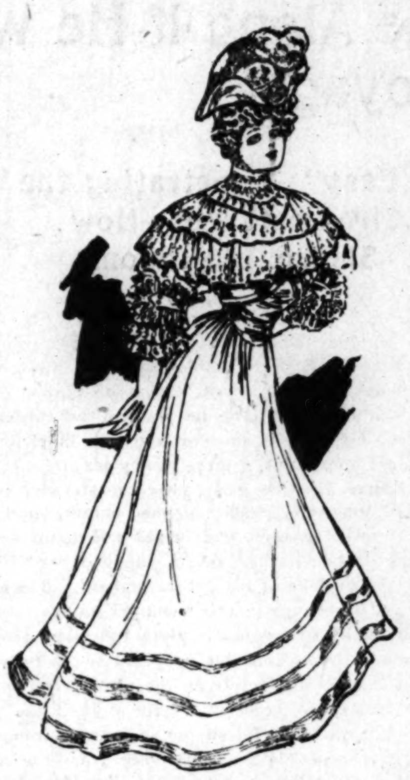
American beauties and roses in the faded shades are the favorites, but roses of the tea rose coloring and all the creamy pinkish yellows are much fancied, and all the pink roses are liked for banking up the backs of the tiptilted hats. Pansies are seen more often than they have been in years, and are much more artistically made than ever before.

An especially chic model hat shown by a celebrated milliner was a roll brim sailor tilted forward, as are all such sailors this year. The high bandeau at the back was covered by a soft full bow of light blue velvet ribbon.

Around the low broad crown was a wreath of great white pansies touched with lavender and yellow at their hearts, and, between the pansies were posed tiny, gleaming, purple humming birds. The birds were of the milliner-made variety and fashioned very probably from dyed chicken feathers, so the hat was not calculated to make the Audubon Society rage like the heathen, and the effect was indescribably dainty and artistic.

The salmon or Pompadour pinks, peach pink, melon pink, all the shades of rose, including dried rose leaf and old rose tones, the magenta pinks and reds, the old gold, apricot and banana yellows, with the orange tones shading from mandarin to brown, the bluet blues and a very popular medium shade of blue called saxe, the beige and straw colorings, dove grays—there one has a list of the colorings most exploited this season, but one sees many shades not on this list.

Stylish Pongee Gown.



THE handsome silks, including pongee, in all its variations, are in high favor as the season advances, and the smoother surface pongees are regaining the prestige they lost last year. Our sketch was made from a model in natural color pongee and as shown, the full skirt is in small tucks over the hips. The bottom is trimmed with three bands of almond-green velvet ribbon in graduated widths. On the bodice a yoke, pointed in front, is made of all-over lace; a circular collar of two deep ruffles of lace is joined to same by a band of velvet ribbon matching that used on skirt and which also edges the collar. A jacket effect is given by plaited pieces of the material drawn from each side to bust line over a vest of pongee and held in place by a bow of velvet ribbon. An odd but artistic sleeve is made with a puff of pongee from shoulder to elbow and finished there with two flounces of lace and a strap band of material edged with lace.

Secret Drawers in Sideboards

THE woman in a fashionable furniture store looked the new sideboard all over, but seemed so indifferent that the salesman despaired of a sale. He was preparing to accept the usual "will call again" when an idea occurred to him. Opening a cabinet on the side intended for cruet bottles, he touched a spring. To the astonished customer was revealed a secret drawer, large enough to hold a dozen letters or so, a bankbook and a few jewels. The salesman closed the drawer.

"Now you open it," he said to the customer.

She tried in vain. She asked the salesman to show her how. He said he would with pleasure if she bought the sideboard, otherwise it was against the rules of the house.

"This is an evolution of the secret drawers in writing desks," he said to an onlooker. "It is not up to date now to put secret compartments in desks. That is the first place anybody looking for hidden documents is sure to look. But they never think of searching in a folding bed or a dining room sideboard. It is the women who run most strongly to this freak feature in furniture. A man has his fireproof deposit vault or a safe place in his office for any papers he wants to keep out of sight. A women seldom has anything but a desk at home, which is as available to everybody else in the family as it is to her. She never knows what moment her cherished little secrets may be uncovered and laughed at. With such a compartment as the one in that sideboard she need never worry."

A Greenland whale is equal in weight to eighty-eight elephants or 440 bears.

Men Are Poor Shoppers.

THOSE poor men! Perhaps they can do wonderful things in a business way; perhaps they're saving their mighty masculine intellects for problems of city and state; and, most important of all, the necessary getting of the proper wherewithal to supply our needs. But, except for these things, it would seem that their brains are very much overrated.

Drag one of them—unwilling, of course, because ignorant—out with you shopping. Can he see the possibilities in a yard of stuff that makes a woman with half an imagination clasp her hands and empty her purse in ecstacy? Not a bit of it. He simply looks blankly at it when told to admire it, and finally falters out, in a bewildered sort of way, "Why, I can't tell anything until it's made up."

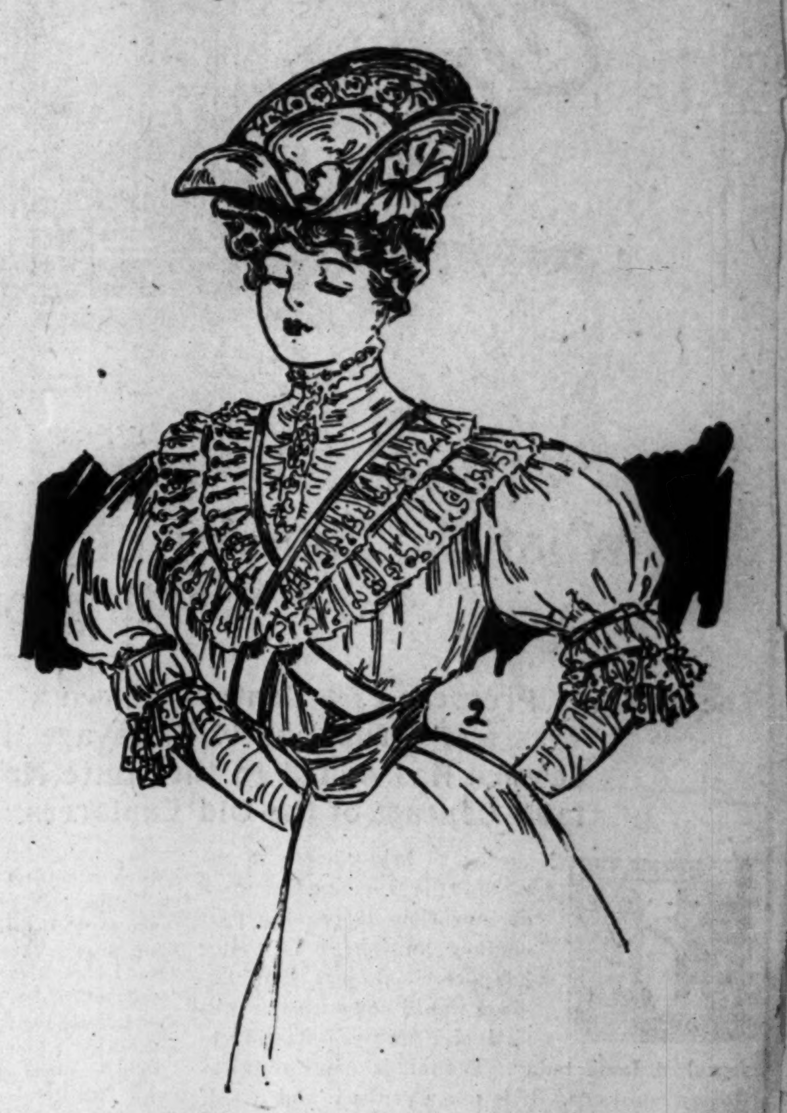
Take a woman with you to look at dress goods. On the counter will be lying dull suitings, and perhaps delicate pastel check voiles, and down a little further a bewildering conglomeration of every sort of cotton and linen stuff imaginable.

In less time than it takes to tell about it she has grasped the possibilities of making up that somber blue into the most stunning kind of a suit, and livening it up with the wide, flat, black silk braid that is considered so good in Paris this spring.

Now, your mere man would say, "Liven it up with black? That's an impossibility," which is another evidence of his density upon fashion questions. For nothing will bring the clear tone of the blue out in quite so definite a way.

New Zealand's frozen meat trade with Great Britain now equals about 15,000 sheep a day.

Dainty White Batiste Frock.



THE wash materials are unusually attractive this year and the multitude of diaphanous stuffs not intended for tubbing is a triumph for the designers and manufacturers. Batiste is a special favorite, and the above illustration pictures a dainty white frock in this material, lined with a light banana yellow, or rather worn over a slip of banana yellow, dullfinish silk, veiled in silk mousseline of the same shade. The bodice has a surplice front made of two embroidered batiste ruffles, and a band of embroidered insertion runs from neck to bust line. The elbow sleeves are finished with a double flounce matching those on waist. With this costume is worn a deep girdle in messaline ribbon of three shades of yellow and three shades of light green, toning in harmoniously with the yellows.

Newspaper Run by Women Only.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., is noted for many things, but of late its principal attraction is a newspaper run exclusively by women. The paper has women editors, a woman business manager, women compositors and "newsgirls" selling it upon the street. It is called the Cambridge Press and is an eight-page weekly. At first Cambridge people looked upon it as a joke, but soon the sentiment turned. Women as news gatherers did not prove as dismal a failure as many predicted, and with each issue the Press entertained and sparkled more and more.

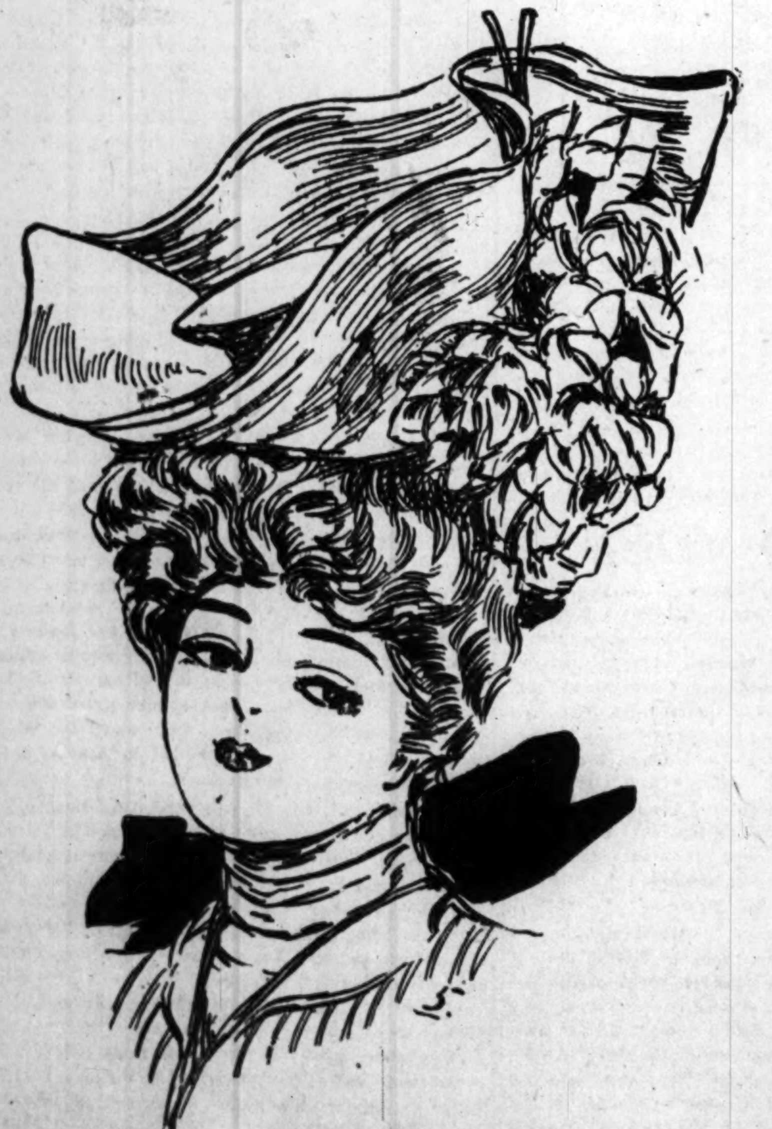
The beginning of the newspaper woman movement in Cambridge probably came from the Cantabrigia Club, a large and enterprising organization, which has for its purpose the enlightenment and advancement of the sex. It was the support of this Club that carried the Press through the trying period of its first existence. The Press is issued every Wednesday. The paper is devoted to local news. "Scar headings" stretch from column to column just as in the big dailies, and, together with well selected photographs, produce a impression of journalistic enterprise.

The Cambridge Woman's Christian T[illegible]perance Union is, perhaps, given mo[illegible] prominence than it would be in a[illegible] nary newspaper, but this does n[illegible] that politics or sensations are [illegible] the contrary, the Press is in [illegible] with the city hall, and as to n[illegible] women reporters certainly have [illegible] nose for that.

Mary and Rose Rinner, two servant girls of Vienna, have been left house property worth $60,000 by their late mistress.

New South Wales is just two and a half times the size of the British Isles. Queensland is equal to three times the German Empire and Belgium put together.

Of Lavender Chip and Wistaria.



MOST attractive was the model from which our sketch was taken. The hat was a chip, in a delicate lavender shade, with velvet ribbon in self tone trimming the crown, and two huge bunches of wistaria, blending from white to deep lavender, artistically arranged at back.

Crystal Ware Is Replacing China.

Table Casters Are Being Revived, One for Each Diner Instead of One for All.

THE cool freshness of crystal as a substitute for china is becoming more and more widely appreciated with each season that passes, and just now there are developments warranting a special interest.

It is not only that novelties are out by the dozen and that a complete change has been rung in upon some time-honored pieces, but shapes are becoming steadily more classic and satisfying and complete outfits of table glass are now within reach of all.

The little vases and long-stemmed compotiers for holding bonbons and other side dishes were but an advance note of changes to occur in this decorative feature.

They are appearing now in legions of shapes, many of them differing radically. The only point on which all seem agreed is that no hors d'oeuvre dish shall be flat upon the table. However horizontal its plane, it must have little feet elevating it from the cloth.

The tall holders with a single shaft and a flare resembling that of a champagne glass are extremely popular, but so are others in the shape of diminutive fruit dishes with ring foot. These are sometimes made with round shallow bowls and again the top is perfectly flat without bowl or rim of any kind. A tiny cake dish, in fact.

A great deal of time has apparently been devoted to this table piece, as the tricks seen in it are infinitely varied.

Then the glass for serving grape fruit or fruit salpicons or macedoine. Here, too, there is a range of ideas varying from a dainty little bowl set elevated from the table by three short feet to the tall goblet, which of itself is protean in the extreme.

Perhaps the smartest is the goblet having the shaft cut to match the decoration of the bowl. Goblets in plain glass are decorated in gilt, or in enamel toned down and softened by a new process. The way in which these huge glasses are filled with shaved ice in which is embedded the inner piece or bowl containing the fruit is now generally familiar.

One innovation which will appeal to girls is a grape fruit set of this kind in plain glass ornamented with gilt. In one side about half an inch apart, are two narrow slits through which a ribbon can be run to tie in a bow on the outside.

The table caster is being revived, but it as a wee accessory for each individual cover, and not the large stand for the center of the table. These little casters contain bottles for pepper and salt and a vinegar cruet. Other small ones have a tiny bottle at either side of the stand, with a little hollow dish for salt suspended between them. They are very cunning and give an altogether modern air to a table.

"Powder Paper" in Use.

A CONVENIENT and dainty toilet novelty is called "Papier Poudre." It is in the shape of a little book, small enough to be carried in the purse or card case. You tear out a leaf, pass the powder side over your face, and lo, the same result is achieved as if you had powdered your face with puff or rag, no powder is strewn about over the clothes, etc., and the tiny paper can be crumpled up and tossed aside.

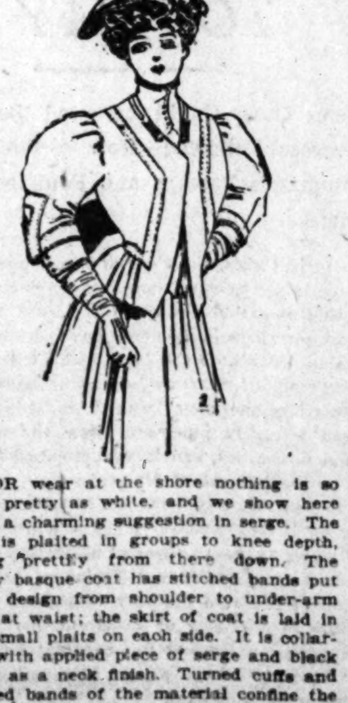
Waterloo, Io., has a church for which one immense glacial boulder furnished practically all the material. The huge stone before being blasted was 28 feet high, 30 feet wide, and 20 feet thick. It was estimated to weigh 5,125,000 pounds.

What is believed to be the oldest European painting in existence has been found in Crete by the Italian Archeological Mission. It is on a sarcophagus, and is supposed to date back 2500 years B. C.

The wedding dress worn by the Sultan of Turkey's daughter, who was recently married to Abdurrahman Pasha, cost $46,000. It was embroidered with pearls by the palace dressmakers, who were guarded during their work by an officer and two soldiers.

The jewels worn at the last royal court, Buckingham Palace, are estimated by an expert to have represented a sum of $60,000,000.

Ideal Seashore Costume.



FOR wear at the shore nothing is so pretty as white, and we show here a charming suggestion in serge. The skirt is plaited in groups to knee depth, flaring prettily from there down. The jaunty basque coat has stitched bands put on in design from shoulder to under-arm seam at waist; the skirt of coat is laid in four small plaits on each side. It is collarless, with applied piece of serge and black velvet as a neck finish. Turned cuffs and stitched bands of the material confine the fulness of short sleeves.

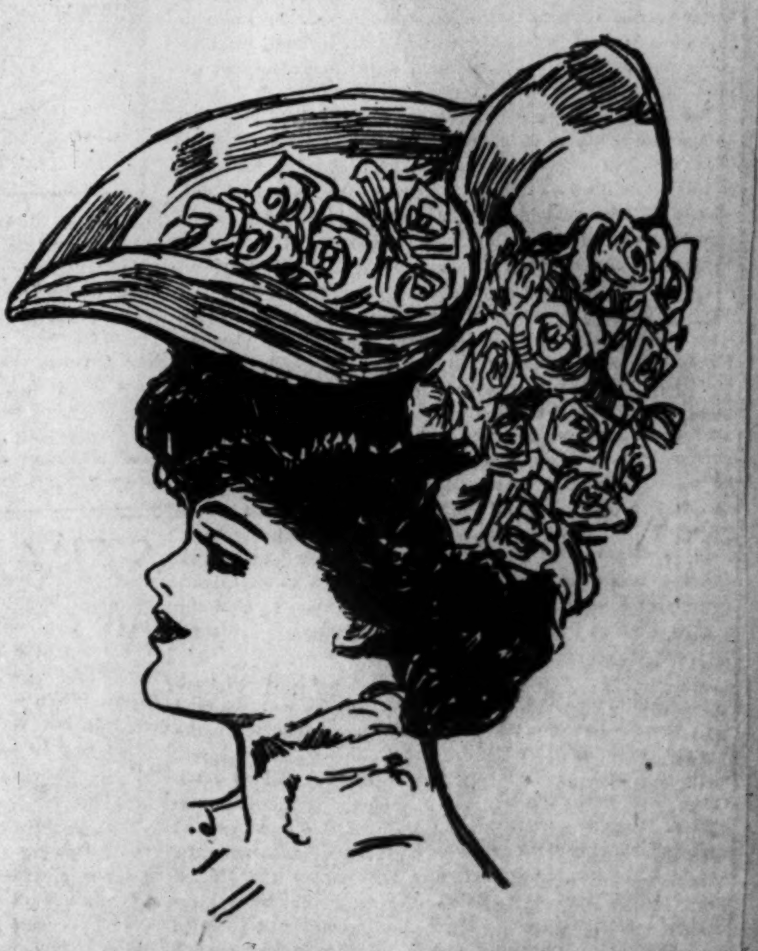
For Eldest Brother's Wife.

FASHION has decreed that the wife of the eldest brother shall be allowed to use the family name without any prefix, while the wives of those who have entered the world later must add their husband's Christian names to the family name. For instance, Mrs. Nicholas Fish has on her card only Mrs. Fish, while on the card of the younger brother is Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. This, of course, could only be the case where the mother of the men had died or married again.

The wife of Jeremiah Barber, a New York constable, walked into the police station and handed him a letter, wherein it was stated that his uncle, James Elgar of Oakland, Cal., had recently died and left him the bulk of his fortune, valued at $300,000. Barber was still trying to realize his good fortune when his wife returned in a cab, bearing a cablegram summoning him to Ramsgate (England) to claim the sum of $100,000, which another uncle, Thomas Elgar, recently had bequeathed him. Barber says he will probably remain on the police force after getting the money.

A curious bequest, known as "marriage money," is attached to the parish of St. Cyrus, in Scotland. Under the will of a parishioner the minister has to divide the interest of a sum of money between "the oldest, the youngest, the tallest and the shortest" ladies respectively who happen to be married by him during the year.

Model Becoming to Any Face.



THE above model has won first place among the new millinery conceits as one becoming to most faces. In black chip, with a band of white around brim, and American Beauty roses on top and at back, the effect is strikingly beautiful.

The German Emperor possesses 150 full military and naval uniforms, with all their appendages—swords, straps, belts, sashes, caps, hats, helmets and shakos.

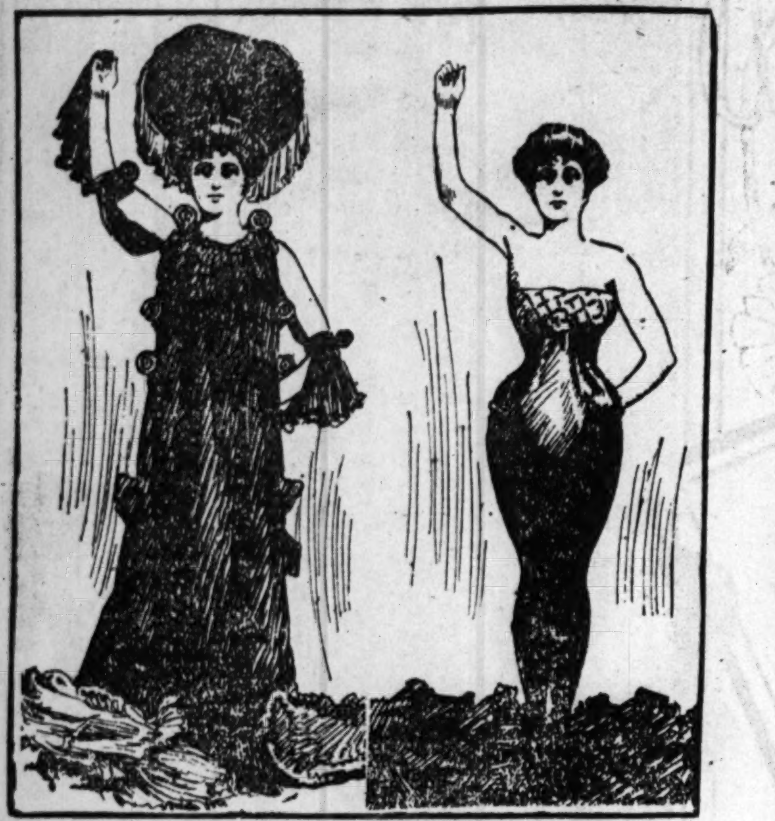
NEW AND STRANGE THINGS IN AND ABOUT ST. LOUIS

Shooting Off a Woman's Wraps.



ST. LOUIS is becoming used to its "loop the loop" and during the Fair has seen the "leap the gap." Jaded Europe, however, has devised many new sensational exhibitions since these passed on the public taste. One of the latest is shooting off a woman's hat and cloak—a "turn" at the Lyceum Theater in London, England. One of the newest performers in Sir Henry Irving's old theater is an expert revolver shot, who, hitting the little spots, detaches the fastenings of the hat and cloak, which fall to the ground.

The targets are about the size of a dollar and the marksman is compelled to shoot so close to the lady that a variation of an inch in his aim would mean death or serious injury to her.

Mrs. Celia Wallace of Chicago possesses the only black diamond necklace in the world. She spent 15 years in collecting the stones, which are enormously valuable. These gems are interset with white diamonds, for one of which, an Indian stone, $6000 was paid.

Edison's Valuable Memoranda.

MOST persons think a vast laboratory is the foundation for the many marvels which inventor Thomas A. Edison has produced. They are mistaken. His most valued possession is a series of little vest-pocket notebooks made for him by a St. Louis firm. In them, as the illustration shows, he jots down ideas. No sooner does an idea stir in his nimble brain than it is jotted down.

He calls them his "notion books." In the little books, which the inventor cherishes as he does life, is the nucleus for every great invention he has made. In them are ideas for inventions which he will yet attempt to perfect, germs for no end of great accomplishments, that are now in the process of incubation. Some day when he has the time the "wizard of Menlo Park" will open his little "notion book," work out an idea and astonish the world with a marvel as great as the phonograph.

Then, too, the little "notion books" contain ideas which as yet are dreams. Even Edison, great as he is, cannot work out to perfection all the schemes the "notion books" hold. In lawsuits the books are invaluable. The inventor has proven in court prior rights to many patents by the "notion books."

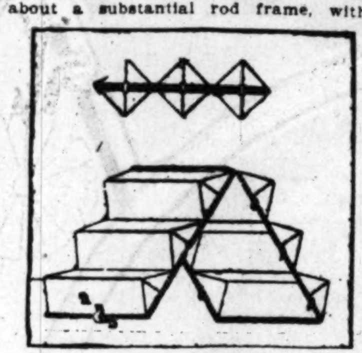
An interesting specimen in the way of sundials may be seen in the gardens of Stainboro' Castle, near Barnsley, England. The dial here is laid out on the flat garden ground, the Roman figures and lines being formed of closely cropped box borderings. One of the thickest of yew trees cut into exact shape forms the pin of the dial, which in the summer months is covered from the ground to the apex with a thick growth of leaves, and stands about 12 feet high. In spite of the fact that this unique sundial has been growing for nearly 200 years, it is still in excellent condition, and, moreover, compares favorably with those of modern construction so far as its timekeeping propensities are concerned.

An inventor has hit upon a method of putting what are practically stone soles on boots and shoes. He mixes a waterproof glue with a suitable quantity of clean quartz sand and spreads it over the leather soles used as a foundation. These quartz soles are said to be very flexible and practically indestructible, and to give the foot a firm hold even on the most slippery surface.

A very curious old custom is associated with interments in the cemetery of Labruck, Connemara. A box of pipes—short clays—is brought with the coffin, and a pipe with tobacco is served out to each mourner. The pipes are smoked in silence after the earth has been filled in and a mound of stones raised above the grass, the ashes are solemnly knocked out on the top, and the pipes broken or left behind.

Folding Bread Pans.

A NEW mould for baking bread has been introduced at a big St. Louis bakery. The pan folds upon the loaf and surrounds it entirely. The claim of superiority is made for the pan that the loaf is entirely exposed on all sides to the heat. All the sections are made of a single piece of metal, stamped or folded, about a substantial rod frame, without seaming, soldering or riveting, forming a steam, air and water tight pan. The new pan suggests the multiple baking pans that have been brought out for round loaves. Most, if not all, of these have continuous end flanges which it is claimed prevent the circulation of heat back and forth between the different sections, which circulation is very desirable in order to insure uniform baking.



Despite the square shape of the loaves produced by the pan, there is no difficulty in removing them without breaking the crust, as the pan cover constitutes just one-half the section of each loaf.

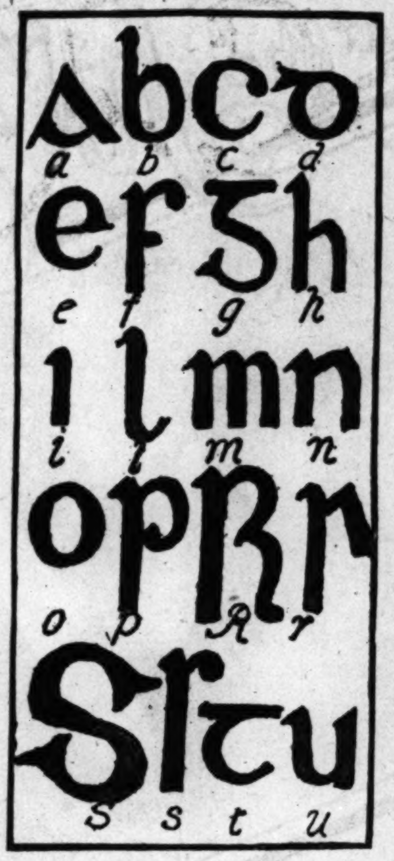
Germany is ahead in novelties of a charitable nature. In the town of Haschmann prizes are offered yearly for the men who will marry the ugliest and most crippled woman over forty years who have been jilted at least twice. The money was left by a big financier, who, realizing that beauty is an attraction hard to overcome, made a provision in his will that out of the income of the fund not less than $80 shall go with the ugliest girl in any year, and the cripple shall receive $60. The poor women over forty who have been jilted by a lover receive, when the funds permit, $50 each, but the trustee can vary this amount, and, at his own discretion, offer a larger prize to someone who will marry an unusually ugly girl, or one to whom Nature has been specially unkind.

In South Africa a plant of the genus Mesembryanthemum, growing on stony ground, so closely resembles a pebble that it has been picked up in mistake for a stone. Another species of the same plant growing on the hills round the Karru produces two leaves about as large as duck's eggs, having a surface resembling weathered stone of a brownish gray color, tinged with green. These plants look like stones, but for a short time they put forth bright yellow flowers. Still another species of the same plant resembles the quartz pebbles among which it grows.

The thoroughfare which can boast the shortest name of any in London is D Mews, in the locality of Regent's Park. It is the only surviving "alphabet" street—i. e., streets whose names were simply a letter of the alphabet. Some years ago nearly every letter in the alphabet gave its name to a thoroughfare, but D Mews is the only one which has not had its name lengthened.

The cost of the war to Russia has been practically $7,500,000 per week since hostilities began.

Gaelic Alphabet.



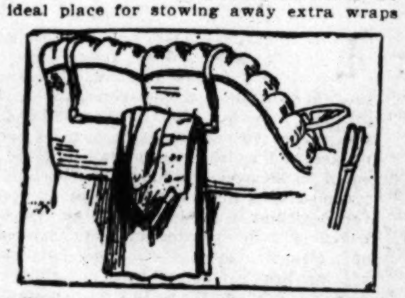
A NUMBER of Irishmen in St. Louis have enlisted in the crusade to compel the English postal authorities to familiarize themselves with the Gaelic language in order to deliver promptly letters addressed in that tongue. They are sending out to Ireland letters addressed in that language.

The language is written in characters closely resembling Sanscrit. There was a statute, known as the Kilkenny law, passed about 200 years ago, forbidding the use of Gaelic that is considered obsolete.

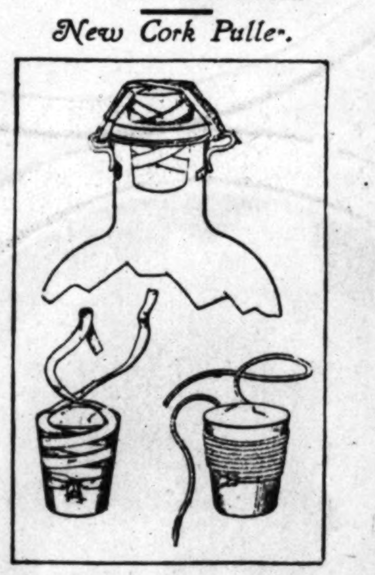
The Gaelic Society of New York is behind the crusade. The characters of the language are here shown. The capital letters are all the same, except "R" and "S," the equivalents of which are given.

Clothes Rack for Autos.

A ST. LOUIS automobilist has contrived a clothes rack for his automobile. It is placed behind the front seats of the car and furnishes an ideal place for stowing away extra wraps and coats without danger of creasing or rumpling and yet without taking up any of the limited room for passengers. Three pieces of polished brass rods are so fastened together as to make three sides of a square. The free ends are then curved so as to fit over the back of the seat.



New Cork Puller.



ST. LOUIS brewers have been offered, by an ingenious Baltimorean, a combined bottle stopper and extractor. Permanently attached to the cork is a strip of tape, braid or similar material, which is wound in opposite directions around the body of the cork, the ends extending above the top of the cork to form terminal handles. By winding the tape as described the stopper may readily be removed from the bottle by exerting a slight pull on either end of the tape, thereby imparting a twisting or rotary motion to the stopper, so that it can be quickly extracted without spilling or splashing the contents of the bottle.

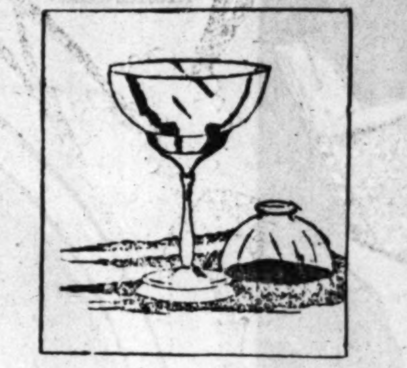
These free ends of the tape may be attached to an anchor consisting of a wire collar around the bottle neck, thus producing a satisfactory sealing arrangement. When the ends of the tape or braid, where they cross the stopper, are covered with wax, tinfoil or some adhesive substance, an attractive package is formed, which may be readily opened without the use of any tool.

Belgium, where public libraries are almost unknown, has 190,000 public houses. That means one public house for 36 inhabitants, or one public house for 12 men above 17 years of age, the publican included. During the last 50 years the population has increased 50 per cent. the number of public houses 258 per cent.

The metropolitan police have a collection of 70,000 sets of finger prints of criminals. It has been completely established that the thin capillary ridges on the tips of the fingers undergo no natural change of characteristic from the cradle to the grave.

Interchangeable Stands.

A ST. LOUIS china house shows a new idea in glassware, a metallic base and stem with interchangeable cups or bowls of different sizes and shapes, to conform to the necessities of the occasion. The bases and stems may be made of glass, but as the device is intended primarily for drinking glasses, the more durable metal supports are preferable.



Each interchangeable bowl is provided at its bottom with a depending necked projection adapted to engage with spring fingers on the base. Such a device economizes the quantity of glassware that has to be provided and yet lends itself readily to much desired changes in capacity.

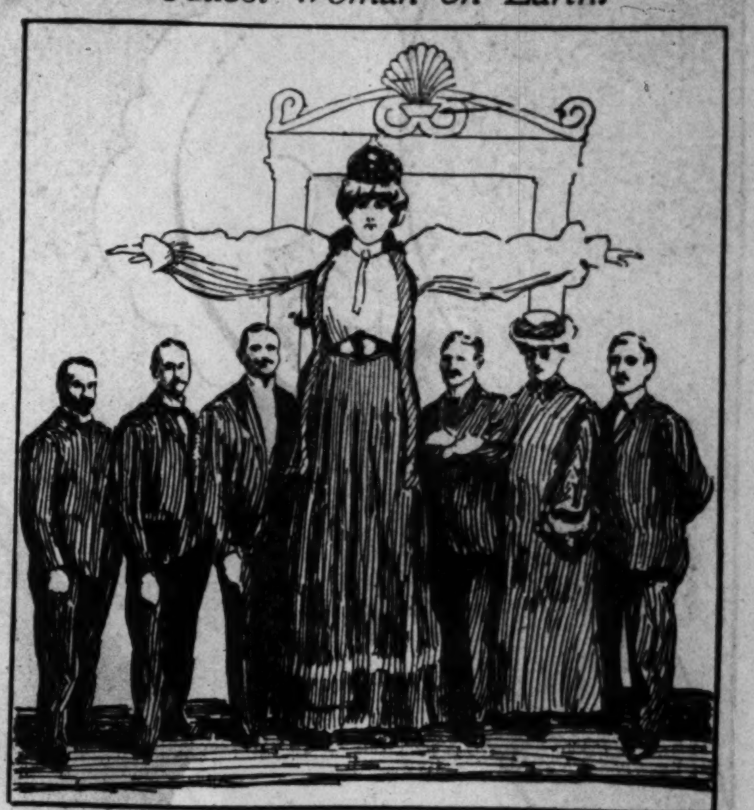
The popular Queen of the Hellenes dispenses more of what may be described as "official kisses" than anyone on earth. Every lady presented to her with whom she is on intimate terms she kisses on the cheek; others who have not the honor of knowing her well she kisses on the forehead.

Like other members of the Royal Family the Duke and Duchess of Fife are now motorists, but in the early days of bicycles they were also devoted to that form of sport. When first they bought their machines a man was brought down from a London riding-school to give the Duchess lessons, and, not being accustomed to the honor, held her rather gingerly. The Duke, who was watching, called out to him after a while: "Hold her tighter, man; never mind her Royalty; keep good hold of her. Even Royalty gets hurt if it falls." The man obeyed, with the result that within three days it was the Duchess who was holding the Duke up along the country lanes around East Sheen.

Today M. Rodin, the famous French sculptor, enjoys world-wide fame, but the struggle was hard before recognition came to him. As his struggles did not sour him so success has not spoilt him, and among his friends the man is not less beloved than the artist is admired by the world. Rodin has a magnificent studio in Paris, and here he welcomes all and sundry who choose to call on him, after a manner recalling the similar practice of the late G. F. Watts. Young and struggling students in particular are always sure of a cordial welcome.

The most common form of color blindness is an inability to distinguish red. Last year thirty-four officers and would-be officers of the British Mercantile Marine failed on their color test, twenty-three being red blind and the remainder unable to distinguish green. The 4600 candidates for certificates were also submitted to the form vision tests, and twenty-two of them failed to distinguish the form of the object submitted.

Tallest Woman on Earth.



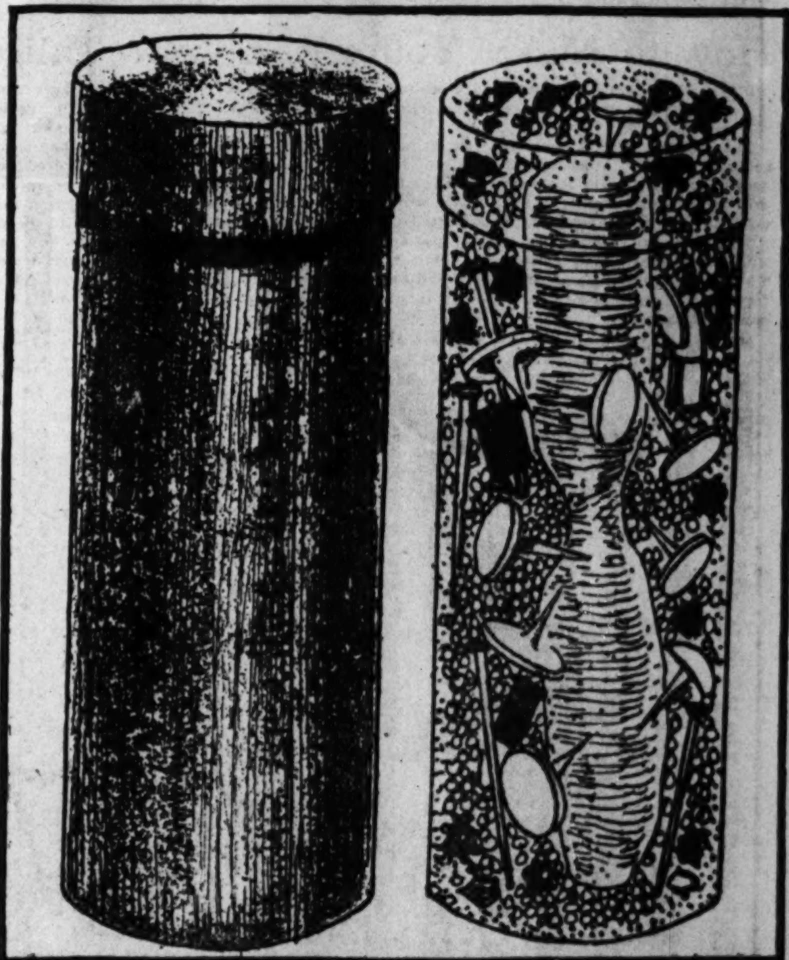
ST. LOUISANS have heard before of the Russian giant, over nine feet tall, who is now exhibiting in London. Finland offers to the world the tallest woman. She is Rosa Wedsted, aged 24, native of a village near Helsingfors. She has already attained the respectable height of 7 feet 2 inches and is still growing.

Neither her parents nor any of her four sisters and brothers are above the average height, and until her sixth year no intimation was given that she would exceed the stature of the normal human being. From that year she made rapid progress, and by the time she had reached her fourteenth year she had attained to the astonishing height of 5 feet 7 inches. Since then she has been mounting upward slowly, having in the last 10 years added about 1 foot 7 inches, with undiminished tendency skyward. The peculiarity concerning her growth seems to be limited almost exclusively to her lower limbs. She possesses an extraordinary length of leg, while the rest of her body and arms seem to have extended but mildly in comparison.

Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is not only a first-rate sculptor, but is extremely accomplished with the brush. She is probably the only royal personage who has ever painted a sign for an inn. The sign in question is to be seen hanging from a hostelry on the Duke's estate in Scotland.

A new and handsome pulpit in South Stainley Church, England, to the memory of the late Canon Bittlestone, was carved by ladies of the parish.

Bomb Used in Russian Riots.



THERE has been received in St. Louis a photograph of the bomb found near the residence of Prince Troudotzkal, military attache of the Russian embassy in Paris. The bomb was examined by X-rays and was found to be filled with nails, buckshot, cartridges and fragments of iron. It was with a similar contrivance that Grand Duke Sergius was killed at Moscow.

The hardest wood is not ebony, but cocos. It grows in the West Indies, and is used for making flutes and similar instruments.

WILFUL MURDER

ADVENTURE NUMBER 4.

BY E. W. HORNUNG.

out into the light with bloodshot, blinking eyes, and a bloody shirt-front. "You know—you've seen—but I'll tell you if you like. I've killed a robber; that's all. I've killed a robber, a usurer, a jackal, a blackmailer, the cleverest and the cruelest villain unhung. I'm ready to hang for him. I'd kill him again!"

And he looked us fiercely in the face, a fine defiance in his dissipated eyes; his breast heaving, his jaw like a rock.

"Shall I tell you how it happened?" he went passionately on. "He's made my life a hell these weeks and months past. You may know that. A perfect hell! Well, tonight I met him in Bond street. Do you remember when I met you fellows? He wasn't 20 yards behind you; he was on your tracks, Raffles; he saw me nod to you, and stopped me and asked me who you were. He seemed as keen as knives to know. I couldn't think why, and didn't care either, for I saw my chance. I said I'd tell him all about you if he'd give me a private interview. He said he wouldn't. I said he should, and held him by the coat; by the time I let him go you were out of sight, and I waited where I was till he came back in despair. I had the whip-hand of him then. I could dictate where the interview should be, and I made him take me home with him, still swearing to tell him all about you when we'd had our talk. Well, when we got here I made him give me something to eat, putting him off and off; and about 10 o'clock I heard the gate shut. I waited a bit, and then asked him if he lived alone.

"'Not at all,' says he; 'did you not see the servant?'

"I said I'd seen her, but I thought I'd heard her go; if I was mistaken, no doubt she would come when she was called; and I yelled three times at the top of my voice. Of course there was no servant to come. I knew that, because I came to see him one night last week, and he interviewed me himself through the gate, but wouldn't open it. Well, when I had done yelling, and not a soul had come near us, he was as white as that ceiling. Then I told him we could have our chat at last; and I picked the poker out of the fender, and told him how he'd robbed me, but, by God, he shouldn't rob me any more. I gave him three minutes to write and sign a settlement of all his iniquitous claims against me, or have his brains beaten out over his own carpet. He thought a minute, and then went to his desk for pen and paper. In two seconds he was round like lightning with a revolver, and I went for him bald-headed. He fired two or three times and missed; you can find the holes if you like; but I hit him every time—my God! I was like a savage till the thing was done. And then I didn't care. I went through his desk looking for my own bills, and was coming away when you turned up. I said I didn't care, nor do I; but I was going to give myself up tonight, and shall still; so you see I sha'n't give you fellows much trouble!"

He was done; and there we stood on the landing of the lonely house, the low, thick, eager voice still racing and ringing through our ears; the dead man below, and in front of us his impenitent slayer. I knew to whom the impenitence would appeal when he had heard the story, and I was not mistaken.

"That's all rot," said Raffles, speaking, after a pause; "we sha'n't let you give yourself up."

"You sha'n't stop me! What would be the good? The woman saw me. It would only be a question of time, and I can't face the waiting to be taken. Think of it; waiting for them to touch you on the shoulder! No, no, no; I'll give myself up and get it over."

His speech was changed; he faltered, floundered. It was as though a clearer perception of his position had come with the bare idea of escape from it.

"But listen to me," urged Raffles; "we're here at our peril ourselves. We broke in like thieves to enforce redress for a grievance very like your own. But don't you see? We took out a pane—did the thing like regular burglars. Regular burglars will get the credit for all the rest!"

"You mean that I sha'n't be suspected?"

"I do."

"But I don't want to get off scot free," cried Rutter, hysterically. "I've killed him. I know that. But it was in self-defense; it wasn't murder. I must own up and take the consequences. I shall go mad if I don't!"

His hands twitched; his lips quivered; the tears were in his eyes. Raffles took him roughly by the shoulder.

"Look here, you fool! If the three of us were caught here now, do you know what those consequences would be? We should swing in a row at Newgate in six weeks' time! You talk as though we were sitting in a club; don't you know it's one o'clock in the morning, and the lights on, and a dead man down below? For God's sake, pull yourself together, and do what I tell you, or you're a dead man yourself."

"I wish I was one!" Rutter sobbed. "I wish I had his revolver to blow my own brains out. It's lying under him. O, my God, my God!"

His knees knocked together; the frenzy of reaction was at its height. We had to take him downstairs between us, and so through the front door out into the open air.

All was still outside—all but the smothered weeping of the unstrung wretch upon our hands. Raffles returned for a moment to the house; then all was dark as well. The gate opened from within; we closed it carefully behind us; and so left the starlight shining on broken glass and polished spikes, one and all as we had found them.

We escaped; no need to dwell on our escape. Our murderer seemed set upon the scaffold—drunk with his deed, he was more trouble than six men drunk with wine. Again and again we threatened to leave him to his fate, to wash our hands of him. But incredible and unmerited luck was with the three of us. Not a soul did we meet between that and Willesden; and of those who saw us later, did one think of the two young men with crooked white ties, supporting a third in a seemingly unmistakable condition, when the evening papers apprised the town of a terrible tragedy at Kensal Rise?

We walked to Maida Vale, and thence drove openly to my rooms. But I alone went upstairs; the other two proceeded to the Albany, and I saw no more of Raffles for 48 hours. He was not at his rooms when I called in the morning; he had left no word. When he reappeared the papers were full of the murder; and the man who had committed it was on the wide Atlantic, a steerage passenger from Liverpool to New York.

"There was no arguing with him," so Raffles told me; "either he must make a clean breast of it or flee the country. So I rigged him up at the studio, and we took the first train to Liverpool. Nothing would induce him to sit tight and enjoy the situation, as I should have endeavored to do in his place; and it's just as well! I went to his diggings to destroy some papers, and what do you think I found? The police in possession; there's a warrant out against him already! The idiots think that window wasn't genuine, and the warrant's out. It won't be my fault if it's ever served!"

Nor, after all these years, can I think it will be mine.

Soon after these events occurred, Raffles and I had a most remarkable adventure with a lawyer whom we met in answer to his advertisement. This will be related in next week's Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

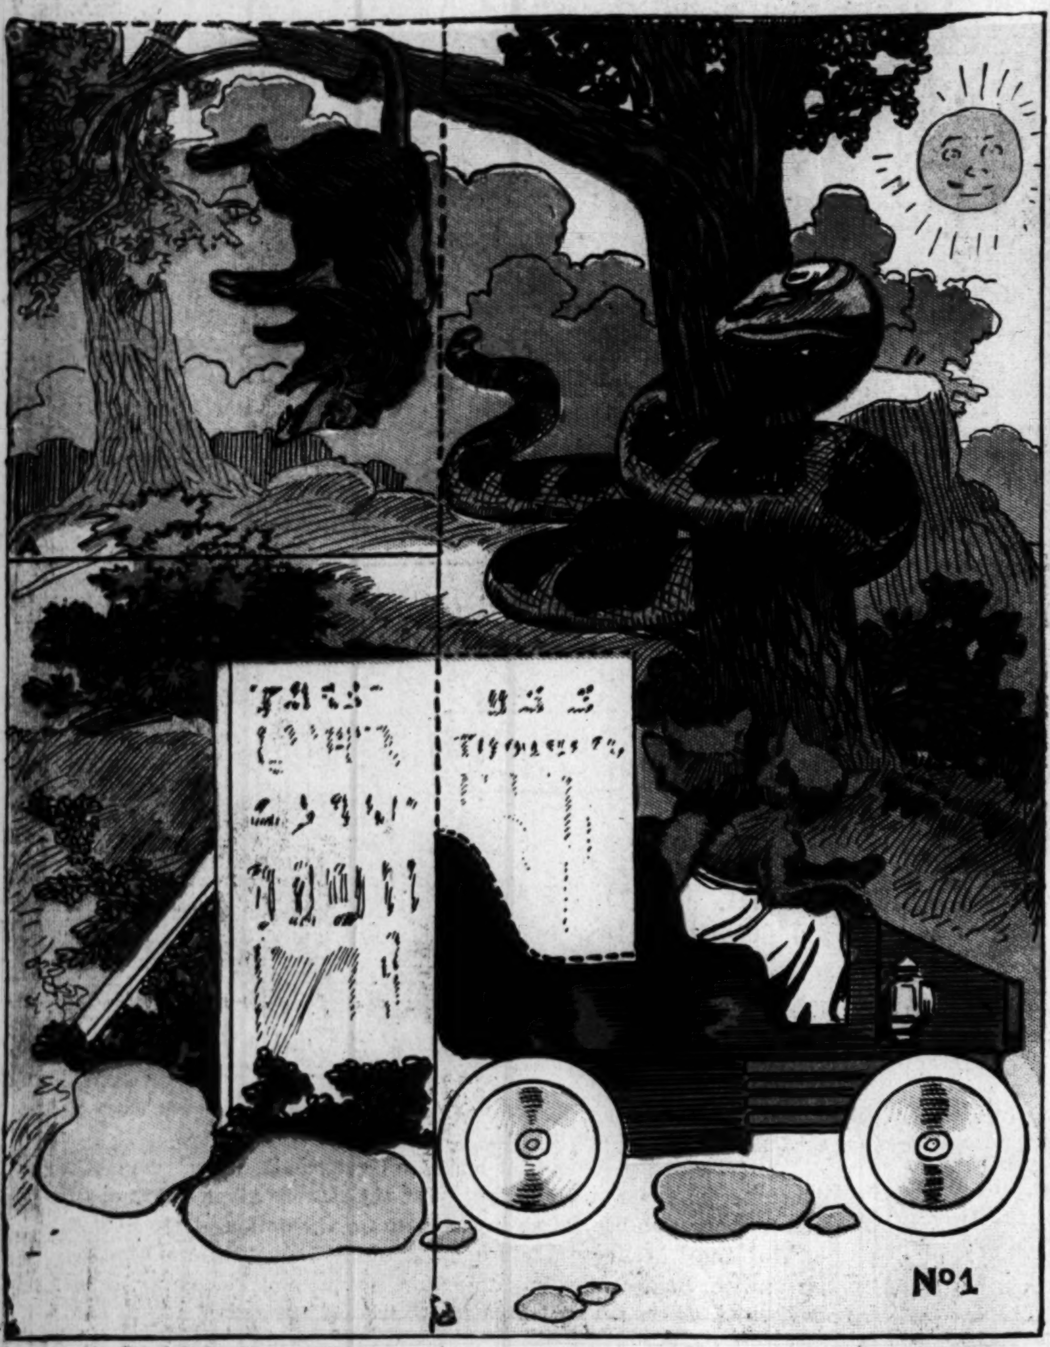
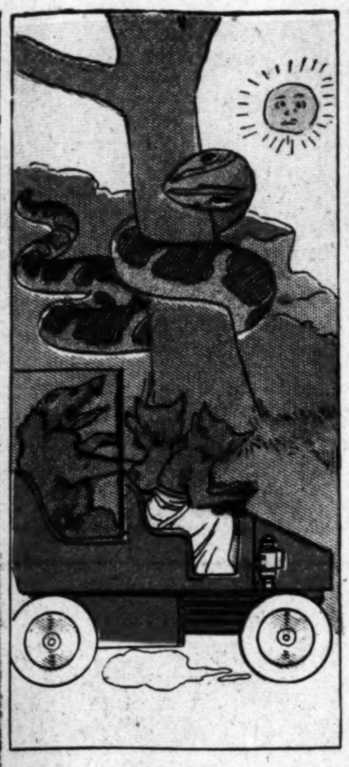
FOXY AND FUNNY=A Comic Story in a Cut-Out.

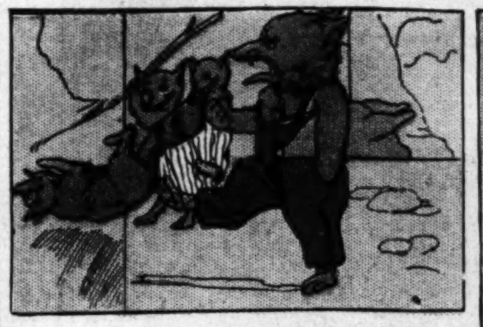
This interesting novelty combines the amusement of the comic picture story with that of the cut-out. Each one of these cut-outs, when properly cut and folded, tells a comic story. Although the stories in both cut-outs deal with the two foxes, called Funny and Foxy, each story is complete in itself. The series will be continued hereafter on this page of the Funny Side.



No1



How No. 1 will look when properly cut and folded.



How No. 2 will look when properly cut and folded.

DIRECTIONS FOR NO. 1.

It appears that the sly Mr. Possum was for once off his guard and taking a rest on the tree when a huge snake known as a python came out from among the rocks and started after him to eat him up. But, happily, the big snake was cheated out of his prey by the two quick-witted ones, Foxy and Funny, who happened to see what was going on just in the nick of time. Cut out the entire picture along the outside lines. Then cut along the dotted lines around the sign and along the dotted lines between the possum and the snake. Fold back the sign on the black line at the right of the sign. Then fold backward the upper left-hand corner on line A and fold inward the lower left-hand corner on line B.

By this means you will see how Foxy and Funny rescued the possum from the snake.

◆

DIRECTIONS FOR NO. 2.

While coming along the road with Foxy and Funny, Papa Fox kicked aside an empty whiskey bottle which had been left there by an old tramp coon. As Papa Fox did this he saw the old tramp about to steal a nice roasted chicken, which Mrs. Fox had placed out in the air to cool. Papa Fox waited for the coon to come down with the chicken.

To see what happened next, cut out the entire picture along the outside lines. Then cut along the dotted lines from X to X and from Z to Z. Cut along the dotted lines around the coon, the chicken and Papa Fox's arm. Fold backward from the centre along lines A and B, being careful not to fold back the parts of the coon and the chicken which have been cut out along the dotted lines. Then fold upper corners forward and downward on lines C C. Fold lower right-hand corner upon line D and place the chicken under Mr. Fox's arm.
